Louis Haury, Jr., is on hand constantly with plants and vegetables from his greenhouses. He is one of the most faithful attendants at the market.

All the florists are subscribing liberally to the third bond issue and have taken bonds on both the other issues.

FUNERAL WORK EXCEPTIONALLY HEAVY.

Business was excellent last week, with funeral work making up the largest percentage of the sales. There were also a number of good-sized weddings, which made business the best since Easter week. Stock, however, has been very scarce in most lines and exceedingly hard to obtain. This is due mostly to the very adverse weather conditions which existed last week, the weather being decidedly cold for this season of the year, accompanied by rain and sleet. The campaign for the Third Liberty Loan has not affected business as much as was expected, as the greater part of the demand has been for funeral work.

NOTES.

A particularly handsome window decoration in which large antirrhinums and unique baskets of sweet peas were featured was that of the Flick Floral Co. This firm had a number of good-sized weddings last week, in addition to a large quantity of funeral work.

A decided change in the weather the first part of this week increased the demand for shrubs and other out-of-door plants. All the florist firms who carry a line of shrubs and do landscape work expressed the hope that this "warm spell" had come to stay.

Herman J. Leitz, of the New Haven Floral Co., is one of the captains for the Liberty Loan teams, and is a very fine booster for Uncle Sam. This firm reports business very active, with a good supply of roses, carnations and sweet peas.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a splendid crop of lettuce, of which they have several benches planted. Their roses and Mossie orchids are also in excellent supply. They report business very brisk.

Edgar Wenninghoff reports a heavy run on funeral work, and good counter trade the latter part of the week. He is showing a good line of cut stock and pot plants.

Large quantities of bulbous plants were put on sale at the store of A. J. Lanternier & Co. last week, and they report the sale excellent.

Frank J. Knecht & Co. are sending some fine Russell, Shawyer, and Ophelia roses to this market. Business is quite brisk here.

H. K.

Rochester, N. Y.

TRADE GOOD IN ALL LINES.

Trade has been unusually active generally with a good call for weddings and the demand for shrubs, vines, etc., for spring planting is quite a factor. Pansies have arrived but the call is not great as yet. Roses have become scarce in the good grades and the same is true of carnations. Lilies and callas are a glut on the market but there is a good movement in mignonette, snapdragons, daisies, forget-me-nots and stocks. Native asparagus is again arriving and the quality is fine.

NOTES.

Local seedsmen state that plantings will be greatly curtailed this season, as practically no fruit trees are to be set out. The reason is that high prices are discouraging to the farmers, as they cannot realize a quick return on the investment.

J. B. Keller Sons had the order for an elaborate wedding this week, with decorations for both the house and the church.

H. E. Wilson's greenhouse force is rushed with outdoor orders of every description.

Harry Merritt, of Irondequoit, is cutting White Wonder carnations in quantity.

Visitors: Milton Selinka, New York; E. C. Kaelber, Washington, D. C.

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, celebrated another birthday anniversary, April 24.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—D. I. Bushnell, of D. I. Bushnell & Co., is on the sick list.

SAGINAW, MICH.—A. T. Ferrell, of A. T. Ferrell & Co., has returned from a week's trip to Oklahoma.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The rainfall for the season to April 20 was 13.43 inches; last season, 14.99 inches.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Northrup, King & Co. are erecting an additional warehouse with a capacity of 50,000 bushels.

EAST SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—The Valley Seed Co. is planning to erect a seed cleaning establishment here to cost $40,000.

It is thought field seed corn has deteriorated since early testing and that growers will be disappointed with germination and have to replant.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. C. Massie, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., returning from a sad mission at Detroit, Mich., the burial of his sister.

VEGETABLE SEED acreage in California exceeds that of 1917 and is probably the largest in the history of the state. Flower seed crops are much reduced.

AT Chicago, 85 per cent of onion set seedling is done. In the northern district, acreage is equal to that of 1917, of which 80 per cent is contracted. Northern Indiana growers are 75 per cent independent.

THE semi-annual meeting of the Western Canners' Association was held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, April 19-20. The business was mainly routine and few members of the seed trade attended this year.

THAT "these be war times" seemed to be borne in the minds of those at the Western Seedsmen's Association convention at Kansas City. The increased overhead costs, added to difficulties of transportation, discouraged all.

LANCASTER, PA.—The seed and implement establishment of Sprecher & Ganss suffered a fire loss of $200,000 recently, partially covered by insurance. They have reopened for business in a new location, with stock which was stored in another warehouse.

RICHMOND, VA.—T. W. Wood & Son suffered a fire loss of $50,000 fully covered by insurance at their establishment, April 16. The damage was principally to garden seeds, and as the firm has ample supplies to meet the emergency in other warehouses, there will be no interruption to business.

TOLEDO, O.—March clover, cash, was unchanged April 20, at $18.25, closing at the same price as on the previous day. Receipts were 69 bags, shipments, 2. Timothy was higher for September and October, old quoted at $3.67½; new, $3.70; April $3.70; September, $4.32½, and October, $4.10.

Western Seedsmen's Association.

The annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association was held at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo., April 20, with a good representative attendance. The seed corn situation was discussed and it was recommended that all bulk orders for 1919 be booked at open prices. The action of the previous meeting with regard to the resolution on packet seeds was sustained. The following were in attendance: Otto and Fred Barteldes, of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan.; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; N. J. Burt, Jr., of N. J. Burt & Co., Burlington, Ia.; John Condon, of Condon Bros., Rockford, Ill.; C. R. Chesmore, of Chesmore-Eastlake Merc. Co., St. Joseph, Mo.; G. A. Chambers, of Griswold Seed Co., Lincoln, Neb.; Adolph Cornell, of the Schisler-Cornell Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo.; A. M. Philadelphia Seed Trade.

The W. Atlee Burpee Company is still maintaining three eight-hour shifts, which division and addition to forces went into effect February 1. An enormous business has been handled since that time, which now shows signs of slackening up. Their mid-summer catalogue is almost ready for the press. This will be an elaborate book, illustrated with 16 two-color plates. Particular attention is paid to root crops and the intensive use of the garden space so as to insure three full crops. Hotbed frames to forward plants for successive crops, together with a full garden schedule, giving dates of sowing and planting as well as maturity of crops, are given several pages. It is a most complete edition, of great value to the amateur gardener.

The dull, cold weather of the past week has slowed up business somewhat in the retail stores, but this is welcomed, as it gives an opportunity to catch up and prepare for the rush sure to come later.

I. N. Simon & Son report business a little easier, with a good store demand. Prices in some lines have fallen, notably onions, which last year sold as high as $18 a bushel and are now offered at $4.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., find a very good demand, considering the weather. They expect their stock of seeds, both flower and vegetable, will, with few exceptions, hold out for the season's demands.

The Moore Seed Co. finds a very light demand for onion sets, due possibly to the fact that very good onions are offered in the stores for two cents each which last year brought 15 cents.

The H. F. Michell Co. makes a great display in front of its store with pansies, primulas, summer bulbs and vegetable plants. A very busy season is reported.

The Stokes Seed Store finds dwarf peas very scarce, the market being almost entirely bare. Onion sets are hanging fire, there seeming to be little demand.

Dutch Seed Crop Conditions.

Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, have advised their patrons that, with irregular transportation facilities to the United States, some shipments have been embarked as many as four times. In other cases, with preference given to bulbs and plants, seeds have been left behind. The Dutch government has also placed an embargo on some seeds, and of others only a small amount may be exported. Also, the culture regulations allow only a limited acreage to be devoted to seed growing. With regard to contract offers for crop of 1918-1919, everything is disorganized, with no reasonable base for prices. Under the circumstances, this firm has found it impossible to issue its regular catalogue.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO.Pea Blight Control.

The Wisconsin experiment station, Madison, calls attention to the fact that while there is no one way to prevent pea blight, experiments conducted by the station and specialists of the United States department of agriculture, show that a system of control consists in securing healthy seed, rotation of crops, use of the silo for green vines, better preparation of the seed bed, soil fertilization and good drainage. Pea seeds that are produced underneath the spots on the pods frequently carry the disease in their interior, the seat of the infection being so well protected by the seed coats that it cannot be wholly eliminated by disinfection. The disease is also carried in infected pea straw, manure from stock fed on such straw and on volunteer vines that come up in the field after harvest. It also seems to persist in the soil for several years, once it has become firmly established, unless controlled by rotation. Seed disinfection is of little value in preventing blight, and spraying, except on a very small scale, is not much better.

Scotch Court Upholds Non-Warranty.

In the case of Matthew Park, a farmer, in an action against Thomas Dow & Co., seedsmen, Ayr, Scotland, in a claim for $115 as loss and damage, it being claimed that 90 bushels of Italian grass and other varieties of seed delivered in 1916 were of inferior quality and of a different nature and class than ordered, the Scotch court of session handed down the opinion that it was impossible for seedsmen to guarantee the quality or productiveness of seeds sold by them, and that further, inasmuch as the firm had a notice to that effect printed on their invoices, the purchaser well knew that contracts for the sale of seeds were made on the basis of that notice. It was also decided that the condition of the complainant's fields was not due to the seed supplied by Dow & Co. and denied claim for any loss.—Horticultural Advertiser.

Grain Planting Earlier.

Reports from the northwest state that the soil is in fine condition and a larger wheat acreage is indicated. The barley crop will be greater in South Dakota, but smaller in North Dakota and Montana, while in Minnesota it will be about the same as last year. Oats will cover about the same ground in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana. Corn will be decreased generally in the northwest, owing to lack of good seed. Winter rye acreage is large. Flaxseed acreage in the four states will be smaller than last year.

Publicity for the Sale of Vegetables.

The vegetable growers of eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey, together with commission men and allied interests who supply the Philadelphia market, are starting a publicity campaign to boost vegetables as food products. Large billboard signs, together with newspaper ads, recipes showing tempting dishes, the first of which deals with rhubarb, later other vegetables and fruits, strawberries, etc., will be given prominence. At a meeting held April 19 at the Poor Richard Club, $15,000 was subscribed, which is to be increased to $20,000. All present were enthusiastic and quite sure of the success in the larger sales of their products through these methods.

Fertilizers.

At present, it is extremely difficult to get proper fertilizing materials. We are "up against" conditions over which we have no control, but we must do the best under the circumstances. One of the immediate remedies is to curtail operations to the extent of reducing acreage so it can be handled to advantage and plant the excess land to legumes—clover, alfalfa, soy beans, etc., as the case may be. What we mean to say is to concentrate our limited manure fertilizer, seed and labor on our best soil and thus get most for the expenditure.

Next, we can use lime. There are thousands of acres which would respond to lime much better than to anything else. Further we can drain. Productiveness can be increased by tile drainage beyond any increase possible by either manure or fertilizer in many cases.

Next, there are cases where manure has been used for years and phosphate alone is needed. Any such lands need either acid phosphate, bone meal or basic slag. Of the three, the latter two are best in most cases. Finally we have recourse to pulverized sheep manure, which with the addition of bone meal is a good producer.

We have never had satisfactory results with nitrate of soda alone. Combined with potash, it has made us money—but since potash is unobtainable, we have quit using soda. This may not hold good in other cases, but we know of many complaining just about this point. Nitrate alone is losing them money.

MARKETMAN.

Garden Instruction Free.

In the interest of increased food production, especially in home gardens, the Massachusetts Horticultural Society announces a series of practical talks and demonstrations on this subject at Horticultural hall, Boston, to continue through the season. The first meeting will be held on Thursday, April 25, at 7:30 p. m., when the subject of the preparation of the soil and fertilizers will be discussed by Wm. N. Craig, superintendent of Faulkner Farm, Brookline.

Saturday evening, April 27, Duncan Finlayson, superintendent of the Weld Garden, Jamaica Plain, and T. D. Hatfield, superintendent of the Hunnewell estate, Wellesley, will give instruction on planting seeds, with a real plot of earth for practical demonstration.

Thursday, May 2, at 8 o'clock, a public meeting, under the auspices of the United States food administration, will be held at which prominent speakers will be present to call attention to the necessity of increased food production.

All meetings will be free to the public and will afford opportunity to acquire valuable information as to the best methods of home gardening. As the season progresses, other meetings will be held of which due notice will be announced later. It is also planned to have a competent, expert gardener at Horticultural hall every day to give information and to answer questions on gardening subjects.

In connection with these meetings, there will be exhibits of gardening implements, injurious insects and methods of control, canning and drying vegetables, beneficial birds, etc.

WM. P. RICH, Sec'y.

Market Experts' Examination.

Examinations for civil service positions as scientific assistant in marketing will be held in cities in every state in the union April 24-25 by the United States civil service board. Vacancies from the bureau of markets, department of agriculture, will be filled from the list of those successful in the examination. Those securing the positions will be put on duty in Washington, D. C., or in the field.

The entrance salary ranges from $1,200 to $1,500, annually. Those showing unusual qualifications in the tests will be given higher amounts not exceeding $1,800 annually. Persons who have studied or are familiar with products of the land and their handling will be best fitted to take the tests. Further information concerning the examinations to be held in Chicago can be secured from the office of the civil service commission in the federal building.

Gardeners' Conference at Boston.

The gardeners' local conference held in Horticultural hall, Boston, April 18, under the auspices of the National Association of Gardeners, was well attended and proved of more than usual interest to those present. W. N. Craig, presiding as chairman of the meeting, after announcing the purposes of the gardeners' conference, spoke of the serious situation with which the country is confronted in its problem to provide food products, not alone for our own people, but for those of the allied nations which are engaged in the struggle for world democracy, and he outlined some of the ways in which the gardener can help, if only in a small measure, to increase the supply. Mr. Craig also referred to the serious loss New England has suffered this spring through the winter killing of evergreens, and stated that while many theories are being advanced, there is some doubt as to what is the actual cause of the damage.

Wilfred Wheeler, secretary of the Massachusetts state board of agriculture, after being introduced, referred to a trip to Washington, from which he had just returned, with rather discouraging news on the general crop supply, stating he learned France did not have enough wheat to last a month, England was little better off, while in this country the crop is only sufficient to hold out until June, and that it is imperative that France get our supply, while we must resort to substitutes for wheat. Mr. Wheeler said New England must grow greater crops to supply itself and thus relieve the strain on other territories to which she now looks as her source—that more intensive farming must be practiced so as to obtain greater yields per acre. He warned against the threatened seed shortage which this country is likely to face for the next five to 10 years, and that the termination of the war will not bring immediate relief as the United States will have to be the producer for some time to come. A general discussion followed Mr. Wheeler's address, which brought out some interesting information on crop production in New England and neighboring states.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar, who required no introduction in Horticultural hall, speaking on the future of horticulture in this country, said that it is facing a great uncertainty, owing to the seed shortage and that even now Russia, Italy, and South America are begging for anything they can get in seeds; that France has made tremendous sacrifices to share with us, even more than she could afford to spare of her seed supply the last year. Germany produces about two-thirds of the best flower seeds, but with its expert growers gone, it will take years to recover. He declared that our agricultural colleges should instruct how to grow seeds, that this industry might be increased at home. He also strongly recommended that more detailed instructions be disseminated among the amateur gardeners on how and when to plant particular seeds which would help to avoid much of the present wastefulness in that direction. Attention was also directed by Mr. Farquhar, to the difficulty of getting plants from Europe, owing to government restrictions and frequent embargoes placed on foreign nursery stock, and that on the other hand, though Holland threatens a shortage, it is believed that the Dutch bulb supply will again be plentiful, though prices higher. In the discussion that followed, it was proposed that with the tendency in this country drifting towards more natural effects in gardening, there should be a more widespread interest in the cultivation of our native plants, though it was admitted that it will take several generations before America can even attempt to compete with some of the fine sorts that reach us from the European countries.

Secretary Ebel, of the national association, was present to furnish any desired information on the activities of the organization and explained the plans to develop the service bureau. The holding of local conferences among gardeners was generally commended as being a step in the right direction towards building up the profession. There was some discussion as to what properly constitutes the functions of a gardener, some contending he should confine himself strictly to gardening, while others agreed that he must develop his scope of knowledge so that he may in a practical way be prepared when called on to supervise all the departments that compose a modern country estate, which includes the different phases of agriculture as well as horticulture. Such will be the successful men of the profession in the future, for if the gardener will not prepare himself to undertake these responsibilities, he will have to accept a subordinate position, while the farm manager will do the supervising as is already the case in some known instances. The profession of gardening has entered in the progressive stage and its followers must keep pace with the demands of the constantly changing conditions in horticulture as in all fields of endeavor.

The fuel problem caused quite a discussion, but it was the consensus of opinion that with the coal situation, shaping as it now is with the prospects most favorable to the private greenhouses being able to get a coal supply, further agitation of the subject would be unwise, at this time at least, and that the matter be left in the hands of those looking after the floricultural interests in general.

After the conclusion of the meeting, it was proposed that another conference be held in Boston some time during the summer months.

Beacon Mules Tender-Hearted.

We have held the city of Beacon, N. Y., in high esteem, one good reason being that it is the home and seat of industry of the genial and enterprising president of the American Rose Society, Benjamin Hammond. We have just received touching proof that our confidence in the integrity and large-heartedness of Beacon has not been misplaced. It came out in a trial in the supreme court at White Plains, April 6. Briefly stated, Mayor Baskin of Beacon owned a team of mules worth $850. One day a motor truck owned by Frank Yardle, of Ossining, ran into the team and killed one of the mules. Quite properly, the mayor sued for the value of the mules. In his address to the jury, James G. Meyer, counsel for Mayor Baskin, gave a pathetic recital of the condition of the surviving mule, which follows:

"The surviving mule," he said, "is heart-broken and has refused to work, either alone or with any other animal. I have made a profound study of mules and I assure this intelligent jury that there is no creature in the animal kingdom more affectionate and tender-hearted. The common belief that they are stubborn and intractable has its foundations in the hammering reiteration of tradition, but it is a pure canard."

TRADE IS FAIR.

Business is fair, although the trade is not inclined to be jubilant, and yet it might be much worse. Roses are seen of excellent quality, and with the exception of American Beauty there are enough to meet requirements. Prices range from $6 to $10 per 100, with Russell of the best grade bringing $20. Carnations have shortened and this has helped to keep prices firm. Bulbous stock of the indoor varieties is about finished. Snapdragons and stocks are fairly plentiful, and there are plenty of sweet peas, pansies and myositis. Orchids continue good.

NOTES.

The gardeners' and florists' association, at its regular meeting, April 9, was requested to forward a list of flowers representative of Canada, to be planted on the graves of the heroes buried in France. After considerable discussion it was decided to favor the maple leaf as symbolical of the Dominion and which would meet with the indorsement of a large part of the Canadians and it was also suggested that a national Memorial day should be observed on a date to be decided later.

Private Lewis J. Manton, who was reported dangerously wounded March 13, is now said to be ill, according to a message received by his father, George Manton.

J. H. Dunlop's residence at Richmond Hill has been quarantined, as several of the family have been threatened with diphtheria, but all are now reported to have recovered. Mrs. J. J. Higgins, and two children, who have also been ill, are also reported improving.

The retail florists' club has arranged to hold its annual picnic July 17, at Center Island. A good programme has been arranged.

H. G. D.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

Thursday, April 18, found a very much worried bunch of men waiting at the Pennsylvania depot at 5:30 p. m., when W. F. Therkildson did not arrive; but at 6:38 the cloud of gloom was dispelled by his appearance and H. A. Schroyer, Harry K. Rohrer, B. F. Barr, Elmer Weaver, Frank Kohr, Willis B. Girvin, J. Wade Galey and Albert M. Herr conducted him to the Elk's club and had a dinner that stretched the limits of conservation.

At 7:45 the club was called to order by President Elmer Weaver and the regular routine business transacted, part of which was to arrange for an outing. B. F. Barr kindly invited the club to picnic at his farm, and the invitation was accepted for a date to be fixed later on in July.

Mr. Therkildson then gave us a very interesting and instructive talk on seeds, seed raising and horticulture on both sides of the water, as well as very interesting things connected with his firm, the W. Atlee Burpee Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., and closed with a strong appeal for the support of the publicity work of the S. A. F. He was given

FUEL CONSUMPTION RESTRICTED ONE-HALF.

United States Fuel Administration Issues Official Order Curtailling Production But Aims To Preserve Industry.

Business Demoralization Guarded Against.

The United States fuel administration during the last few months has held several conferences with representatives of the commercial florists of the country. The florists have shown full appreciation of the problem involved in providing supplies of fuel to florists at a time when there is a shortage for war industries. It is the hope of the fuel administration that sufficient reduction in fuel consumption of the lesser essential industries can be obtained without demoralizing any of those industries which, like the florists, are highly esteemed by the public. It has been agreed that a 50 per cent curtailment in the use of fuel, which, in general, means a curtailment of greenhouse space, will permit the florists to preserve their most valued stock and keep their business organizations intact during the war.

As a result of these conferences, the United States fuel administration issued an order, April 24, governing the use of fuel by florists, both public and private, during the coming year. The order reads:

Regulation of Fuel Consumption.

1. That the term "florist" in this regulation shall be construed to include any person, firm, association, or corporation, engaged in the growing of flowers, plants or winter vegetables, but is not intended to and shall not include the growing of plants for transplantation to produce summer vegetables.

2. That the term "greenhouse" shall be construed to mean any building, private or public, in which artificial heat is used to aid in the growing of flowers, plants or winter vegetables.

3. That no florist, as defined above, shall at any of his greenhouses consume, burn, or use fuel of any description, including coal, coke, fuel oil, and natural gas, or other petroleum products, or use power derived from any such fuel, for or in connection with the growing of flowers, plants, or winter vegetables, as above defined, during the year beginning April 1, 1918, and ending March 31, 1919, to an amount in excess of 50 per cent (50%) of the average annual amount of fuel consumed at such greenhouse for or in connection with the growing of plants, flowers and winter vegetables, during the period from April 1, 1915, to April 1, 1918.

4. That whenever it appears that any particular greenhouse was not in existence on April 1, 1915, then and in such case the period during which it has been in existence prior to April 1, 1918, shall be considered and used as a basis in determining the quantity that would constitute one-half of the average annual consumption of fuel of such greenhouse.

5. That any florist, as above defined, owning and operating more than one greenhouse for the growing of plants, flowers or winter vegetables, may combine such greenhouses and use in such combined greenhouse the fuel allotted to each of such greenhouses by this regulation, provided the amount of fuel so used at such combined greenhouse shall not be in excess of one-half of the fuel consumed by all of such greenhouses when operated separately.

6. That whenever two or more florists find that a further fuel economy would result from using in one greenhouse the allotments of fuel as provided by this regulation, to two or more greenhouses, then upon application to the United States fuel administration and receiving a permit therefor, such florist may use the aggregate allotment of fuel to their respective greenhouses at one or more greenhouses operated jointly by them, provided the amount of fuel so used shall not exceed one-half of the amount consumed by all such greenhouses when operated separately.

Vegetable Plants Ruling.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—The United States fuel administration today interpreted its regulation of April 24, restricting fuel for greenhouses by ruling that the exception made in favor of greenhouses in which vegetable plants were raised for "transplantation to produce summer vegetables" applied only to greenhouses exclusively devoted to that purpose.

Coal Situation Serious.

Conditions in the coal markets are described as follows in a very recent issue of the "Coal Age":

"No change of any consequence can be noted in the coal situation this week. Shipments of anthracite show a slight improvement. Orders from domestic consumers are still piling up, and retail dealers continue to worry whether they will receive enough coal to take care of the orders now on their books. The scarcity of labor in the hard coal regions prevents the mines from working to utmost capacity and the draft is making still further inroads on the men who are left. The situation is serious. The steam coal market has tightened noticeably, and there is an urgent demand for practically all the smaller sizes.

"The bituminous situation continues to preserve its demoralizing aspect. Inquiries for soft coal are many, with deliveries inadequate. Though production for the week ended April 13 was 10,947,000 tons, an increase of nearly 18 per cent over the output of the week preceding, it must be remembered that there was a decided falling off in production for the week ended April 6. In order to avoid a coal shortage next winter, the weekly output of soft coal should be over 11,500,000 tons. This average has not been approximated any week this year.

ANTHRACITE DENIED NINETEEN STATES.

By order of the federal fuel administration 19 states have been forbidden to draw on the supplies of anthracite coal, in order to protect the supply of the middle Atlantic and New England states, which are the greatest users of anthracite.

"The states to which no anthracite may now be shipped, either directly or indirectly, are Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Montana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Washington and Wyoming."

In a circular signed by William T. Grier, secretary of the federal anthracite committee, he says:

"The committee desires to state that the situation is so grave in New England and the Middle Atlantic states, to and including the District of Columbia, that very liberal shipments must be made by all producers and distributors into this territory, even though such shipments curtail the amount of coal that producers and distributors desire to send into the west, either by rail or water.

"This condition is particularly true of the New England states, and producers and distributors must at all times, or until further advised, ship sufficient coal to tidewater loading ports promptly to load vessels that may be available for New England ports. Unnecessary delays to vessels will not be permitted. Liberal all-rail shipments to New England must be made by all producers and distributors reaching that market during such time and up to the extent that the New England gateways are open to receive coal."

Typical American and the War.

I know a young man who as a volunteer in the fighting service of the United States is now enroute to France. When he enlisted he was asked a number of questions by one who loved him. Did he realize what he was up against? "Yes," he answered, he thought he did. Had he ever thought of himself in the midst of the fighting? Quietly the answer, "Yes," he had. How did he think he would feel in the actual fighting? "Scared to death," came the answer with a smile. Why, then, he was asked, did he wish to enlist before the draft age? "Because," came the calm response, "though he hated war, there was no place where he could go and get away from it." Because "it was his job, and he felt he had to go."

What was it that appealed to this young man with such compelling force that from its beckoning call no corner of the world could shelter him? It was the cry of liberty crucified in Belgium and France. It was the outraged feelings of a strong and chivalrous young man at the conduct of the German power. It was the growing fear that if the liberties of Europe were conquered by the jungle spirit of the Prussian monster, "the day"—the reckoning day—would come for America as well.

He knew the sense of fear and was willing to acknowledge it. He knew the horrors he might face, but was willing to face them. His was the spirit to conquer fear in a righteous cause. I like to think of this young man as typifying the attitude of the thousands of young men already "over there" or destined to follow them. I like to think of his attitude as typical of America in this war. Shall we who are left behind fail to respond to the inspiration of their fine example?

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Loveridge's New Flower Shop, Peoria, Ill.

One of the most attractive retail establishments in Peoria, Ill., is the handsome new flower shop of C. Loveridge, at 423 Main street, as can be readily seen from the accompanying illustrations. The commodious store and workroom, the latter in the rear, completely hidden from view by the display case and adjoining panels, occupy a space 23 by 70 feet, and from the splendid show windows at the front to the alley at the rear, from which the delivery end is handled, the appointments are complete in every respect. In the flower shop, the fixtures of white form a most pleasing combination with the interior of French gray and the neat tables with vitrolite glass tops and mirrors at the back of the wall cases, bring out the arrangement of plants and flowers most effectively. The artistic flower case seen in the background is divided in the center, the front section being used for display, while the back is used for putting up orders without interfering with anything in the store. The exterior of the store is especially attractive, the splendid windows commanding attention to the fine displays which are a feature here. Mr. Loveridge purchased the property about two years ago, subject to a lease which expired January 1, 1918, when he immediately started remodeling the building.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The third Liberty Loan campaign is now over; people will get back into the regular daily routine, and spring business should become normal. The patriotic aspect of the store should, however, be kept up, as the war will be the uppermost everyday topic, particularly since our boys are going into action in ever-increasing numbers as fast as the boats can get them over. Keep a stock of thrift stamps on hand with the posters and other literature

It is, however, an enormous sum and it cannot be raised by the subscriptions of a few. It will need the collective subscriptions, small and large, of millions of our people.

Surely the people of this state will not fail to be numbered generously among them. Where our heart is, there will our treasure be also. If our heart is in this war, our treasure must go with it. And our hearts must be in this war if we have the conscience and instincts of free men.—Morton Denison Hull.

"Bitter Patriotism—Applied."

It is not enough to buy a Liberty Bond. The war is with us; it is at our doors. Being at war, we must be "bitterly patriotic," and we must apply that bitter patriotism constructively here as we would apply it destructively "over there." When we buy Liberty Bonds we pay out our hard-earned money for them. The more intensely we realize what the war is and what it means and might mean to us, the more money we lend our government. In every day business we spend our money so far as possible with those who spend their money with us. It is just the same in this great business of backing up our government—which means nothing more nor less than backing up ourselves. The business house that has a Liberty Loan honor flag in the window is with us, and that is the store in which we should spend our money. If we do that, we help that dealer to put more money into more Liberty Bonds. "He who is not with us is against us."

A Liberty Bond button on the lapel of the coat of a friend shows where he stands. A Liberty Loan editorial or curity behind the promises of our government, and furthermore he is 'lending a hand' to our boys 'over there' and 'over here.' It is our duty to stand shoulder to shoulder in business, as our boys in the ranks are standing shoulder to shoulder in war.—Wilbur D. Nesbit.

displayed, showing you have them for sale.

Bedding and vegetable plants are good stock to feature at this time. Make a window decoration of the different varieties of vegetable plants handled, each kind in a little group; the tomatoes around a basket of the fruit, eggplants with a good specimen in the center, cabbage the same, also peppers. These can be procured from the fancy grocers or fruiterers. Such a display, if nicely arranged, will be sure to attract attention.

Now is the time that the dollar box will pay, particularly, if well displayed and advertised. The florist who will plan a campaign of specials and have nerve enough to spend $1,000 or more a year in consecutive, but not necessarily continuous, use of newspaper space will be surprised at the results. The ad. should be illustrated with a cut, just a little wording and the special price—"Our special $1.00 nosegay; a bit of cheer for the sick room," or "A decided bargain, our $1.00 Boston fern for the porch." Then your phone number, name and address. Newspaper ad. men will submit sketches of various articles drawn from photos, will write copy, all without expense other than regular space rates. When flowers are plentiful and cheap, as at this time, it is good business to arrange for such a campaign.

Keep up the window box feature. The warm, sunny spring days are a great help in this propaganda. If you are making a good display of this work on your store front, it will be found a great factor.

Graduation and class days will soon be here. This is an opportunity for good business to the live man who will go after it. Lists of scholars are available in most schools, and well worded circulars will turn business to the man who tells them just what they want at a popular price. Presidents of classes can also be looked up; the class flower adopted is ascertained, estimates for baskets or bouquets are given, and the orders at times secured without competition.

A good window at this time is made of half dozen to a dozen of each kind of roses in the market. These, nicely arranged, each variety in a vase to itself, all correctly labeled, make a very interesting exhibit which is almost sure to catch the passerby.

Porch plants, such as palms, dracaenas, crotons, rubbers and ferns, nicely arranged, giving each sufficient space to show its individual beauty, will make a timely window. "Porch plants," lettered on a good sized card, should be prominently displayed. All plants should be plainly priced. It helps along many sales.

Cattleyas are now at their best. A handle basket filled with the glory handle basket filled with the Glory the fronds and short ones tied on the handle can be made to look very artistic with a dozen or two of these orchids. They can be as readily sold from the basket as from crowded vases in the iced case, and are much more noticeable when displayed in this decorative way.

Mother's day should now be receiving your attention. Plan out something original in window decoration. Write to Secretary John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York, for the Mothers' day display cards of the S. A. F. publicity committee. By the way, have you supported this splendid movement? Do you approve of what they are doing? If so, "say it with money." Send along your check. It will come back to you tenfold. You have been going to for some. Do it now!

Non-Essential Hysteria.

A recent occurrence in a Philadelphia flower shop: Mr. B. ordered a corsage of flowers to be sent to his wife, who was to accompany him to an entertainment that evening. These were delivered in due time. Early the next day, Mrs. B. called at the flower shop and roundly berated the proprietor for encouraging her husband in spending money for flowers. He surely must know that these are war times, that flowers are non-essential, that every penny that could be spared from the actual necessities of living must go to the Red Cross and for the many other associations and community efforts that were being made to raise money to add to the material comfort of the boys at the front, etc., and, finally, that if any more flowers came to her from his place she would not receive them. This is not perhaps quite as strongly put as were the words of this intensely (?) patriotic woman, who, no doubt, thought she was in this way doing her bit to help win the war.

There is no question but what, in common with many other commodities, the use of flowers has been decried. The most serious effect was felt in the general postponement of the "coming out" teas of the past fall and doing away with public and private balls and receptions. The demand for flowers for funerals remains about normal. The business of Thanksgiving day and the Christmas holidays was, despite the adverse shipping conditions, most gratifying. This shows that the great majority of flower buyers have money to spend and will satisfy their love for plants and flowers when required.

The propaganda against flowers should be met and defeated every time it stalks forth, either in or out of the store. Every man or woman connected in any way with the business should carry a double-edged sword of fact and argument that will at once pierce through the superficial statements of unthinking persons. Florists are as loyal as any of Uncle Sam's tradesmen. They have given liberally to the Red Cross. Notable instances were in St. Paul and Chicago, where two flower bazaars for the benefit of the Red Cross were managed by florists who donated all the flowers sold, which netted, respectively, $5,000 and $3,000. Many of the most promising young men in the business all over the country have enlisted and are now at the front, where they will soon be joined by many others from the trade.

As to the non-essential feature of flowers, they are God's greatest gift to man. Without the shrubbery and flowers of the garden, the surroundings of the home would be robbed of its greatest beauty. Flowers are a joy and pleasure to every recipient. For the sick-room, they are like rays of sunshine, full of warmth and color. They bring words of cheer to the downhearted and depressed. The blossoms of spring and summer, as seen in the shops at this time—the hyacinths, the tulips, daffodils and sweet peas—add brightness to these bitter winter days and seem to hasten the advent of spring. Who will say that the ferns, the palms, the bright blooming plants that give life and bring such warmth and color into the home, are non-essentials?

And these boys, our valiant sons, who have gone to fight our battles—are we to desert them? Will there be no place or business for them to return to? Come, everybody! Scotch this "non-essential snake." Grind it under your heels. Chase it to oblivion.

Corsage Shows National Colors.

In an article by Ella Grant Wilson, which appeared in a recent issue of the Cleveland News, she calls attention to the fact that while the wearing of flowers for mothers is being observed more and more each year, mothers at present are wearing flowers in honor of the sons in uniform, blue sweet peas and red and white roses forming the patriotic arrangement in many cases. If the corsage is tied with white ribbon, a service star can be attached as well as the insignia of the branch of the service.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer in its magazine section the Sunday preceding Easter devoted first page space to a special article by the same author, featuring the lily. The page contained several excellent illustrations of the lily, showing its intimate connection with Japanese life. Mrs. Wilson has for some time been in charge of the publicity details of the Cleveland Florists' Club, which appropriates several thousand dollars annually to increase the sale of flowers by the trade in that city, and the generous cooperation of the press has done much to bring about the splendid results obtained.

Calceolaria, Knitting-Bag Plant.

The accompanying portrait is of Paul E. Embler, gardener of the Ohio State University horticultural department at Columbus. The splendid calceolaria shown in the picture, and grown by Mr. Embler, has been christened the "knitting-bag plant" by him, and because of the unusual popularity of that article this year has had a wonderful sale. After four years' experience in the United States Marine Corps, in which he had exceptional opportunity to study plants in all parts of the world, Mr. Embler was later with the Batter Park conservatories, Asheville, N. C.; the Idle Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga., and upon coming to Columbus was first connected with the Fifth Avenue Floral Co. and the Riverside Florists.

PLANT NOTES.

Begonia Gloire De Lorraine.

The plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, both the young rooted stock and the older plants, will now begin to make active growth. There is still time to propagate much stock; many growers prefer the May-rooted plants to those propagated earlier, for the plants start right off into growth at this time, while those rooted earlier grow very slowly during the late winter and early spring months. The young shoots that break from the old plants make fine cuttings at this time, and if the plants are in good health are just as good as the leaf cuttings made earlier. As soon as rooted they should be potted in a light, fibrous loam in 2½-inch pots and placed in a light, well ventilated house, but should be protected from all chilling drafts. They cannot be successfully grown in a stuffy, moist temperature, and to have strong, healthy plants should not be forced in too warm a temperature. They will require a house in which the night temperature does not fall below 60° and should be given all the air possible without chilling during pleasant, bright days, carefully avoiding drafts. They will need to be watered carefully, for the roots are very fine and are growing slowly yet, and over-watering quickly shows in the growth of the plant. It is now a good time to procure young stock if the grower is not supplied, for those making a specialty of this plant will have the best of stock at this time.

Preparations For Memorial Day.

With the Easter stock out of the way, there will be room available for the plants that have of necessity been crowded more closely together for the last few weeks, and the next great day before the grower is Memorial day. In those sections of the country where the late frosts are past the bedding stock must be ready for planting out at that time, and the demand will be for plants to flower, for the customers will desire plants that will make a good showing by May 30, and the stock must be grown with that object in view to have a good sale. The geraniums and other blooming plants should be placed in their blooming pots, spaced out and given a good sunny location, that they may be full of bloom by the last of May. It is next to impossible to sell plants that are not in flower at Memorial day. The production of flowers for that day must also receive prompt attention. Much of the floral work for Memorial day is what is called "cheap" work, that is, flowers that make a great show and are not expensive. So, although there are many roses and carnations used, yet large quantities of the cheaper flowers are employed to fill in and make the sprays and bouquets larger. Early outdoor flowers and blooming shrubbery can be used, but in some sections these cannot be depended upon, so flowers must be grown in the houses. Stocks make a splendid flower for this purpose, and should be benched at once. The plants should now be about three or four inches high and growing rapidly. Candytuft is grown in large quantities by some growers for Memorial day. Seedlings can be transplanted in early April and brought into flower the latter part of May. Spirea, both as a pot plant and for cut flowers, are very useful at this time; six to eight weeks will bring them into flower at this season. There are other annuals that can be raised for Memorial day blooming, but the two mentioned are grown in largest quantities.

Gladiolus.

The gladioli that are being forced for spring blooming will soon begin to open their flowers, and to have good clean stock they will require attention. The spikes should first of all be kept erect, for if they get bent and crooked half their value is gone, and this will occur very quickly on the bright, sunny days when the plants lean over, so they should be kept tied either to stakes or wires to prevent this. The spike should be cut when the first flower opens and placed in water and the other flowers opened in the office or store-room. These flowers spot very quickly if water is sprinkled upon them in the greenhouse, and at this season of the year syringing on bright days is a necessity or red spider is sure to obtain a foothold, and if these pests become once well established it is almost impossible to eradicate them. Considerable discussion is often heard as to whether the corms of gladiolus forced are of any value another year. If the plant is not cut too far down on the stem and the corms are given an opportunity to thoroughly ripen, there is no doubt but that the bulbs may be grown another year and good results obtained, but if the plant is cut off clear down to the ground the corm has no chance to make its full growth or to ripen, and the corms will be practically worthless. Corms that are forced this year and the spike cut so as to leave three or more leaves, if properly ripened, can be planted outside another year and the following year first-class corms will be the result. The Gladiolus Colvillei can be forced year after year if grown properly.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

Small stock of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are now a necessity with all plantmen, for they are freely used in fern dishes and in plant baskets, being very satisfactory plants for house culture. Fresh seed can now be obtained and the stock grown on through the summer, which will make fine stock for the next winter. The seed will germinate more readily and evenly if soaked in lukewarm water placed in a warm location for 24 hours before planting. Instead of sowing the seed broadcast, it is better to sow them about three-quarters of an inch apart, and they can then be allowed to remain in the flats until they are strong enough to transplant. Do not cover the seed too deeply; an eighth of an inch of soil sifted over the seed is ample. The first potting must be carefully done, for they make a long tap root, with very few small roots, and the soil does not adhere to it, and in the young stage this root is easily broken. A warm house with plenty of moisture and careful watering with a slight shade is all they require after being potted. Overwatering will always cause the fronds to take on a yellowish hue.

Memorial Day Preparations.

MISCELLANEOUS STOCK.

Memorial day, the national holiday set apart for decorating the graves of the soldiers and sailors of our country, always has been one of the important days of the year for the florists, especially the growers and gardeners located near or connected with the cemeteries. Not only has this day become the accepted time for planting on the cemetery lots, but the public have also got accustomed to having the flower beds around their homes planted before Memorial day. This taxes the capacity to the limit of those engaged in growing bedding plants, and now that our country is at war, and so many homes have boys in the service, a great many people will set out a few plants this year who have not thought about it before. To meet any demand that may come, it is therefore the best policy to be fully prepared and have the plants in the best possible condition before the rush of outdoor planting commences.

PLANTS ON THE GREENHOUSE BENCHES.

Every inch of bench space is now occupied, and growers are generally at their wits ends to find space to give the plants room to prevent them drawing up and becoming lanky, but every effort should be made to give them space enough to allow for their proper development and hold them dwarf and stocky. This is where the hotbeds and cold frames come in so handy. All low growing plants that require a high temperature should be placed in hotbeds, plunging the pots to the rims in the beds, to prevent drying out too rapidly or becoming misplaced while watering. The principal factors that need to be looked out for in connection with the care of the plants in hotbeds are, first, to provide means, either by steam or manure, for a bottom heat of 75 to 85 degrees; second, to watch the plants closely as regards watering—they should never be allowed to become either the extreme of dry or wet; and, third, pay close attention to ventilating the beds. They need ventilation every day, according to the weather conditions. Plants in hotbeds grow very rapidly, taking on a somewhat soft, sappy growth, which, under close conditions, will draw up and dampen. A free circulation of air through the frames should be looked out for at all times.

The cold-frames can also now be brought into use to take some of the plants now occupying the greenhouse bench space and make room for other plants that have to be kept inside. Sweet alyssum, ageratum, Mme. Sallerol seedling petunias, verbenas and others of this class of plants can, after May 1, go outside in cold-frames. The English ivy, which in the northern states has to be carried in the greenhouse over winter, can also be put outside at once to thoroughly harden them off, preparatory to planting. It is the rule to plant the ivy before the more tender stock. Set outside in the cold-frames now, with the sash removed on every favorable occasion, the plants become thoroughly hardened and in good shape for planting in about 10 days. By removing to the cold-frames as many of these plants as possible, a large amount of space can be obtained for spreading the plants inside. Geraniums are, above all others, the one plant that needs room at this time. Without ample space they quickly become drawn and unsightly. They need spreading two or three times between April 1 and May 15, unless a grower has an unlimited amount of space at his disposal, and gives them lots of room at the start; whenever the foliage becomes closed up over the top of the plants, it is then time for the plants to have more room.

Fuchsias, heliotropes, begonias, marguerites and pelargoniums being grown up into 4 or 5-inch pots, to have in nice bloom for sale, need plenty of space for their development, a dwarf habit adding considerable to the beauty of these plants.

The hydrangeas and rambler and other roses, to be nicely in bloom for Memorial day, must also have plenty of room to develop. They also need close attention as to watering and keeping them free of insects. It is a deplorable condition to find a plant badly infested with aphids when you offer it for sale to a customer, but unless a check on the insects is kept up all the time they are likely to get beyond control.

SAMPLE PLANTINGS.

A plan adopted by the greenhouse departments of many of the leading cemeteries is to fix up sample beds and plantings in a limited way of the various styles of planting, so that customers can form some idea of how the combination of plants look when planted together. This scheme saves a lot of time when taking orders and is a great help to the salesman in explaining the different styles of planting to the customer. These plantings are generally fitted up in frames near the greenhouse, so that they are handy to show the customers.

Another plan that saves a great deal of time and labor is to fit up the pansy and other small plants in baskets containing one dozen plants, and keep a good supply on hand to meet the demand each day. This saves taking the customers to the frames to make a sale. Arrange for a good supply of market baskets for the buyer to carry the plants in whenever they desire, thus saving many deliveries.

Another very important matter is to keep a good display in the selling houses. This is the season of the year when customers like to go through the houses and pick out their plants, so have everything about the place clean and presentable.

Another good plan is to have a supply of vases for cut flowers and cheap trowels on hand to meet the demand for these items. It is a poor policy to lend out any trowels, watering cans or tools of any description, it being far better to have a cheap article to sell.

C. W. JOHNSON.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Flower Growers' Corporation has closed its doors, following an unprofitable season.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Gas from a leaking main recently destroyed the lily stock at the establishment of Newlands & Co.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Michael J. Hannigan, one of this city's well-known florists, died April 19, after an illness of five days.

The Greenhouse Shelf.

The intensive use of greenhouse space is rapidly becoming more necessary to the practical grower, who must find in these days of greatly increased overhead charges, some method of meeting these additional expenses. In every large house there is an overhead space that can be utilized to a greater or lesser extent, depending on the crops coming on beneath. In a fern house the space within 12 to 15 inches of the eaves will provide room for a shelf on which may be placed small ferns or a box six to eight inches deep, from eight to 10 in width, in which can be grown Asparagus plumosus or Sprengeri for cutting. Such a box is shown in the accompanying illustration. From this has been cut many bunches of A. Sprengeri which did not seem to interfere in the least with the table of ferns in pots below.

A shelf six to seven feet next the walk, over a center bed, is also a convenient and profitable addition to the greenhouse space. A 12-inch shelf, if fairly close to the glass, will not cost much shade, but will hold quite a quantity of stock and provide the best possible location for many classes of young plants.

All shelves should be made of two rows of $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch pipe; these supported on shelf brackets are substantial and if kept painted will last as long as the house. They also have the great advantage of casting no shadow when not occupied.

A center shelf, made with two rows of pipes laid at the junction of the brace pipes from the center iron post to the iron pipe purlins, supporting the roof of medium sized houses, is a splendid space for a row of cibotiums or other spreading ferns which want a light airy space. Henry A. Dreer, Inc., at Riverton, N. J., use such shelves to good advantage in their range of fern houses.

A single pipe, supported by a bracket on the inside of a row of iron pipe posts next the walk, makes a convenient hanger, from which may be suspended single pots of ferns, which finish into symmetrical plants in this light airy position. As they use unoccupied space and cast but little shadow, especially in palm or fern houses—they may be called velvet plants, no floor or bench space being charged up to them.

Sermon on Patriotism.

Here is a sermon on patriotism. It comes from Sturgeon Bay, Wis. The standard of patriotism preached in this sermon is so much above the patriotism of many thousands of men and women, that the Liberty Loan executive committee is sending the story broadcast in the hope of rousing a spirit of emulation in the breasts of all citizens, both naturalized and native born. Were every man to attain the standard of Demosthenes of Sturgeon Bay, it is pointed out, the whole $3,000,000,000 would be subscribed in the Chicago district alone. Demosthenes, a 1,000 per cent American, has the following message for Uncle Sam:

"You can borrow anything and everything I have." And this is not his message alone. It is also the message of his two brothers—Antoneas and Stavros. Their surname is Anagnostopoulos, and they conduct a small candy store. Let Demosthenes Anagnostopoulos do the rest of the talking:

"We boys did not have anything when we came to this country. My brothers and I were very poor in the old country. All we have, we made here. This country has given us great opportunity. Whatever we have, we owe to this country. We do not consider that we have done anything beyond a fair share in taking $5,000 worth of Third Liberty Loan bonds. We took $1,600 of the second loan, and our allotment for the third loan, figured by the appraisal committee on the basis of assessed valuation of property, was $100 each, or $300 for the three of us. But as we had the money, and we knew that Uncle Sam wanted to raise much money for the war, we decided to let him have all our savings. We know that it is a safe investment, and we do not consider that we have been particularly patriotic in lending this amount to the government. We talked it over, and we decided that we owed this country something—yes, everything—and we felt the least we could do would be to lend money to the government.

"Tony" is in the draft and probably will go to one of the cantonments on the next call for soldiers. He is glad to go and fight for his country. We—Stavros and myself—are glad to have him go, and if we are called, we, too, will be glad to go. We do not consider that we are entitled to be known as patriots for lending our money to the government. The security is so good, the interest is so high, the investment is so excellent in every way, that we would have been glad to take advantage of the opportunity even if the best country in the world had not been at war and in need of money.

"In the 16 years we have lived here, we have prospered. We know that America gives every industrious man a splendid opportunity. We want that opportunity continued. That is the real reason we subscribed."

Plant Disease Inquiry at Vassar.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—If the plans suggested to the trustees of Vassar College by the Dutchess County Defense Council are carried out, there will be included in the college curriculum a course in plant pathology. The suggestion that this be done was made to the defense council by Miss Emmeline Moore, acting head of the department of botany at Vassar. The defense council immediately indorsed Miss Moore's plan. A college farm like the Vassar farm, together with its gardens and greenhouses, offers a better field for investigation and control of plant diseases than any of our landed estates presents, in the opinion of Miss Moore. Announcement was made March 13, of the offer by Mrs. Frances Burke-Roche, who owns a fine estate south of this city, of 30 acres of her land for cultivation by Vassar girls next summer.

HANFORD, CALIF.—R. D. Paul, proprietor of the Hanford Floral Co., has disposed of the business and will take an eastern trip after May 1.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Wm. F. Gude has been appointed chairman of the committee to acquire property to take care of government employes under the housing law. An expenditure of $10,000,000 has been provided for in this city.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Our promotion bureau has just classified and filed many hundreds of clippings of advertisements inserted by florists in newspapers throughout the country, and it is rather surprising to notice how few florists think of the advisability—we might say necessity—of using in their advertising copy our slogan phrase, "Say It With Flowers." It should by this time be realized that this slogan is an important link with the advertisements which the publicity committees are inserting in magazines of far-reaching circulation, such publicity being wholly for the good of the trade. The slogan is also the subject of our handsome window sign, which is being displayed in prominent flower stores everywhere. This slogan was created to suggest to the public mind that flowers are a convenient medium for the conveyance of sentiment. If used by every florist in his announcements, a vast amount of publicity is afforded, all helpful to our campaign. It is hoped that every florist using newspaper space for Mothers' day announcements will, in some way, include this slogan in his copy.

Quite a few subscribers to the campaign fund have, so far, overlooked the necessity for remitting their subscriptions for the 1918 period of advertising. It is hoped that they will not longer delay, as the publicity committees are very desirous of making the campaign continuous, without any break in the programme which has been so well thought out and arranged. A campaign such as this one cannot move very far on credit, nor should it be expected to do so. With the splendid results already obtained, there is every reason to force the fighting, rather than to deter it.

Would not this be a good time for the state vice-presidents of the S. A. F. to do a little more work for the campaign fund? It should not be hard now to convince any florist that our movement is well balanced and bound to be a complete success. Every dollar spent means more business.

The following new subscriptions, annually for four years unless noted, are reported:

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

"Let's All Get Together."

Henry Ford once said, "One of the first things every man must realize, if he is going to succeed, is how little he can accomplish alone; the second is, that everyone has some good in him and can do something well." Now, the florists throughout this great country of ours are alert and progressive, and are doing things in a commendable manner florally, but are we not overlooking the efforts made through our publicity campaign which no doubt, will tend to increase the general volume of flower-sales in leaps and bounds, by not contributing to the campaign, whereby every one's mite could make this fund big enough to make it felt everywhere?

This campaign will be resultful to the smallest as well as the largest floral establishment, and it behooves everyone, retailer, wholesaler, and grower alike, to do their part in this our first campaign, and thereby show that florists are as keen to donate to a good cause for the florists generally, as they would be to receive business. The big way is to do your share.

E. J. Lehmann, the founder of "The Fair," Chicago's big retail store, had so little money when he started in business that he had to buy his first sign on the installment plan. He agreed to pay for it one dollar at a time as he could spare it from his business. One doesn't have to start big, to grow big. Your donation, however small, multiplied by a little from every florist, would give us a campaign fund big enough to create the necessary space required in our magazine advertising to make the florists throughout the land a recognized factor in their community. Will you help the cause? Do it now, and send your remittance to John Young, secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York, who will acknowledge it.

HENRY PENN, Chairman,
S. A. F. Publicity Committee.

Kerr Company Incorporation.

Supplementing an account of the incorporation of the Robert C. Kerr Co., Houston, Tex., which appeared in our issue of April 6, page 578, R. C. Kerr, in a recent communication, writes as follows regarding the plans of the new company in growing plants and cut flowers for the wholesale market, and which will doubtless be of interest to a number of our readers:

"In the first place, I wish to correct a misunderstanding. Many seem to think that I have incorporated our retail business, which is not the case. Our retail store will continue to be owned by myself as proprietor and will not be taken into the company.

"We expect to proceed along conservative lines, growing only such crops as have already been demonstrated to be a success in this community. We will specialize in roses, chrysanthemums, Easter lilies and ferns under glass, and will have about 55,000 square feet, all told. In addition, we expect to put up 160,000 square feet of lath house and 150,000 square feet of cold-frame. We will add to this from time to time, as our experiments may justify. Our capital stock will be $35,000. While it is not a large company, we hope to build each year."

Milwaukee.

GOOD DEMAND BUT SHORT SUPPLY.

Business continued good throughout all last week, but the gradual shortening up of receipts made it a little more difficult to do business. Carnations were very scarce, thus, helping to create a stronger demand on the other lines, especially roses. It was the medium and shorter grades of stock for which the demand was greatest. It will take quite a bit of sunshine to hustle things along, so we are assured an adequate supply for Mothers' day.

NOTES.

Since Fred Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., in company with J. G. Heitman and Wm. R. Schroeder, visited their carnation growers, with the object of ascertaining prospects for the Mothers' day crop, they feel very uneasy. "The way it looks now, there will be quite a shortage and I would advise buyers to place orders early if they want their share," is what he said the next day.

Gust Rusch & Co. report the demand especially brisk for the past week with a daily clean up. Joe Euringer, formerly with this firm, joined the colors. April 29.

At the C. C. Pollworth Co. store they report numerous inquiries regarding all kinds of cut flowers for Mothers' day.

OBITUARY.

James B. McArdle.

James B. McArdle, who for the past eight years conducted a successful seed and florist establishment at Greenwich, Conn., died at Tucson, Ariz., April 29, aged 40 years. He had been in failing health for several months and had spent some time in Florida, the business being conducted by his wife since his illness. The cause of death was said to be ulceration of the stomach. He is survived by his wife and three children.

The deceased, before starting in business on his own account was traveling representative for Vaughan's Seed Store, New York. He was a member of the Society of American Florists, the New York Florists' Club and for many years secretary of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society. His cheerful disposition and obliging manner won for him a host of friends who will receive with sincere regret the news of his passing while in the prime of life with many years of promise before him.

Marius Hansen.

Marius Hansen, for the past 28 years a grower of North Bergen, N. J. (formerly New Durham), died of internal cancer, April 22, aged 57 years. He was a native of Denmark and learned the florist business there, also spending some time in other European countries. He came to America in 1886, and after spending several years in different situations, established himself as above stated. For a number of years he had made table ferns a specialty. He was well known to many New York retailers as a man of business integrity. He was a bachelor, but is survived by a brother, Louis, who continues the business, and by a niece, who was born in this country, but is now a resident of Denmark.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that Lanternier, Florist, Fort Wayne, Ind., submits for registration the new fern described below:

Name—Anthony Wayne. Description: Foliage similar to Nephrolepis exaltata Whitmani, but darker and less fringed. Growth strong, similar to Bostoniensis, and strong plants up to 12-inch pot size are easily obtained, without the bottom rot customary to Whitmani. Produces an abundance of runners in both bench and pots.

Any person objecting to this registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

April 23, 1918.

Prices and Coal Restriction.

With the official edict of the United States fuel administration curtailing the use of coal by florists one-half which in reality means a curtailment of greenhouse space to practically that extent and a corresponding limit to production, added to the ever-increasing cost of practically very item that enters into both the growing and selling ends of the industry, and with imported stocks practically cut off, the time for higher prices is now at hand.

A shortened production, which will remedy to a great extent the problem of oversupply, will bring about the natural result of higher prices following the logical equation between supply and demand, and the public, who have placed their undeniable stamp of approval on flowers, as was shown by the exceptional Easter demand this year, despite war-time conditions and criticisms of a misguided few, are already well aware of the fact that the increasing cost of living and production is no respecter of persons, and that the florist and his products are as surely affected as others. Grow stock for which there is a market in your locality; grow it exceptionally well, with the idea of quality rather than quantity in mind, and your obstacle has been overcome. In all events, the fellow who tries to continue in business on the "trading dollars" basis will undoubtedly find out that his system was "all wrong." Under the circumstances, with higher prices born of necessity, there is nothing to be gained by dodging an issue that requires action—now.

Labor Conscription.

Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, is in favor of conscripting labor. All may not agree with him, but it must be acknowledged that his arguments are forceful, with a touch of humor, which he probably inherited from his Irish or Scotch ancestors. We reprint the following from an article in the New York Times Magazine of April 21:

"The public sees that the principle that every one should do his part is right. If it is right to take a man of draft age and compel him to fight, is it not right to take his brother who remains at home and compel him to produce the supplies that the soldier brother needs? If the government has the right to say to the soldier, 'You must fight whether you please or not,' it has a right to say to the man remaining at home, 'You work whether you please or not.' Even then, think how much greater is the sacrifice the soldier makes: He risks his life in a zone of constant danger, while the man at home works in a zone of absolute safety.

"I have looked into that matter a little, both as to occupations from which men could be spared in wartime and as to occupations in which women could replace men. For instance, I find that there are in the United States 4,154 landscape gardeners, 13,476 greenhouse laborers, 1,740 male dressmakers and seamsters, 303,147 male clerks in stores, 17,395 actors, (possibly I should not include these, but in the dire necessity of the country the best actor in the world is the one who can produce for his country,) 27,511 elevator tenders, 39,488 laundry laborers, 13,750 footmen, (men who sit on the box beside the driver and carry the ponderous weight of a lady's visiting card to the porter standing at the door with a silver tray to receive it). Add to this list other men servants totaling 112,366, and 113,239 waiters in restaurants, and there is a total of 651,806, taken from just 10 occupations alone. We have more than 200,000 men serving as domestic servants and waiters, positions formerly held almost exclusively by women, and very properly so. To me a man is about as much out of place waiting on a table as a woman cleaning a livery stable."

Probably the senator would have the landscape gardeners and greenhouse laborers grow vegetables if the necessity arises. We believe some of them are doing that now, without conscription. We are sorry he has not included in his list the pirates, who in hotels and restaurants, grab your coat and hat, wave a whisk broom at you and hold out their hands; the whole performance being unnecessary to your comfort or convenience—but they need the money.

Women in Greenhouses and Shops.

Commenting on an article, "Greenhouse Help Problem Solved," which appeared in our issue of April 27, page 720, attention is called to a possible solution of a problem confronting the trade in general, and growers in particular, at this time when war is calling experienced men from all branches of the business.

The writer of the article asks "Why not women?" He also answers the question with a number of excellent reasons for their employment in both the growing and retail ends of the business, based upon experience extending over a number of years and careful observation. Following a trial made necessary by the war's demand for men, many industries have found women even better qualified for the respective positions in which they were employed. Even in the more strenuous walks of life, the results obtained have been surprisingly successful. In the munition factories of England they are credited with showing a remarkable aptness for the work—being dependable, quick and thorough.

In many instances where the experiment has been tried they have shown the same excellent qualifications for greenhouse work, which we might be safe in attributing to an inherent love of flowers and plants; and, if properly paid, many women would doubtless prefer such employment rather than in store or factory, and the florist business would be benefited by creating a sphere for them.

HEAVY SUPPLY BUT SALES SATISFACTORY.

Trade is in a fairly satisfactory condition, considering the heavy cut of stock arriving. It may be said that the great glut of bulbous stock is now over for the season. There are still plenty of varieties of tulips and hyacinths to choose from, but the quantity is diminishing every day. Roses are now at their best and are in large supply. All the leading commercial sorts can be had in large quantities and it is only the best grade of stock that is bringing top notch figures. American Beauties are about the only sort that are not in large supply, and, in fact, owing to this variety being largely displaced by Russell, it has been in large enough supply for the demand all season. All the baby roses are reaching the market in larger quantities than at any other time this year. They are very popular, however, and all stock finds a steady market. Carnations are in large supply. Good stock is in steady demand, but the call for inferior grades is very limited. Matchless is the leading white and Belle Washburn leads in reds. Benora is always a favorite and is largely grown for this market. Snapdragons are quite popular and some very fine stock is being offered. Prices are very remunerative. Lilies are in ample supply at steady figures. Violets are rapidly going out of the market after a very long and successful season to the growers. Sweet peas can be had in all colors and of the very finest quality. Prices ruling are still good. Spanish iris and also other varieties are plentiful. Orchids and lily of the valley are still rather scarce. Gardenias are none too plentiful, with prices firm. Lilac is very abundant and very good; prices are reasonable, as it is all outdoor grown. Anemones are very popular and always bring good prices. Fruit blossoms are fast going out of the market after a very successful run. Greens are becoming more plentiful every day, and so is fern.

NOTES.

Sidney Clack, who recently sold his range of glass at Mayfield, is now busily engaged on a large landscape project near his old place of business. Before engaging in commercial work, Mr. Clack was known as one of the best landscape gardeners in the west, and it is only natural that his services are now sought in the same direction again.

Chas Stoffenbach, of the American Florist Shop, on Polk street, has been very busy the past week on funeral work and decorations. His large store is always attractively decorated. He says his Easter trade was beyond all expectations, the chief demand being for flowering plants in pots. Roses were the best sellers.

The first Ford farm tractor, with engine bearing the serial number "One," arrived in Santa Rosa during the week by express from the Ford plant in Detroit, a gift from Henry Ford to Luther Burbank. It is the first machine of the kind made. The second one was sent to Thomas A. Edison.

Hans Plath is busy restocking his greenhouses with young stock for next season. His Easter trade cleaned up nearly everything that was salable in the line of ferns. His palm houses are in grand shape, with many thousand young plants coming along for next winter's trade.

Donald McLaren, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is busily engaged these days on landscape work. The nursery at San Mateo is very busy on plant orders. They report a very heavy demand this season for roses, especially the newer varieties.

Mrs. E. Lymberry, proprietor of the Bessie Boston Dahlia Farm, is busily engaged these days in shipping her new dahlias. She reports the biggest trade in dahlias during the life of her business, and says the demand for novelties is very heavy.

Ricordie Lee Murray, on Geary street, says business is keeping up steadily at her store. Her window displays are very attractive, her showing of pot roses during the week being especially fine.

Chas. Abraham is adding a large packing shed to his establishment at Franklin and Greenwich street. He says he had a very busy season, the demand for all ornamental plants being quite heavy.

Arthur Cann, of San Jose, was a recent visitor. He tells us that Easter trade in his city was far ahead of former years, and that things in the floral and plant line are in prosperous shape.

Joseph McGrau, well known in landscape circles in this city, is the latest of the trade to be notified that he is to serve Uncle Sam. He leaves shortly for American Lake to begin training.

John Zelinka, of the nursery department of Golden Gate park, is on the sick list, being confined to his home with a severe attack of grippe.

Emil Serveau is slowly recovering from his recent illness and takes occasional trips to this city to visit his Fillmore street store.

BAD WEATHER INTERFERES.

The local market the past week has been in a sad state on account of the inclement weather. Roses of all kinds have been in fair supply and Russell, particularly, have been good. Carnations have been decidedly off crop and the small supply coming in commanded $4 per 100 and the quality is very poor. Sweet peas also have suffered considerably from the dark weather, most of those coming in being soft and mushy. Spanish iris has been of extra good quality, although not a big supply is coming in. In miscellaneous stock, the market has also been short. Lilies seem to come in steadily, and this also holds good with callas. Outdoor stock of course, has been very poor. Lilacs grown outdoor this year were almost an entire failure. Gladioli have begun to make their appearance. In greens the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

The florists' club is putting on a drive of their own on Liberty Bond sales. They have sold over a thousand dollars of bonds to their members in small amounts besides their own subscription. It is the hope of the club that they will be able to record a hundred per cent on their roster.

Windler Wholesale Floral Co. has reported 100 per cent on the Liberty Loan drive. Every member of the firm and every employe has one or more Liberty bonds. They have applied for their Liberty Loan flag.

C. A. Kuehn has been showing some very nice stocks and Spanish iris. Pierre Schneider is a specialist on stocks, and he is sure sending in some very nice ones.

Edw. A. Guntly of Windler's Flowers is the proud father of George Edward Guntly, aged one day, arriving with 10 pounds of excess baggage.

St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. has been getting in some very fine huckleberry foliage, which has a good call for decorating.

J. J. W.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Peter Renz is offering his establishment at 322 Broadway, for sale.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The principal feature of the April meeting of the florists' club was the address of President Charles H. Totty of the Society of American Florists. National publicity for flowers was the keynote.

DEMAND IS DORMANT.

This market is receiving plenty of stock at present, and trade has fallen off considerably. Funeral work is about the only thing that keeps the stores busy. There are a few small weddings, but very few flowers are used. Lilies are about the only scarce item. Carnations are still selling at $3 and $4 per 100 for the best. Roses of all varieties are coming in large quantities and sell from $2 to $12 per 100. Some very good Shawyer, Prima Donna, September Morn, Killarney and Ophelia are seen. American Beauties are in light crop with little call. Good snapdragon is selling very well. Very good lily of the valley is being received and moves well, the top price being $6 per 100. Iris, in yellow, white and blue is now being received. Some daffodils of very good quality are still coming, but the demand is light as so much outdoor stock is on the market. Calendulas, yellow daisies and sweet peas are coming in large quantities with little sale for them.

NOTE.

Joe Marks, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, was a caller this week.

STOCK IS IN BRISK DEMAND.

Stock of all kinds is in brisk demand and is cleaning up nicely every day at very satisfactory figures. Carnations are selling exceptionally well at prices ranging from $3 to $4 per 100 and even more in the fancy grades. There has been no surplus in carnations all this week and at times the dealers have experienced considerable difficulty in filling all their orders in full. American Beauty roses are moving well at good prices and clean up nicely right along. Roses in general are not as plentiful as they have been and have advanced considerably in price the past few days. Mrs. Chas. Russell are in heavy demand and the other varieties are moving well, so there is no great surplus when the stores close at night. Darwin tulips are quite a factor in the market and command good prices. Gladioli are seen in fair supply. Jonquils, daffodils, tulips, pansies, Paper White narcissi, mignonette, calendulas, daisies, snapdragons, stocks, iris, lupines, anemones, gardenias, orchids, lilac, lily of the valley, callas, forget-me-nots and other miscellaneous stock are included in the daily shipments, also lilies, which are moving well. Sweet peas are seen in good supply and the first shipments of northern pansies made their appearance this week. Greens are plentiful with the exception of smilax and adiantum. The early demand for stock for Mothers' day is exceptionally good and from present indications stock of all kinds will clean up at an early hour at the advertised quotations. Carnations will be in short supply is the report from nearly all the large growers and rose crops do not look any too promising at present. All the buyers who have not yet placed their orders for Mothers' day should do so at once, otherwise they are likely to meet with disappointment. Prices will not be any lower but will probably advance as the big day draws near, so nothing will be gained by holding off until the last minute. Play safe—order early. The new coal ruling limiting the growers to 50 per cent of their usual supply has aroused a great deal of excitement in this vicinity—full particulars of which appear elsewhere in this issue.

NOTES.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner have a sample line of Ove Gnatt & Co.'s new offerings on display at their store which is exceptionally fine and consists principally of Memorial day goods. The Gnatt concern is located at LaPorte, Ind., and consists of live wires who have a bright future in store for them, made doubly so by the recent government order curtailing the growers' coal supply to 50 per cent.

The florists' club will meet at the Bismarck hotel next Thursday evening, May 9, at 8 o'clock. This promises to be a most interesting meeting, and everyone in the trade is urgently requested to be present. The new coal order, affecting every greenhouse range in this vicinity, as well as in the United States, will be discussed, and is of sufficient interest to cause every grower to attend, whether he is a member of the club or not. Be sure and come. Bring your neighbors with you.

Among the soldiers of the Eighty-fourth division at Camp Zachary Taylor who graduated from the third officers' training camp and are listed as eligible for appointment as second lieutenants when suitable vacancies occur are John G. Poehlmann, of this city, and William J. Vesey, Jr., of Fort Wayne, Ind., according to the Chicago Sunday Tribune of April 28, first mention of which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of April 27.

Chas. Erne, of Erne & Co., reports a visit from Tom Best, with the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., who passed through here this week on his way home from New York where he attended the funeral of his mother whose death occurred April 20. He is well known here and has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in his recent bereavement.

E. B. Washburn and wife, of Pasadena, Calif., are the guests of C. L. Washburn and wife at Hinsdale. Mr. Washburn, who graduated last week from the adjutants' class at the Ohio State University, Columbus, has received a commission as second lieutenant and will be assigned to active duty as soon as his leave of absence expires.

The A. L. Randall Co. received its first shipment of peonies April 27, which, to the writer's knowledge, were

For Your Supply of CUT FLOWERS

 Remember when ordering that our line is so complete that it includes every item offered in the Great Chicago Market.

A. C. Kohlbrand, secretary of the Wholesale Cut Flower Association, reports that $93,100 worth of bonds have been subscribed for to date, Wednesday, May 1, which added to that taken by the retail florists, nurserymen, allied trades and seedsmen, makes a grand total of $196,660. The trade will make a good showing in division 19 but is anxious to have it as large as possible so anyone who can afford to take more bonds should do so at once. The "I Will" city will be in strong at the finish but every dollar counts so get busy and back up the boys over there by taking at least one more bond before the campaign closes. Do it now.

William Lorman, Fred Price, John Huebner, Allie Zech and Peter Olsem bowled in the tournament this week at Bensinger's West Randolph street alleys. They made a good showing in the five-men, two-men and individual events but do not expect to cop any of the prizes. William Wolf made a good showing in the tournament with a three game score of 552 pins, 203, 158 and 191. He won about $10 in prizes in the Business Men's tournament held recently.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report business as brisk with the outlook very encouraging for Mothers' day as far as the number of orders are concerned. This house will be well fixed on stock in general for this occasion but Mr. Pyfer is doubtful if there will be plenty of carnations to go around.

The Chicago Flower Grower's Association is booking a large number of orders for Mothers' day which call principally for roses and carnations. Manager Klingsporn says that his house will have a good supply of stock but is advising everyone to order early to avoid disappointment.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a splendid supply of roses and carnations in all the leading varieties which are in exceedingly brisk demand. Otto W. Freese says that orders for cut flowers are numerous for Mothers' day with the demand principally for roses and carnations.

Otto H. Hedrich, of Otto H. Hedrich & Co., has booked quite a number of orders for coal from the florists this season, whom he has served for so many years. He is helping out at the Cook County Fuel Administration but his business is going along uninterrupted.

Frank Woods, a florist formerly employed by Swain Nelson & Co., was found dead, April 28, in an alley near Wabash avenue and Lake street. A pruning knife was found near the body, and it is believed he committed suicide while despondent.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are featuring a particularly fine grade of calendulas which are second to none in quality in this market. This house reports a large number of inquiries for stock for Mothers' day, especially roses and carnations.

Peter Reinberg reports a heavy demand for stock for Mothers' day, especially for carnations, which are going to be exceedingly scarce compared to former years according to practically all the local wholesalers.

Kellogg M. Patterson, who graduated from the third officers' training camp at Rockford, is home on a leave of absence this week. He will be given a commission as second lieutenant as soon as a vacancy occurs.

Zech & Mann are handling a good supply of all the leading roses, particularly Ophelia which are exceptionally fine. Sweet peas are also seen in quantity at this establishment as well as fancy Darwin tulips.

Phil Schupp, manager at the J. A. Budlong store, speaks well of the pink rose Champ Weiland, which is quite a factor in this market and is in good demand by the city buyers.

Wietor Bros. bought $15,000 worth of Third Liberty Loan bonds, which helped considerably to boost the amount sold by the wholesale florists and growers in division 19.

George Furst, with the Raedlein Basket Co., who is in class 1, has passed the physical examination before his draft board and is awaiting his call to the colors.

Earl Poehlmann, eldest son of August Poehlmann, will leave this week with the drafted men from Morton Grove for Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, Mo.

Chris Pederson, 58 East Randolph street, received an order from France this week from one of the American officers over there representing a nice amount.

Andrew Chronis reports that James Moller, who assists him at the Fair, will leave with the drafted men from Wilmette for Jefferson Barracks May 2.

Anthony Paglino of A. Lange's staff joined the colors this week, making a total of six stars in the service flag of that establishment.

T. D. Long, representative of Vaughan's Seed Store, has returned from a prolonged southern trip and reports business good.

Quite a number of the volunteer Liberty Bond salesmen in the trade were represented in the big parade last week.

H. C. Blewitt, of Des Plaines, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of a sister-in-law whose death occurred last week.

The Central Floral Co. has a very attractive window display for Mothers' day, which is a credit to the proprietors.

George Asmus is scheduled to address the Retail Florists' Association of Pittsburgh on Publicity, May 7.

C. O. Wilcox, with the W. W. Barnard Co., is back from a southern trip.

30 E. Randolph Street, L. D. Phone, Randolph 6578. CHICAGO, ILL.

An interesting feature of the food conservation show under the auspices of the State Council of Defense on the fourth floor of the Public Library, north end, this week, was a miniature war garden with schedule showing dates on which the various crops should be planted, each succeeding day's sowing being represented in the beds of soil by colored markers. The house, chicken shed, shrubbery, etc., were all cleverly arranged and occupied a space about four by eight feet. Mrs. Carl Cropp, wife of Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Seed Store, and H. J. Stockmans, well-known nurseryman, planned the arrangement.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports heavy sales of gladiolus bulbs to be grown for cut flowers.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the above society was held at Lake Forest, Ill., April 6, with President Thomas Head in the chair. The exhibits were much admired and were awarded points as follows: Cinceraria stellata (a fine specimen staged by President Head) 95 points; 12 Ophelia roses by J. H. Francis, 95 points; 12 mixed carnations by John Kiley, 90 points; Asparagus Sprengeri, by George Wilson, 85 points. There was also a fine display of mushrooms, not for competition, by I resident Head. The judges were E. Bollinger, J. Fischer and F. Kuehne.

The National Association of Gardeners' essay, "The Relation of the Gardener to Civic Work", by L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo., was read by the secretary and proved a very interesting feature of the evening's programme. The members voted to adopt the resolution introduced by the Nassau County, N. Y., Horticultural Society, viz.: "Any member of another horticultural society, removing to this locality, may transfer his membership to this society, without payment of extra dues."

The annual dinner which was held April 8 was a great success. E. Bollinger acted as toastmaster and among the speakers of the evening were Acting-Mayor Dawson, President Head, George Wilson, and Messrs. Jackman and Hollister, who spoke on behalf of the government, asking the co-operation of all in the destruction of Berberis vulgaris and its varieties and in this way help to eradicate the wheat rust. The dinner was followed by an informal dance which was enjoyed by all present.

The supply in the market has shortened considerably and as it seems at this time, it will be rather meager for Mothers' day. The demand on the other hand is better and steadier than it was, and is keeping the market cleaned up. Many large orders for Mothers' day have already been placed. Roses are in a fair supply and are selling well. Carnations are not as plentiful as they were and clean up well. Sweet peas are in only fair supply. Easter lilies and callas are now proving good property. Some excellent snapdragons may be had. Cape jessamines from Texas are now available. Other offerings are Narcissus poeticus, calendulas, pansies and marguerites. New fern is in the market.

NOTES.

SUPPLY IS VERY SHORT.

Spring flowers in the form of pot plants are the only feature of stock that is short. Except for a very limited supply of hydrangeas and primroses, they have disappeared from the market. Roses and carnations are more than ample. Snapdragons have been coming in fine, but their season is on the wane. A threatened shortage of sweet peas is relieved by the first cuttings of the new crop which made their appearance this week. From present indications outdoor flowers will not figure much in Memorial day trade. It is predicted that both peonies and gladioli will come in too late. There promises to be an abundant crop of carnations to help out the situation. Porch box and yard planting is very active. Shrubbery work and landscape gardening were never so prosperous, owing to the killing effects of the past winter.

NOTES.

This city is to have a municipal rose garden located in Franklin park, near the conservatory. This is an outgrowth of agitation by the Columbus Horticultural Society, of which Professor Wendall Paddock, of Ohio State University, is president. One thousand rose plants will be set out. This will be the first city in the state to boast a rose garden. Public contributions to the garden are asked and will be received by Professor Paddock or Professor Alfred Hottes, university florist and secretary of the society, which has 125 members. The annual rose show will be held in June, as usual.

The chairman of the local Memorial day celebration announces that he has been advised by florists that practically every rosebush and honeysuckle vine in Columbus was winter killed. Citizens are urged to use every effort in providing any kind of flowers with which to help decorate the 3,300 graves of soldier dead that will demand attention.

A very beautiful window of the present week was a solid display made by T. J. Ludwig of calceolarias, or "knitting-bag flowers." They were grown at the Hellenthal range south of the city, and show a remarkable development of this old-fashioned flower, both in size of bloom and beauty and variety of colors.

A very attractive co-operative advertisement, taken part in by 12 local florists, appeared in a Sunday paper of April 28, an entire page being used in talking flowers for Mothers' day. The heading was an attractive design

BUSINESS BRISK DESPITE BAD WEATHER.

Unsettled weather, with rain, frost and low temperatures was the feature of the past week, but in spite of these conditions trade was good. Tulips, daffodils and narcissi are still seen in great quantities. Carnations are showing the effects of the weather and are getting smaller but roses in all varieties are good and the supply strong. Lilies are overabundant. There are a few Spanish iris shipments being received. Sweet peas show daily improvement and there is a great call for them. Snapdragons and stocks add to the variety. Blooming plants are scarce, hydrangeas and ramblers being the best sellers among the offerings.

NOTES.

H. E. Wilson and wife celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, April 30, at the home of their son, H. W. Wilson. An informal reception was held in the afternoon and many friends called to pay their respects.

AMPLE SUPPLY AND FAIR CALL.

Notwithstanding the activities of the Liberty loan, which with its meetings and parades has so engrossed and engaged the attention of all patriotic citizens the past week, there has been considerable demand, both local and out-of-town. There is plenty of stock in all lines with roses leading. The cool weather has brought a little touch of mildew here and there, but in the main the quality of the buds is fine. Snapdragon is now in full crop. Sweet peas are plentiful, as are white and yellow daisies. Darwin tulips and daffodils are seen in all the stocks in splendid condition. Larkspur, for some reason, is badly mildewed; it appears there is considerable yet to learn about the forcing of this hardy perennial. Easter lilies are still in over-supply, the result being low prices. Cattleyas, particularly Mossiae, are wonderfully good; many flowers are seen as large as gigas. There is plenty of lily of the valley, but we wonder how much longer that stock of pips will hold out. Florida asparagus sprays reach the market as fresh, apparently, as local stock. It comes through by parcel post in from two to three days, packed in light wooden boxes about the same capacity as for oranges. When the ends of the stems are wrapped in wet sphagnum, it takes a few more stamps, but the stock grades higher and sells to the last bunch.

PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The horticultural society is speeding up its activities and has announced the following programme of exhibitions. Peony show, June 4-5, at Fireman's hall, Bryn Mawr; sweet pea exhibition, June 25-26, in the Wanamaker store, Philadelphia; exhibition of out-door flowers and vegetables, Jenkintown club, Jenkintown, Pa.; dahlia and out-door flower and vegetable show, September 17-18, at Masonic hall, Ardmore, Pa.; annual chrysanthemum show and exhibition, First Regiment Armory, November 6-9. The door receipts of this show are to go to the Red Cross of this city.

WITH THE WHOLESALEERS.

The large warehouses of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., crowded with all the latest florist supplies, together with that of the Herrmanns New York store to which is now added the Reukauf supply house, makes theirs the premier stock in America. A great rush is now on for Memorial day supplies. Edward Reid has been laid up with pleurisy the past week. A tiresome job for such an active man. He is, we are happy to say, on the mend, and expects to be on the job in a day or two. A splendid lot of carnations are seen at this establishment. Roses and choice sweet peas are also specials.

The Jos. Heacock Co. is receiving large crops of roses, particularly White and Pink Killarney, but clean up very well every day. Prices are considered very fair.

The Leo Niessen Co. is handling large quantities of all kinds of stock daily and reports a very fair amount of business for the week. Roses, snapdragons, sweet peas and choice cattleyas are special features.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange finds business very fair. Easter lilies are hard to move, but their large stock of roses is in active demand.

Choice sweet peas, daffodils, Easter lilies and carnations were leaders in the Berger Brothers' stock. No kick about business was the good word here.

Choice carnations, sweet peas and roses, 57 varieties, more or less, keep the Eugene Bernheimer force busy these days.

NOTES.

Edward A. Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, was in town and expressed himself as being satisfied, considering the conditions, with the results of the season. He felt that the other growers of his locality, the old carnation belt of Chester county, would at least come out even, which was about as much, or even more, than was expected during the strenuous winter. Carnations were their main crop a few years ago, but these have been discarded for roses, which require much less labor and turn in more per square foot of space. Tomatoes, which succeeded sweet peas, in one large house, are now 24 inches high with the first fruits set about the size of cherries. These will be ready in June. Next season's bituminous coal was being put in; it cost on the siding, $5.50 per ton of 2,000 pounds, which is 50 cents less than last year. Mr. Harvey believes that growers should get all or at least 50 per cent of their supply at once, as the price is fixed and the satisfaction of having it on hand offsets the interest lost on the early investment.

The West Philadelphia Rod and Gun Club, of which Mark P. Mills is president, held a patriotic meeting and flag raising at the W. K. Harris greenhouses April 27. This is club headquarters. President Mills introduced Lieut. Harry W. Prince, son of John W. Prince, who is in the aviation corps at Fort Worth, Texas, and was home on a short furlough. In presenting the flag, he particularly impressed on his hearers the care of their flags, that when frayed and faded were no longer worthy to represent Old Glory and should be renewed. Flags, he said, were not carried in battle in this war as they gave information to the enemy. As the flag was run up and burst to the breeze, a shower of miniature flags floated out, which were given to the children. A two star service flag showed that two members had joined the colors. Patriotic addresses, full of fire and enthusiasm, were made by George H. Stein and J. Otto Thilow, both members of the club. The Star Spangled Banner and other patriotic songs were sung by all present. A line-casting contest at 50, 75 and 100 feet followed.

Charles Grakelow is a busy man these days, as chairman of his ward committee of business men and also the public school forces, attending from 10 to as many as 20 meetings a day at which he was for each, one of the principal speakers. He can surely be said to have done his duty in regards to the Liberty Loan. His committees have raised considerably over one million dollars. Charley is a most magnetic speaker, who radiates enthusiasm, for anything he takes up. He is quick at repartee and generally turns the joke on the other fellow that tries to heckle. With all this activity, business is good at the store, particularly in funeral work.

The London Flower Shop is busy with fancy garden tools and furniture, window boxes and spring plants. Mrs. Drew-Baer spent the last week end in a three days' motor trip through the Eastern shore of Maryland, where the dogwood was seen in full flower. She was very enthusiastic over the natural scenery. Her son, P. D. Drew-Baer, who joined the Royal Flying Corps, is at the front in France, where he has just been given his third gold stripe for three years of service.

C. U. Liggit, who is opening a wholesale house for the sale of plants, bulbs and seeds for florists, is temporarily located at 325 Bulletin building. He is on the lookout for a suitable store and warehouse in a central location, which by the time the autumn business opens he expects to have opened and fully equipped.

Habermehl's stores and greenhouses with their decorations and funeral orders are turning out a lot of work. Their Walnut street window in the Bellevue-Strafford store has been beautifully arranged the past week with plants, snapdragons, roses and cattleyas. Baskets of Sprenger are a feature.

Mark J. Mullin, parcel post expert, will address the florists' club at the May meeting next Tuesday evening on the subject of the efficiency of the parcel post in the delivery of plants and cut flowers.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are receiving orders almost faster than they can get them out. Sydney Bayersdorfer expects a great Memorial day rush from the way the advance business is coming in.

The J. G. Neidinger Co. is working over time in getting out wreath and spray orders for Memorial day. Waxed crepe flower and decorated magnolia wreaths are going out in thousand lots.

Martin Reukauf has sold his stock to H. Bayersdorfer & Co. and has cast his lot again as traveler for this firm. K.

Horticultural Society of New York.

An exhibition of this society will be held Saturday and Sunday, May 11-12, in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park. Premiums will be offered for collections of cut flowers of herbaceous plants, shrubs and trees, tulips, narcissi, snapdragons, and orchids, and for flowering plants of pelargonium and calceolaria. Special prizes may also be awarded for meritorious exhibits not provided for in the schedule. Schedules are now ready for distribution and may be had by application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York City.

Considering the fact that many of the best customers of the retail florists were, during the past week, exceptionally busy selling Liberty Bonds, business was not at all bad. Special American Beauty roses advanced to the rate of $50 per 100. The supply was light, but at this season the demand for them is supposed to be light. Other roses held up well, with a slight advance on exceptionally fine stock of some varieties. Good stock of Ulrich Brunner roses is now on the market and attracts considerable attention. It is a good red rose and, up to the end of June, may be expected to sell well. There is a plentiful supply of cattleyas on the market, and they do not clean up well, though good C. Mossiae are in demand. The average price for carnations is about $2.50 per 100. A few fancies go as high as $4, but again there is inferior stock that does not bring $2. Long-stem Spencer sweet peas are always in demand at fair prices, but at present the supply of special stock is limited. There is fine stock of Spanish iris on the market, which meets with a fair demand. Lilies continue in surplus. There is a normal demand, for the season, for lily of the valley. Although the weather of the past week was clear, it was also cool, which was favorable to stock and to the market. That was noteworthy in the case of tulips and narcissi, which are holding out well. Pansies, stocks, marigolds snapdragons and other minor stocks are plentiful enough to supply all demands.

April 29.—Yesterday was a fine spring day and counter trade seems to have been good with the retailers, consequently there is considerable buying this morning to replenish stock. Prices remain about the same as during the past week. The day opens with rain and fog, which, if continued, will not be favorable to business.

NOTES.

The afternoon of April 26, Liberty day, brought out a great parade, in which a number of florists joined. The sale of Liberty Bonds to florists has progressed favorably; A. T. Bunyard, president of the retail association, and George D. Nicholas, a prominent member of the Greek-American association, have been active in the good work.

At the store of James Weir, Inc., Fulton and Pierpont streets, Brooklyn, we noticed a patriotic decoration. A bust of Lincoln was draped with the national colors and there were a number of handsome Liberty posters, all being flanked by fine cut flowers and flowering plants.

Gust. Nikias, Third avenue and 166th street, has one of the best stores in Bronx borough. His business is good, and he has been buying Liberty Bonds.

Simon Hefele and wife, 3361 Third avenue, have been there 56 years and are fairly entitled to be classed as "oldest inhabitants." Both continue active.

At the store of A. Ehrmann, 2112 Broadway, there is always to be seen many artistic features in vases, flower bowls, butterflies, etc.

David Clarke's Sons, Broadway and 75th street, were exceptionally busy during the past week with weddings and funeral work.

Malandre Brothers, Broadway and 72nd street, are showing excellent features in plants, fine hydrangeas being noteworthy.

At the C. A. Dards store, Madison avenue and 44th street, it was stated that the week's business had been good.

Panarites & Doninas is a new firm that has recently taken the store at 3201 Third avenue.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, Eighth avenue and 23rd street, on the night of May 13. The exhibition committee of the club is anxious to have florists bring or send flowers to the meeting for exhibition. At late meetings the exhibits have fallen off. This is not a national or international exhibition for which stock is supposed to be specially grown, but a social gathering of friends. Many growers have good stock and can easily send a vase of something. If it is inconvenient for the grower to attend the meeting, he can send the stock to H. C. Riedel, of Riedel & Meyer, 49 West 28th street, to reach him before 6 P. M. of the above date, and it will be properly exhibited.

S. J. Kracke, formerly in the retail business at 3587 Broadway, is now a soldier at Camp Upton, L. I. Soon after he reported at camp, he was transferred to the base hospital and recently, he was promoted to the position of ward master. A brother, Martin, and a sister, Grete Kracke, both of whom are florists, recently arrived in this city from Switzerland. The brother is now employed on a private estate at South Cortwright, N. Y.

At the Hippodrome on the night of April 28, John McCormack, the noted singer, completed the $100,000 for the Red Cross which has been raised by his individual talent. For the occasion, P. F. McKenney, Fifth avenue and 42nd street, arranged a great bunch of special American Beauties. On a broad red ribbon was the inscription: "To John McCormick, Artist and Patriot—From Three American Mothers—God Bless You!"

In a patriotic effort to sell Liberty Bonds, Frank Nielsen the retailer of 17 East 28th street and 30 East 42nd street, gave each buyer of a bond a dollar's worth of fresh cut flowers or a dollar plant of their own selection. He had considerable success.

It was stated at the office of the Lord & Burnham Co., April 29, that the subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan by the florists and allied trades of this city, had then reached a total of $230,000.

William Nigro, late of William Kessler's staff, has enlisted in the army and is in the quartermaster's department of a southern camp. His parents are Italians.

Saunders & Co., who conduct the store known as "Esch, the Florist," 3279 Third avenue, also have a prosperous hardware store near by.

The Henshaw Floral Co., Inc., 127 West 28th street, is handling a good stock of roses, sweet peas and a great variety of other flowers.

J. J. Coan, 115 West 28th street, in addition to a staple supply of stock, is handling fine delphiniums.

Yonkers, N. Y.

Yonkers is a thriving city that may well be proud of both its commercial florists and the horticultural features of its private estates. Noteworthy among the latter is that of Col. W. B. Thompson, where R. M. Johnston is the head gardener. Col. Thompson had plenty of fuel last winter, but he preferred to shut down the greater part of his splendid conservatories in order to let his needy fellow citizens have the coal. Notwithstanding this handicap, a most creditable exhibit was made at the New York flower show. In addition to the conservatories, which are both elegant and substantial, the lawns, shrubbery and vegetable garden are all noteworthy. Mr. Johnston is greatly interested in war gardens and has written interesting articles on the subject. Some people seem to have the idea that when the owner of an estate makes a war garden, he ploughs up his fine lawns for that purpose. We do not believe that anything of the kind has been done, nor is there any necessity for doing it, as there is usually land to spare on such places without encroaching on that which has been treated by the landscape gardener. The ambition of amateur gardeners to increase the food supply is admirable and commendable, and they deserve encouragement, but it is right in the line of the professional gardeners on private estates to extend their activities in vegetable growing and more may be expected of them. As food producers, we have little faith in city or community gardens. They may serve for diversion and for healthful exercise—they have even been used for political advertising—but it is an old and true saying that "Too many cooks spoil the broth."

Another of the noteworthy private estates of Yonkers is "Greystone," once the country home of the late Samuel J. Tilden, one time governor of New York and prominent as a candidate for president. Some years ago it was purchased by Samuel Untermyer, a prominent lawyer, who has made it one of the show places of Yonkers. It has fine conservatories and attractive features, overlooking (like the Thompson estate) the magnificent Hudson river.

COMMERCIAL FLORISTS OF YONKERS.

The business of Mrs. Milliot, 18 North Broadway, one of the oldest, if not the oldest, in the city, is now conducted by a son and two daughters, one of the daughters being the buyer in the New York market. Louis Milliot, who is a member of the New York Florists' Club, manages the greenhouses, which are some distance from the store.

William Macdonald, of the Macdonald Floral Co., with a good store at Getty Square, has recently been appointed park commissioner and has entered upon his duties. As he has been reared in the business, his father, the late Peter Macdonald, having been an experienced florist and gardener, he is well fitted for the position.

The New York Floral Co., which has a fine store at the corner of Manor House square and North Broadway, recently opened another store at No. 2 Main street.

The MacHenry store, 37 Palisade avenue, is a long established business. We found the store well stocked with cut flowers, seeds and bedding plants.

The Hollywood Florist has a good store at 36 South Broadway, and Manager Cullen advised us that they have had a good season. A. F. F.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

MOTHERS' DAY SHORTAGE FEARED.

The weather has been very cold and rainy, but the demand has held up well under these disagreeable conditions, and the demand for shrubs, vines, and other plants, and wedding work has kept pace with the call for funeral work which has been very heavy. Counter trade has held its own, and flowers for the hospitals were no small part of this branch of the trade. Out-of-town business was heavy, especially in funeral flowers, and everyone reports a satisfactorily busy week. A great scarcity of flowers is predicted for Mothers' day, on account of the unfavorable growing weather of the past several weeks. Prices are predicted to be high for this occasion, and it will be the case of the early bird getting the worm, when it comes to ordering flowers for this day from the wholesalers.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. is holding a sale of rose plants this week. They are specializing in bedding and vegetable plants of all kinds this year. They had a heavy demand for out-of-town work.

The Freese Floral Co. had a record week, with funeral work in the heaviest demand. They report a fine crop of roses, carnations and sweet peas at their greenhouses for the Mothers' day trade.

Weddings and funerals combined to keep all hands busy at the establishment of A. J. Lanternier & Co. They report flowers scarce and hard to obtain. Some good roses were noted here.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting heavily on orchids and roses. The demand is excellent here, but the outlook for Mothers' day is that flowers will be at a premium.

A fine crop of Easter lilies are on at the greenhouses of the Doswell Floral Co. This firm reports a big demand with a great scarcity of stock with which to meet it. H. K.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Blackman announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Nell Blackman, and Arthur E. Miller, April 29. At home after June 1, at 607 Taylor avenue.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

CALIFORNIA seed growers are again complaining of drought.

VISITED CHICAGO: H. G. Windheim, of the Nebraska Seed Co., Omaha, Neb.

W. J. SMART, Chicago representative of Weeber & Don, New York, was drafted this week.

SEEDS of soy beans, food peas, as well as rape seed, are said to be on the Japan prohibition list.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The rainfall for the season to April 28 was 13.43 inches; last season, 14.99 inches.

J. COURTINE, representing Bremond Freres, French bulb growers, is expected in America about the middle of May.

A TENNESSEE authority says: "Patriotism and profit both urge the farmer to increase, rather than decrease, his potato acreage."

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade May 1 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.25 per 100 pounds.

SEEDSMEN find it difficult to wait five and six days so near planting time for Washington permits to send small lots of sweet corn, peas and beans to Canada.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district were offered this week at $1.25 to $1.50 per bushel but moved slowly; most other markets report supply exceeding the demand. This condition affords good opportunity for amateur war gardeners to plant for big crops of storage onions.

TOLEDO, O.—March clover, cash, was lower April 29, at $18.40, closing at the same price as on April 27. Receipts were 5 bags, shipments, 9. Timothy was 5 to 10 cents lower for October, old quoted at $3.85; new, $3.90; April $3.90; September, $4.60, and October, $4.35.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The A. J. Brown Seed Co. says the season is fully up to last year's standard and while the tendency on grass seed prices has been above normal, there is now a downward movement. The onion set supply is nearly exhausted, but the demand is weak and prices are low. Warehouses of the firm are now located at three western points. President Brown will start next week on an inspection trip and later will visit California.

MADISON, WIS.—The demand for garden seeds, according to the L. L. Olds Seed Co., is not keeping up with that of last year, orders showing a falling off of from 10 to 25 per cent since the first of April, compared with the corresponding period in 1917. Clover prices are lower with the season about over but timothy is higher. The supply of onion sets has been equal to the demand but they are not keeping well and it is believed they will be out of the market very soon. Prices are $2 to $2.50 per bushel for colors and $3 for white.

C. C. MORSE & Co., the well known seed growers of San Francisco, Calif., are considering the advisability of renaming the ultramarine blue pansy, Emperor William, proposing Hail Columbia as a substitute. This pansy was so called after the first emperor of that name. We would prefer Columbia as a new name, rather than Hail Columbia. The renaming has been prompted by customers who complained of the old name.

French Bulb Prices.

Cable advices of April 29 indicate that the Growers' Syndicate named on the Sunday previous a rate of 135 francs for white Roman hyacinths, run of the crop, and 37 francs for Narcissus Paper White grandiflora, presumably entire crop above 13 centimeters. Whether jobbers will accept stocks from growers at these high first hand prices is problematic. The estimates of American requirements of Paper White narcissus for the coming season, with 50 per cent full restriction, varies from 40 to 65 per cent of last year's supply.

Recent good rains have fallen in the bulb districts, enhancing crop prospects.

Recommendations of Advisory Committee.

At a recent meeting at Washington, D. C., of an advisory committee consisting of 23 agricultural and live stock producers from all parts of the United States, in consultation with the department of agriculture and the food administration, recommendations were made as follows:

In view of the fact that the foreign supply of vegetable seeds is practically cut off by reason of war conditions, all growers of vegetables are urged to save seed for themselves as far as practicable and to conserve such supplies of seed as may come into their possession.

That the national seed surveys conducted semi-annually and the seed reporting service are extremely valuable in supplying information to both farmer and seedsman, thereby lessening the opportunity for profiteering, and it is recommended that this service be made a part of the work of the department of agriculture.

It is urged that the field inspection of field grains be extended as far as possible and that the various states supplement the federal appropriations and co-operate to the fullest extent.

Steps should be taken immediately to conserve the supplies of buckwheat seed now in danger of being consumed as food.

That the committee on seed stocks should take definite steps to supply necessary quantities of good stocks of millet seed for sowing for seed, feed and forage purposes.

That moderate priced alfalfa seed be accumulated at convenient points in the northwest or information disseminated as to where it can be obtained and the local production of this crop encouraged.

Thomas A. Cox, president of the Pa-cation to the United States food administrator for that state, says that with indications of a record yield of seed in many varieties and traffic con-jurious congestion in the movement of the 1918 crops immediately after har-

Vegetable Growers' Co-Operative Publicity

At a joint meeting of seedsmen, vegetable growers and commission men, presided over by W. F. Therkildson, of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., held at the Poor Richard Club in that city, April 19, announcement of which was made in these columns last week, the sum of $25,000 was immediately subscribed, which amount will probably be increased to $50,000, to offset the competition of nationally advertised products that come into that city by trainloads, when, as a matter of fact, some of the best market gardeners in the world are in close proximity. Another feature of the campaign will be to exploit the use of vegetables in greater quantities, supplementing the advertising with information as to how to cook and prepare the various products, together with growers' and dealers' helps. As will be remembered, Mr. Therkildson originated the plan for the national campaign for publicity for flowers adopted at the convention of the Society of American Florists in New York last year, and which is already producing splendid results with its slogan, "Say It With Flowers," and his identification with the movement of the market gardeners augurs much for its success. Officers have been elected and the organization will be completed at a meeting scheduled to be held May 1.

Beans.

At this time it is well to "know beans," for this plant has come into more than ordinary prominence owing to the food situation. The subject, beans, covers a wide field—snap beans, shelled kidney beans, lima beans, navy beans, canned beans, and possibly soy beans; to these we may add that some varieties are quite ornamental and could be classed as decorative climbers, combining beauty and utility. The culture of beans is generally well understood, yet there are a few valuable points not so well known, which we wish to bring forth. The first one is the fact, that all beans resent windy locations. They flourish where air currents are intercepted, yet light is ample. This condition is easily afforded by a cornfield with a scant stand of corn, or a young orchard or a wind break. Second, the wide belief that beans thrive on poor soil is unfounded. We never raised a good crop on poor soil any more than any other crop. They flourish with a good supply of humus, bone meal and water. We find that Skinner irrigation suits them exactly. Third, we have never had as good crops on lime stone soils as on sandstone soils. We attribute this not to the presence of lime, for they thrive with lime, but to the fact that the sand stone soils are warmer, better drained and less compact.

Of varieties, we have so many as to bewilder the beginner, but we can very soon skim off what we want. In our market, we eliminate wax beans entirely, as they are considered inferior, hence do not sell. Among the green varieties, we distinguish between round podded and flat varieties. Stringless Greenpod is a good example of the first, and Bountiful of the latter. Canners do not like flat beans, and in our market the round pods are also preferred. In Europe, pole beans are esteemed as much superior to bush beans; but in this country, owing to expense of poles and high winds, pole beans are not popular. The exception to this is Kentucky Wonder, which is a good kind to grow in corn fields; but outside by itself it does not thrive so well. Among the limas, we have both bush and pole varieties. With us, bush limas are not popular, owing to small yields. The poles are generally set three feet by three feet and four tied together at the top to form a strong windbrace. The navy or white soup bean is handled as a field crop like wheat, dried and threshed when ripe. They should go into rows 28 inches by 30 inches apart for horse cultivation, the seed planted when settled warm weather has come, say June 1. Plant close in the row and keep clean. The soy bean is used as a soil-renovator, as a food for stock, and also for human food. Its culture is similar to navy beans. This bean also can be used for making hay.

MARKETMAN.

Kansas City.

SUPPLY VERY LIMITED.

We have experienced a week of hard rains and a heavy snowfall and stock has not been plentiful with the exception of roses, which were forced to shoulder the burden and went scarce at times. The supply of pot plants has also diminished. Business in the wholesale market is good as far as the supply goes and the retail stores report a heavy week of funeral work. Hospital orders are also numerous and a few weddings also are reported. The growers are busy getting their bedding stock in shape. From all indications the spring business will be good.

Forty-third annual convention will be held

THE United States department of agriculture has issued Farmer's Bulletin 917, entitled "Growing Peaches," included in its 44 pages being much of interest regarding sites and cultural methods.

Co-Operative Nursery Development.

In presenting some suggestions for a national co-operative business-building campaign for nurserymen, Joseph J. Lane, of Garden Magazine, says:

"It is gratifying to report now, that a body of nurserymen elected themselves to carry out the plan to create new business for nurserymen. Let us give thanks. And then, let us proceed to further suggestions, for I believe that the time is right here for us all to put our shoulders to the wheel that the big broad plan of creating more business for all, by co-operating individually to the fullest extent of our abilities, be furthered with the greatest degree of success and rapidity.

"Time is short. Life is only a span of years. Today is the only time we have these 24 hours which God has given us to use to the fullest. Let us be active. Let us not delay.

"You are a partner in any plan that means bigger business for nurserymen—because bigger business for nurserymen means bigger business for you. I'll tell you how. Let us assume the present campaign for funds rolls up a working capital sufficient to start the work of broadening the appreciation of the general public of things horticultural. Magazines and newspapers begin to look upon nurserymen as real live business men, progressive, and aggressive.

"The bulletins to the press preaching the gospel of an 'America Beautiful' have begun to appear in publications of broad circulation, and advertisements of nurserymen keep pace with the endeavor to cultivate a desire for gardens and grounds of individual beauty and naturalness. And—more of the same sort. Advertisements over the name of the subscribers to the fund appear in class publications preaching the value of factory planting and restful and financial values of a real planting around the home, the need and results of fruit planting on the home grounds, etc.

"What is the result? First, the nurserymen themselves by collectively appealing to the public in a propaganda to foster a deeper and finer appreciation of horticulture, are ennobled themselves and drawn together for the common good. Trade differences, narrowness and selfish competition give way to the millennium of ceaseless co-operation and unified effort along constructive and creative lines that all may be benefited. And let me say here, that if no other benefit than this came from the expenditure, it would repay every participant a thousand fold.

"The public begins to sense the need of the nature of their lives. The inherent desire for beauty and soul strength that lives in all of us is brought to the point of action. By creating a deeper appreciation in the public mind of the service nurserymen render, they as a group gain confidence in their operation and pride in their calling. Instead of remaining individual enthusiasts, they become a group having a noble ideal—the creation of a 'Beautiful America.' And increased business begins to come to each of them. Mass publicity has effectiveness that the individual propaganda never dreamed of.

"The national campaign of public education of the value of national beauty in the lives of our people gathers momentum and lecturers begin to spread the gospel under associated direction. People hitherto inclined to scorn a salesman of flowers or nursery products, send invitations to the same salesman to come and prepare planting lists.

"Increasing planting of nursery products has as its fundamental thought the creation of a greater appreciation on the part of the American public of the benefits of garden activity and every branch of the horticultural industry will be benefited."

Fruit Nurserymen's Selling Suggestions.

Are fruit nurserymen slackers? Do they intend to ignore means that lie within their power to help America win this war? Do they intend to allow themselves to be put out of business? Or will they get busy and seize the present crisis to awaken America to the realization of a neglected source of food supply? Thus they will help themselves to the biggest selling argument ever presented an industry and by so doing gain for themselves the distinction of being patriotic in the highest degree.

That's a long paragraph—a lot to digest at one reading. You'd better read it again to gain the full force of the questions. The situation is one of utmost seriousness. Will the nurserymen having fruit stock growing in their nurseries awake to a full realization of the crisis our country faces and in which they can be of so great a help?

President Wilson in his memorable message to the American people a year ago, sounded this keynote:

"The world's food reserves are low, Not only during the present emergency but for some time after peace shall have come, both our own people, and a large proportion of the people of Europe must rely upon the harvests in America."

This is the condition. What are we doing to meet it? During the past 12 months the American people have had directed to them the greatest cannonade of publicity on the subject of food production and food conservation in the memory of mankind. War gardens have sprung up everywhere. Canning clubs have gained members with greatest rapidity, and education to new processes has been complete and extraordinarily profitable to the food administration.

As facts stand now, no concerted effort has been directed to the subject of food production through the medium of fruit planting. This fact is regrettable. We are already mourning the lack of initiative that allowed such a condition to be possible. This will be a long war. Conditions of food supply become more important every day. Every day that passes without our determined action to capitalize upon conditions, means just so much more accumulated criticism we will either receive or give ourselves in years to come.

The devastation of the orchards of France are definitely a call to us to greater activities to take up the slackened source of supply and render it more prolific.

First we should help the public to an appreciation of the benefit of planting small fruits—for immediate production of foodstuffs: Raspberries, strawberries, blackberries, currents, gooseberries and grapes. If we neglect this, we will place ourselves liable to the criticism of being unpatriotic—and will deserve the title. Next we must in our advertising and sales methods, convince the people of the present need of planting fruit trees for the food they will bear in years to come. Past methods are gone and forgotten. We are facing a new era in the history of life in this country, and the world over.

I do not claim to be a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but I do assert that if fruit nurserymen do grasp these facts as here presented and as their thoughts will lead them to realize, and act to achieve the ideal in fruit planting in their country, they will draw to themselves one of the greatest sources of constant revenue that has ever been offered the industry.—Joseph J. Lane of Garden Magazine.

Omaha.

Local growers are planning what action they will take following the notification of the fuel administration to reduce coal consumption one-half during the ensuing year. Lewis Henderson says he will close half of his houses in the fall and let them freeze up. This he had already planned to do, regardless of the government's order, in order to save expenses; but he will operate his range to its fullest capacity as late in the fall as possible and then close at least five houses. He has opened a branch store in South Omaha to take care of his trade there.

J. J. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, in discussing the fuel situation, stated he looked for a modification of the order before fall. He is of the opinion that he might as well close his range entirely as to try to run half of the houses with any degree of economy. The motor truck service, which is developing rapidly in the east, may also spread to this section by fall, in which case the coal situation will doubtless be relieved and fuel will be available.

The farm is said to be one of the finest in Michigan, in the heart of the sugar beet district. The consideration is said to have been $75,000. THE FIFTY PER CENT FUEL ORDER.

Expressions by Some Prominent Members of the Trade.

Small Growers Hard Hit

ACCORDING TO S. A. F. SECRETARY.

The question of how much coal florists will be allowed to use next winter has been settled by the order which the fuel administration has issued, and it appears to be up to the florists to adapt their establishments to the conditions facing them. The secretary's office has received communications from many florists who appear to think that the society should make some effort to obtain a modification of the order, but such florists should remember that when the society's delegation had a hearing before the commission last December the body was distinctly given to understand that while the florist industry was not likely to be classed as a non-essential one the florists would be limited to coal supplies one-third to one-half of their usual requirements.
The order has followed, as was expected.

The smaller florists, whose livelihood results from the operation of a single greenhouse, or perhaps small ranges of less than 10,000 square feet, will feel the pinch most. Many of these have expressed their helplessness, and not a few will be driven out of business altogether or compelled to close down until such time as a normal condition in the fuel supply is again experienced.

With a view to urging upon the commission the advisability of making some concession to this class of florists, many of whom would, perhaps, find it difficult to apply themselves to any other occupation, the secretary has addressed the following letter to our Washington representative, Wm. F.
Gude, who is best able to take the initiative in the matter:

My dear Mr. Gude:

Judging from the inquiries received at this office, florists generally are trying to make the best of the situation presented by the fuel order recently issued by the commission. While in the main the order manifests the spirit of conservation, it also, through neglect to establish a point where real equity begins, creates a condition which is unjust to the "little fellow."

For instance: You know very well that we have a large number of florists in a small way, whose glass areas run from one house, say, 25x100 feet (2,500 square feet) to plants of two houses of the same size, equaling 5,000 square feet, and so on up to 10,000 square feet.
You know, also, that by working from sunup to sundown, and later even by lantern use, these florists are able to produce good stock, but make only a bare living; in fact, with the high prices of everything today, it is a wonder to many of us how they can eke out an existence.

In the fuel order there is no provision for cases of this character, and the living of such men must be absolutely cut in half. In the proportioning of the income tax, and in many other cases where a basis for a tax or regulation of an economic character has been determined upon by the government, some thought has been given as to the point where the ax should fall—but not so in this fuel order. The bigger fellows can stand it for a year or more—it may affect their profits, but it does not diminish their supply of necessary bread and butter.

I do hope that you can arrange for a hearing on or a consideration of this point, as I do not think this particular phase of the conservation idea has been properly thought out by the fuel administration as far as the particular type of florists mentioned is concerned. Most of these poor people, too, have for years been obliged to grow and sell vegetable plants in season, as well as flowers, in order to make their businesses provide requirements of soul and body.

Another injustice, as I take it, is the unnecessarily sweeping character of the order, in that it places an embargo on fuel of all descriptions—which must mean wood, although it is not specifically mentioned as included. We all know that many florists in outlying districts have a little wood on their properties, or are so situated that they could procure a little from nearby sources, and thus temper the situation without prejudicing the idea of fuel conservation in any way, for such fuel would only have local value and could not be considered in a commercial sense.

Do you think it possible that these facts could be brought to the notice of the commission, in the hope that they might receive consideration?

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

The Situation at Philadelphia.

The order of the federal fuel administration to the coal dealers of this city is as follows: "Greenhouses, public and private, can receive in the whole year, beginning April 1, 1918, and ending March 31, 1919, not more than 50 per cent of the average amount of coal consumed in such greenhouses during the three year period, April 1, 1915, to April 1, 1918. This applies to all kinds of coal of every description, and until further notice they cannot receive more than two-thirds of the 50 per cent."

The trade in and about this city, after the great difficulties that were overcome the past severe winter, appear to take the new order of the fuel administration very philosophically. Quite a number have been on the job since the cessation of the severe weather, and if they are enabled to add their 50 per cent allotment to the recent accumulations, will be able to pull through next winter in good shape.

J. D. Eisele of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., reports that at Riverton, if they can get the full allotment the rating calls for, they will be able to get through the coming winter with safety. Notwithstanding the extreme weather of the past winter, they burned less coal than for several years. They cut temperatures from 60° down to 55° and even 50° and others in relative degrees. He was astonished to see what a saving of coal there was in even lowering the temperature five degrees. Owing to labor conditions, they were not in shape to run their range to its full capacity. He felt that he would not like to go through the experience of the past year again in this respect. There is as much business offering now, or even more than they can handle. He takes a hand in the packing shed to help out at every opportunity, and has packed more plants this spring than he has altogether in the past 20 years.

W. K. Harris believes that florists should accept the situation, get in all the coal their allotment calls for and then hope that conditions will so improve later that a new ruling will result. The difference of the Easter period of three weeks will alone save almost one-third of the fuel the coming season. His advice is to lay low, and as far as fuel is concerned, keep out of the limelight. Recent advices from the bituminous regions, he said, were encouraging, a large supply being available if transportation was possible.

The Robert Craig Co. expects to close its 49th street greenhouses after the chrysanthemum season, to open again in early spring. This will enable them to get along fairly well with their allotment running their large Norwood ranges almost to capacity.

George Burton believes the trade should depend on their old time dealers and keep away from the various fuel commissions. They will be sure to get their allotments, and more if possible. The craft is, he feels sure, loyal to the core, and doing what they can both in men and money to stand by the government. They must, however, keep up their earning power to as high an efficiency as possible, so as to be able to respond to future calls.

The Jos. Heacock Co. will take its allotment with thanks. It has been able the past season, even in spite of the severe strain, to save coal by reducing temperatures in both palm and rose houses. In common with other growers, they hope for a new ruling in the late summer that will give an additional supply.

The several large growers of the Lansdowne district are planning to run their establishments so as to conform to their fuel allotments, if there is not enough to see them through the winter. Labor troubles, in addition, may compel the closing of some of the houses.

John Stephenson's Son may be obliged to close down altogether, as it would hardly pay to run his large house for half the season. He is awaiting developments.

New York and Vicinity.

Florists should not have been greatly surprised at the order of the federal fuel administration which cuts their supply of coal 50 per cent, for they were warned of its possibility as long ago as last January. Since that time, and particularly within the past month, the trend of events connected with the war has made it plain that a much larger supply of coal for government purposes will be required this year and for an indefinite period. Some growers visited have already a considerable glass area in vegetable plants, which they are selling and (in cases where they have the land) planting out. We have found several growers who have large areas of glass in roses and carnations who have not yet decided what is the best course for them to pursue.

It has been rumored that a delegation of growers who ship to the New York market will go to Washington and make an effort to have the order modified. A number of well informed men believe that such a course would be useless. The views of a number of well known growers follow:

Eugene Dailedouze, of Dailedouze Bros., Brooklyn, N. Y., said that the order would cause hardship, particularly to small growers, but the main idea is "to beat the Germans." He hopes the order as it stands or if modified will be impartially enforced.

W. G. Badgley, a grower of Chatham, N. J., and its mayor, who also is a partner in a New York wholesale store, said he was willing to give up all the coal to win the war.

Herman C. Steinhoff, of West Hoboken and West Norwood, N. J., is doing quite a business in vegetable plants. He says it is impossible to get suitable help and he prefers shutting down his houses to having trouble about coal.

Louis Schmutz, Jr., of Brooklyn, recently secured a quantity of coal, for which he paid over $9 per ton. He says that coal prices in Brooklyn are not impartially graded.

Alfred Demeusey, of Brooklyn, believes that winning the war is the paramount object and he expects to shut down half his range.

A member of the firm of Noe & Ruzicka, of Madison, N. J., who have a large area in roses, said he could not yet state just what his firm would do.

A. F. F.

Fuel Regulation and Commercial Grower.

Paper read at a meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, Indianapolis, May 7, by Anders Rasmussen, New Albany.

Gentlemen:

You will pardon me, that I, in this paper, have largely presented my individual case. I have done this, first; because I want to deal in certainties, give real facts, and not presume, and second, that I represent that class of ADIANTUM FARLEYENSE GLORIOSA.

As Grown by John B. Urquhart, Superintendent Gov. Beekman's Gardens, Newport, R. I.

florists who will suffer most from the order of the fuel administrator, namely the wholesale grower, who has all he possesses, practically, invested in his business, and who besides, carries rather heavy obligations. (With us, incurred in rebuilding our plant after the cyclone last year.)

To the florist who retails most of his stock, the loss, while considerable, will not be so great. As the largest part of his business is funeral work, he can substitute when fresh flowers are scarce.

In the preamble to the order it is stated that the fuel administrator has held several conferences with representatives of the trade. I do not know who those men were, but they must have been florists who do not grow for wholesale, only, or who do not depend on their business only, for their living, or they would not have agreed that the florists can keep their organizations intact during the war on a 50 per cent coal supply. The saving of the most valuable plants only applies to a very few commercial florists.

The issuing of the order at this time is also ill-advised. If we had been notified February 1, we could have saved the expense of propagating so much young stock. We have on hand, approximately, $4,000 worth of young roses, and carnations, plants, that of course, are unsalable, as everybody will have a surplus. If we could cut our expenses in two by closing down half our greenhouses, our net income would be cut only 50 per cent, but this is impossible.

1. Our taxes will not be reduced.
2. Interest on borrowed money will be the same.
3. Where as with us, a central heating plant is used, it will require three firemen, working eight hour shifts and one temperature man, the same as when we run the whole plant.
4. We employ one stenographer-bookkeeper, whom we would have to retain.
5. In the refrigerating season, it will require one man to run machinery, the same as now.
6. We would have to retain our only salesman.
7. Our banker will require us to carry the same heavy life insurance to make their loan safe.
8. The depreciation in the unheated and unused greenhouses will be tremendous, even if we are fortunate enough not to have them destroyed by heavy snows.
9. Our telephone bills will not be reduced.
10. Other smaller expenses, too numerous to mention, would go on as usual.

If the order is not modified, it will mean, with us, the imposing of an indirect tax, in percentage far in excess of that paid by the largest incomes in the country, and will undoubtedly throw many florists into bankruptcy.

When the government took over the railroads, they guaranteed the owners against loss, which was right. If the government has to take half the normal coal supply from the florist, or any other legitimate industry, why should they not recompense them for their loss, the same as they do the railroads? Curtailing our coal supply without compensation, virtually amounts to the same as taking the railroads, without paying the owners for their use.

If it becomes necessary, the florist, in common with his fellow citizens, will give all he has for his country, but it is manifestly unjust to load the financial burden of the war on one class of citizens and guarantee others against loss. It would be a poor way of demonstrating to the world that we are fighting for democracy.

We had voluntarily arranged our crops for the coming season so as to be able to save approximately, 25 per cent of our fuel. By that arrangement we had figured we could pull through, live, and pay our obligations. We did not figure a cent for interest on our investment nor for depreciation, to our plant, which today, could not be replaced for a quarter million dollars. We are satisfied if we can make a bare living, and save our property while the war lasts and I believe this is the attitude of most florists.

I would recommend that every florist in the United States write his congressman and two senators. I cannot believe that congress will want an injustice done to a business that contributes so much to the enjoyment of life and comfort to troubled hearts the world over, and I would further urge that this society appoint a committee; if possible, one man from each congressional district in Indiana to go at once to Washington, to place the matter before our representatives in Congress.

Lands End, Newport, R. I.

Land's End, the most southerly point of Newport, R. I., the location of the residence of Governor Beekman, of that state, presents from its spacious, well-kept lawn and sturdy, rock-bound coast, a grand view of the ocean. Upon a visit to this estate, and under the guidance of John B. Urquhart, superintendent, the writer had the pleasure of inspecting the eight greenhouses, most of which are of the curvilinear type affording the side benches ample head room, and comprising the glass at this place. Entering through the potting shed, one's attention is attracted to the large number of first prize cards and certificates of merit that are framed and practically cover the side walls. These were won at the leading flower shows held throughout New England and the middle states, and after viewing the stock raised in these houses, the quality of the same would convince even the most skeptical that the awards were won on merit. Every available inch of space is devoted to stock that would gladden the heart of the rankest pessimist.

The first house visited was given over to growing bulbous stock, included in the list being narcissi, lilies, freesias, hyacinths, etc. A bench of Euphorbia Jacquinæflora with bracts of brilliant colored flowers, one of the handsomest winter-flowering plants suitable for vase decoration, was much

PLANT NOTES.

Rambler Roses.

The rambler roses for Memorial day will demand constant attention, for at this season of the year aphids and red spider increase very rapidly if the conditions are propitious. It is far better to keep these insects down by proper culture than to be obliged to resort to measures to kill them. Give the plants all the ventilation possible, but drafts will often cause mildew on the soft foliage, so these must be guarded against especially, and low ventilation, such as open doors with the wind drawing through the houses. Syringe thoroughly on bright days. There is no better prevention for red spider than a good syringing that will reach the under side of the leaves, which will quickly break up the colonies of spiders that gather there. If the plants require fumigation it should be light, for often the young foliage is very tender and heavy fumigation with smoke quickly burns it. Where the pots are full of roots a watering with liquid manure or a mulch of sheep manure mixed with sifted soil will be found very beneficial and will add a lustre to the foliage and deepen the color of the flowers.

Pansies.

The sale of pansy plants will soon be at its height and there is nothing that the florist or grower sells upon which more time is wasted than in selecting a small order of pansies if the customer is shown a frame of a few thousand plants. The better way is to have boxes or baskets holding a dozen plants all made up for the customer. It is not necessary to put up more than will be required for one or two days' sale, but as fast as sold keep the stock replenished. There are many patrons who will be well satisfied with a good selection already placed in a basket, who will take an hour of a salesman's time in making their choice out of a frame. Any late seedlings should be planted in the frames at once, and these will make fine plants for late May or June planting when the older plants are either sold or have become too large for bedding purposes.

Primulas.

For plants of both P. sinensis and obconica for blooming next spring, May is the best time to sow the seed, which germinates very readily at this time, but if this is delayed until June it will often be found quite difficult to get the seed to start well, and as the young seedlings grow very slowly they will require constant attention during the warm weather, for a few hours' sun when they are dry will cause the loss of all the plants. The soil should be sifted in a fine sieve, as the seed is very small, and they should not be covered with the soil, but sown thinly on the soil when loose and then pressed flat with a board. Watering should be done with a very fine rose on the can, so as not to wash the seeds or soil. At this season of the year the seed will germinate readily in almost any greenhouse, but it is well to cover the seed pan or box with glass to prevent too rapid evaporation and until the plants begin to make growth keep the pots well shaded. Many growers wrap a piece of paraffine paper around the glass that is placed on the seed pan. This allows plenty of light to germinate the seed and will prevent the direct rays of the sun from burning up the young seedlings when they start to grow. As these young plants grow very slowly, some soils will often become caked or scaly, and if this occurs the top should be carefully broken up to allow the air to enter. As soon as three or four leaves are formed pot in 2½-inch pots, not too deeply, but yet deep enough to have them stand erect. They should then be placed in a cool house, and much of the success of their culture depends upon the care and watering in their early growth. They are a moisture-loving plant and should never become dry; yet they are easily overwatered and will not make a good growth if continually kept soaked. Frequent and light waterings are the best. A lightly shaded frame with the pots plunged in the soil and the sash lifted at top and bottom for a free circulation of air is the best location for summer culture.

Asters.

The early and midseason asters should be planted out as early as the season will allow. If the plants are hardened off for two or three weeks in a cold frame and gradually given night air as soon as safe, they will endure the outside temperature much better than those carried directly from the warm greenhouse. The land should be prepared at once, and while asters will grow on almost any piece of ground, the success or failure depends much on the proper preparation of the soil. Land that was manured last fall and plowed is by far the best, and all that will be required in the spring is a shallow plowing or disking and then leveled. It is well not to level off too large a tract at once, for heavy rains occur at this season which pack the soil down hard. Before planting give the young plants a thorough watering and if in boxes or on the bench cut through the rows with a knife a day before planting. Lay the field out in rows from 15 to 20 inches apart, giving the branching varieties the greater distance, with a wider space every fifth or sixth row to provide a walk when cutting the flowers, and set the plants from 12 to 18 inches apart. Plant with a trowel, for the plants set in a dibbled hole will not take hold as quickly, and with the early asters the slight difference in time taken in planting is more than made up in the early blooming; the dibble packs the soil around the plant and the roots do not grow into it as freely, and the roots are also contracted in the small hole made by the dibble. As soon as the field is planted, if possible, give the plants a good watering and then cultivate lightly with a wheel hoe to loosen up the soil.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The past week has, we hope, been a busy one for all, culminating in a record-breaking business for Mothers' day, as I feel sure it has for all those who featured the event and were prepared to make the most of the opportunity.

All efforts should now be directed toward Memorial day, which is the closing event of the season, repeating again the admonition about preparedness, which is such a stepping-stone to success. I feel sure that every successful man adopts this plan of looking ahead, preparing and making up stock that can be used as the time approaches to feature the day and supply the demand that such publicity creates. A good stock of wreaths of all the standard prepared leaves in various shades should be on hand in excess of any expected demand, as they are good the season round. To have to stop on any busy day to make up such pieces, to be decorated with fresh flowers for funeral work, takes up valuable time that would be available for other and more pressing purposes.

The windows, in their decorative effect, should carry some reference to the day, which in the last two weeks of the month should be made as strong as possible. Southern peonies, which are now being offered freely, can be used to advertise the local stock which is such a factor at Memorial day.

Porch boxes for all summer will now be in demand; quite a trade can be worked up for these decorative effects for the veranda. If possible, prospects are shown, by photos of other work, how they might improve their property in the same manner. Salesmen should always be prepared to give prices and clinch the order, if possible, when first impressions are made.

It is well now to look closely over the accounts and get busy with the tardy ones, as, if they get out of town without paying up, the chances are you will have to wait until they return in the fall. Some storekeepers appear to think that long credits help to hold trade. This is a mistake. There are some careless people who are financially able to pay their bills, but the majority of the delinquents are living beyond their means, run up bills and when inconvenient to pay go somewhere else and buy for cash. Time and time again I have known of customers who appeared to be much offended because they were pressed for the payment of their accounts, and even threatened with suit, and in some cases after settlement was obtained in this way have kept on buying and become better customers than before.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Now that the big Liberty Loan drive has ended, and the florists are free to consider things more personal in character, our publicity campaign now in progress should receive a little stimulus. By this is meant further and most necessary support in order to enable the committees to "carry on" with their plans and to fulfill their obligations. Our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," has gone home to the hearts of the people. We say this through our actual knowledge, and new evidence of the fact crops up every day. And what did it? Nothing but the support which only a few—we are sorry to say it—of the many thousands of florists in this country have so far given to our fund. The best hopes of the committees as regards the results to be expected from the campaign have been realized—despite the general conditions which now beset us, the demand for flowers cannot be considered as anything but good.

What did our national bodies of war workers do when it was found necessary to strike a Belgian note to offset propaganda which was becoming most vicious? Their protest was ordered to be registered with flowers—a Belgian day has been proclaimed, and the sentiment of the day is to be expressed by a liberal use of forget-me-nots, where obtainable, but in flowers anyway. While this, for many reasons, may not keep the florists' cash registers busy on that day, the handwriting is on the wall, flowers as mediums for the expression of sentiment are in the public mind.

If a project regarding which our promotion bureau has been consulted, is carried out, and it very probably will have been by the time these lines are read, another day close at hand is to be proclaimed to offset other propaganda of a dangerous character, and is likely to develop into an immense "flower day," flowers of all kinds this time being considered to convey the sentiment—and this time florists everywhere will be called upon by our national societies to help in a country-wide distribution of flowers, none of which they will be asked to contribute. Something rather Utopian in this, you may say,—but wait and see. All this is publicity of the right kind for flowers, and undoubtedly is one of the results of our campaign.

But we have not gone nearly far enough yet. We have only "scratched the surface" of possibilities. We must go on and on, and still onward. The campaign work is only in its initial stage thus far, and to get where we plan, we must have more support from the people it is to benefit, you, the florists, the raisers and distributors of the flowers the campaign is seeking to make a necessity in every home, a daily feature of home and public life, and a medium for the expression of sentiment under any and all conditions.

The campaign is most worthy of the earnest consideration of all florists at this time. If you, Mr. Reader, have not yet subscribed, put yourself on record with a contribution to the fund as one willing and anxious to get the best out of your chosen vocation, and to consider this campaign as your agent—and an inexpensive one—in the production of business in which everyone can and will share.

Take advantage of the direct service aids offered by the promotion bureau—lantern slides for the movies, signs, stickers, booklets and newspaper cuts. If you have not received a folder describing these, sit down and write a postal request for one. Do not delay. Do it now.

"Say It With Flowers."

The promotion bureau of the National Publicity Campaign has been favored with the accompanying poem. The author dedicates it to the use of the trade:

Say it with flowers, you chivalrous lover true
For they seem to grow just for the likes of you;
Were it not for love the human race would be
A soulless, aimless, nature mockery.
As it never dies, its kindergarten hours
Are the ones in which to blend it with the flowers.

Say it with flowers when ring the wedding bells
For their language, Oh! so eloquently tells
The spirit in which is won the choicest prize
That mortals know beneath the glowing skies.
But if 'tis gold or a kindly gift you bring Let a flower grace whate'er the offering.

Say it with flowers as the birthdays hasten round,
"Speak your piece" with them, the heart can hear the sound.
And twine them round the mile posts they go by,
For they'll sermons preach with which no words can vie.
Brush the lines of care that the years may bring, away,
If with nothing else, a little sweet bouquet.

Say it with flowers, O there's a special place
For the charm and cheer of nature's sweetest grace,
For when they to the suffering are given
They are saying things that may be heard to heaven.
Let the flowers in the sick room breathe the prayer
That you tried to say because you brought them there.

Say it with flowers again and yet again,
Your angel waits to tell you where and when;
They should not waste their sweetness on the air
When a "thank you" waits for you most anywhere.
And remember that the price of your bouquet
May not measure what you'd really love to say.

Say it with flowers, O wait not for the day
When you'll grieve because you did not with them say
What you might have said so oft adown the years
In the game of life—its joys and hopes and tears.
Now is the time, right here in nature's bowers
To indite the word and then "Say It With Flowers."
—L. B. Mitchell, Hart, Michigan.

"It Couldn't Be Done."

Somebody said it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied
That maybe it couldn't, but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he tried.
So he buckled right in, with a trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried, he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

Somebody scoffed, "Oh, you'll never do that;
At least no one has ever done it."
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew he'd begun it;
With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quit it,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done;
There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you;

But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That cannot be done, and you'll do it.
—Edgar A. Guest.

How well the above poem illustrates the work of our publicity campaign. Many in the craft felt this was not the proper time, and others, with true optimism, felt otherwise. How well we have succeeded in our effort will be the keynote at our next convention, but in the meantime, let us keep the ball rolling in the attempt to get more funds to keep it up, because we can only derive the benefits of our national advertising by keeping up that which we have only just begun.

Are we going to allow ourselves to believe it could not be done, and lie down now, after we have made such a noble start? The answer will be in your efforts towards contributing to the campaign fund, and by sending same to John Young, 1170 Broadway,

New York, thereby feeling that you have at least done your duty. We need more money to complete our campaign. Will you help?

American Gladiolus Society.MEMBERSHIP DOUBLED SINCE JANUARY 1.

The campaign for new members which was begun recently by President Kunderd of the American Gladiolus Society is showing great results. Joseph J. Lane, who is chairman of the membership committee, reports that on May 1 the society was able to report more than double the membership held on January 1. From all sections of the country, garden enthusiasts and gladiolus lovers are answering the call for membership. In the first 22 days of April there were over 50 members added to the society's roll. President Kunderd has offered a collection of gladiolus roots, in a special circular he has sent out, to those who join the society before May 12.

Inasmuch as the initiation fee has been waived for all those who join before June 1, there is a decided saving in joining during the present month. Members receive monthly during the life of their membership the Flower Grower, which contains much information, not alone on gladiolus, but on practically all phases of gardening. This is an invitation to all who read it to participate in the activities of the American Gladiolus Society. Your affiliation with this organization will mean your affiliation with one of the most aggressive and most influential organizations in the whole world.

In these days, when so much destruction is taking place, it is but fitting and proper that an organization whose keynote is production and development should make tremendous expansion. The American people have a heritage of sentiment and love of flowers which is placed in the care of those who remain at home while our sons and brothers are away from our firesides.

June 1 is the last day on which memberships can be received without the initiation fee. Will you join us and participate in the big things which the American Gladiolus Society is accomplishing and on the way to accomplish for American horticulture? Two dollars is the membership fee for one year. The secretary is Professor A. C. Beal, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. Send your membership today and join hands in the great work.

OBITUARY.The Late Joseph Tailby.

Joseph Tailby, who died at his home in Wellesley, Mass., April 26, at the age of 76 years, as announced in our Boston newsletter, issue of May 4, was widely known throughout New England for 50 years as a florist, and gained especial prominence as a hybridizer of both flowers and vegetables. In 1881, he introduced to the trade the Grace Wilder carnation which immediately became popular, and during the same year he brought out Fred Johnson and Princess Louise, other varieties that met with favor. He is also credited with having brought to Boston the first bloom of the Marechal Neil rose ever seen in that city.

Mr. Tailby was born in Leicester-shire, Eng., and came to this country in 1864, locating first in New York and Hoboken, N. J., but after two years he went to Wellesley where he established a florist establishment. Early in his career, he became actively identified with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and soon became known as a skillful grower of stock for the Boston market. Tailby's Hybrid cucumber, a cross between White Spine and an English variety, which is still grown in New England, was another of his introductions of nearly 50 years ago. To him much credit is due for his diligence in assisting Boston to attain the position of horticultural prominence that city enjoys today. He was a man of kindly and generous disposition, always willing to assist unselfishly those in need of aid, especially the novice. A widow and two sons survive.

George Perkins.

George Perkins, for the past 20 years a grower and retailer of East Orange, N. J., died April 30, but a few hours after he had been suddenly taken ill. During the morning hours he had been planting pansies in his garden. He was born in Ulster, Ireland, 58 years ago, and came to America when 20 years old. Previous to locating at East Orange, he had worked on a private estate. He had conducted a prosperous business up to the day of his death. He was prominent in the Orange fraternity and members of that order from Philadelphia, Boston and other cities attended his funeral, which was held at his late residence, 79 Sanford street, East Orange, May 4, with the service of the Episcopal church. He is survived by a widow, who is an invalid, and by a brother, John J. Perkins, one of the oldest florists of New York.

Mrs. Katherine Weigert.

Mrs. Katherine Weigert, wife of William Weigert, a well known retailer of 709 Ninth avenue, New York, died May 3, after an illness of three months. She was born at Haverstraw, N. Y., 48 years ago, and was Mr. Weigert's second wife. She was an amiable woman and is mourned by her family and many friends. She is survived by her husband, and three children, by a sister, Mrs. Shlesenger, and a brother, Frederick Berdolt, a florist of New York. Funeral services were held by a Lutheran pastor at the church, Eighth avenue and 43rd street, on the evening of May 5. Many beautiful floral tributes were noted.

MOTHERS' DAY.—Readers will oblige by mailing reports of their Mothers' day business to this office as early as possible.

T. D. LONG, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, reports that on a recent extended trip through the west and southwest he found women greenhouse workers everywhere.

MRS. POTTER PALMER, society leader who died at her winter residence in Florida May 5, was a generous patron of horticulture and always took a keen interest in flower shows. The late F. W. Timme was many years gardener at the well known Chicago home of the family.

Disastrous Luxury Tax.

Paris, May 7.—The 10 per cent tax on luxuries is proving disastrous to business in Paris, according to Deputy Charles Leboucq, and he has introduced in the chamber a bill repealing the impost.

Japanese Bulb Embargo Settled.

J. Horace McFarland, the well-known horticultural printer of Harrisburg, Pa., writes May 6, as follows:

"I have been after the head of the War Trade Board personally with respect to the importation of bulbs both from the orient and from Holland, and in a long conference with him have developed the fact that there will certainly be no let-up in the embargo on goods from Japan and China, while there is not the least objection, as Mr. McCormick sees it, to the unrestricted importation of bulbs from Holland, always provided Germany will let the ships get out from the Holland ports. I have asked for a specific announcement of this policy, in view of the importance of having the trade know in advance what can be done."

Shipment License Regulations.

The war trade board calls particular attention of exporters to Section 2, Paragraph "D", of the regulations of the United States railroad administration, as set forth in Circular No. CS-2A, which provides that, in addition to the license number appearing on the waybill, the license or partial shipment authority must be in the hands of the collector of customs at the port of exit on or before the arrival of the freight at that port or point of exit. Shipments made on or after April 26 may be detained at the point of exit if the license or partial shipment authority is not at hand.

Attention of shippers is further directed to Clause 7, which reads as follows:

"That a shipment from one consignor to one consignee which shall exceed one carload and which is intended for export will only be permitted with the provision that the car or cars are loaded to full visible or carrying capacity." In order to make this rule effective, the war trade board will incorporate in all export licenses hereafter issued a clause reading as follows:

"This license is granted on condition that if shipments made under the authority of this license are in excess of one carload they shall be forwarded only in a car or cars loaded to full visible or carrying capacity."

"Notice is hereby given to all shippers and exporters that a violation of any of the foregoing rules and regulations will be regarded by the war trade board as a sufficient ground for the revocation of any export license already issued, as well as for the refusal of all applications for export licenses hereafter made by or on behalf of any person who has violated said rules and regulations."

Combine Sentiment and Patriotism.

BUY THRIFT STAMPS AND WEAR FLOWERS.

Some time ago Miss Anna Jarvis complained that florists were, by the use of posters and full-page advertisements in magazines of wide circulation, commercializing Mothers' day, and that this year she would recommend the wearing of thrift stamps and their use as gifts in lieu of flowers on the occasion. In a recent issue of the Philadelphia North American, the Mothers' Day International Association, founded by Miss Jarvis, presents its appeal, in part as follows:

"The white carnation has heretofore been worn in this and other countries on Mothers' day as an honor badge emblematic of mother-love. It will be continued as the Mothers' day emblem. This year, however, we urge that the many thousands of dollars spent for flowers be lent to our country. Pin a thrift stamp on your coat or dress and wear it on Mothers' day in honor of the mothers of our defenders. Not only "stamp" yourself but carry extra stamps and give them to your friends who are "not stamped." As for mother, give her a war saving certificate with a war saving stamp on it as a starter and let the rest of the children, relatives and friends fill it with other stamps. Surely we can do without the display of flowers for Mothers' Day, funerals, weddings, society events, etc., when money is so urgently needed for our men in camps and trenches."

Miss Jarvis has made this proposition to the public and it remains to be seen whether they will respond to her request. There is a certain tender sentiment in connection with the observance of this day in which flowers and plants conflict in no way with the patriotism of the times. Mother will doubtless appreciate both flowers and thrift stamps, especially on the day designated in her honor, and on other days as well.

Holland's Profiteering.

Apparently the only reason Germany has respected the territorial integrity of the Netherlands up to the present time is that Holland has been extremely useful to her. Great quantities of sugar, coffee, cocoa, fish, butter, eggs, beef, cheese, and even wheat, have been shipped by the Dutch to Germany. Even when Holland was virtually starving and living on a close-ration basis, food was being smuggled into Germany. Much profiteering was going on openly in the little country. The German government established a central buying office in The Hague and offered prices far above those that the Dutch people could pay. The Dutch government could not, and did not, protest. There were riotings and strikes in the cities of the Netherlands. The reason given by the Dutch authorities for this state of affairs was that Holland had to send food to Germany or else freeze. Germany has been the only source of supply of coal to the Netherlands.

Coal.

Coal for next winter should be on the premises this month to the full extent of every greenhouse man's allowance. Fill the coal shed and pile the remainder near by outdoors. Buy the best quality obtainable, good coal taking no more space than the inferior grade. In addition, the best coal lasts longest.

WAR CONDITIONS Of Supply and Demand

While there is no doubt the demand for spring bedding and other decorative plants and bulbs will be materially curtailed by the war garden movement, we believe this condition will be fully counterbalanced by the prosperity in the south and the effects of the coal shortage on the greenhouse men of the west, north and east, placing in the market for stock a large number of new buyers not familiar with the sources of supply.

Most of these buyers can be reached at small cost by advertising in The American Florist, and we feel that it will be greatly to your advantage to start this campaign with an advertisement in our columns.

Winter's Effects in Arnold Arboretum

The winter of 1917-18 has been one of the severest in New England of which there is any record. In December, when the ground was without a covering of snow, the thermometer did not rise here from above zero for nearly a week with a minimum of 17° below. There was little snow at any time during the winter, and the ground, which froze to a depth of from five to seven feet, was not clear of frost until after the first of April. Abundant rains late in the summer and in the early autumn and the fact that the cold has been continuous through the winter, without periods of warm weather, which in this region often excite dangerous vegetative activity, have enabled many plants to survive the extreme cold which under less favorable conditions would probably have destroyed them. Still it seems safe to predict that any tree or shrub which has lived here through the past winter will be able to resist successfully a Massachusetts winter. The condition of the plants in the arboretum at this time is of general interest therefore as an indication of the trees and shrubs of recent introduction which can be successfully grown in this climate. It must, however, be remembered that local conditions—that is, conditions of soil, position, moisture and dryness—influence the hardiness of plants, and that a tree which succeeds in the arboretum might not be hardy in another garden in the same general region.

The injuries to the arboretum collections caused by the winter have not, on the whole, been as great as we had every reason to fear three months ago. The conifers which have been killed are the glaucous-leaved Mt. Atlas cedar (Cedrus atlantica glauca) which has been kept alive here for several years in a protected position; young plants of the Spanish fir (Abies Pinsapo) which has been killed before in the arboretum; Abies magnifica of the California Sierra Nevada; Abies cephalonica var. appolinis; from the mountains of Greece; Picea Sargentiana, one of the new spruces from western China, and nearly every plant in a large collection of the short-leaved pine of the eastern United States (Pinus echinata). These pines were raised at the arboretum 20 years ago from seeds gathered on Staten Island, New York, the northern limit of the range of this tree, and appeared to be perfectly hardy until this year. On several conifers the buds are uninjured and are beginning to swell, although the leaves have been more or less browned by the cold and will soon fall. Conifers injured in this way will probably recover, although their growth for the year will be necessarily checked. Among the trees with injured leaves and uninjured buds are the Cedars of Lebanon from the Anti-Taurus in Asia Minor, which have been growing in the arboretum for 16 years without protection and which it was hoped would be able to support the worst conditions New England winters could offer. Other conifers with injured leaves are the sugar pine (Pinus Lambertiana) from the Sierra Nevada of California, the Mexican white pine (Pinus Ayacahuite), the Chinese hemlock (Tsuga chinensis) which has lost most of its top, and Abies cephalonica from the islands of Greece. One or two specimens of this tree will probably not recover. The leaves of the California incense cedar (Libocedrus decurrens), of Abies grandis, of Abies amabilis and of the hemlock of the northwest coast (Tsuga heterophylla) are slightly injured. The native white cedar (Chamaecyparis thyoides) is badly hurt and some of the plants will probably die. The red spruce (Picea rubra) from northern New England has suffered badly, as have the plants of the upright form of Juniperus communis from central Massachusetts. The leaves of Abies amabilis, too, from the Cascade mountains of Oregon are slightly browned, as are those of several plants of the Japanese Abies sachalinense. On a few of the plants of the Chinese white pine (Pinus Armandi), of the Japanese Pinus densiflora and P. Thunbergii, and of the Chinese Pinus sinensis var. yunnanensis and var. denudata the leaves are also brown. There is no reason, however, to doubt that these will all recover. It is interesting that, with the exception of four exotic conifers, three of which have been kept alive in the arboretum with much difficulty and have now perished, the most serious damage of the winter to conifers has been to four native species, Picea rubra, Pinus echinata, Chamaecyparis thyoides and Juniperus communis. All the new spruces and firs from western China, with the exception of Picea Sargentiana, are uninjured, as are practically all the Chinese pines. Uninjured, too, are the Carolina hemlock (Tsuga caroliniana), the western arbor vitae (Thuja plicata) and the Spanish pine (Pinus nigra tenuifolia) which, judging by the climate of the regions where these trees grow, naturally might well have suffered from the cold of the past winter.

Of the new trees with deciduous leaves introduced by the arboretum from China the following are uninjured: All the oaks, elms, birches, nettle-trees, beeches, many of the cherries, the pears and apples, Davidia, Eucommia and Ehretia acuminata. As space permits reports on the losses caused by the winter in other groups of plants will appear in later issues of these bulletins.

Early-Flowering Shrubs.—Fortunately, frost has not injured this spring the buds of many of the trees and shrubs which open their flowers in April and several of these have been unusually fine this year and have remained in good condition for a longer time than usual. After some of the willows the earliest shrubs in the arboretum to bloom this year were the buffalo berry (Shepherdia argentea) and the leatherwood (Dirca palustris). The latter began to bloom April 7, nearly three weeks earlier than last year, and unfaded flowers are still to be seen on this eastern American shrub. A large group of these plants on the right-hand side of the Bussey Hill road is one of the interesting early spring features of the arboretum. The flower buds of garden peach trees have been generally killed in Massachusetts by the cold of the winter, but the wild peach tree of northern China (Prunus Davidiana) opened its uninjured flower buds in the arboretum April 15. This is an attractive small tree with erect branches and lustrous red-brown bark. As a flowering tree in this climate, however, it is hardly worth a place in the gardens, for the flowers open so early that they are ruined by late frosts. The fruit is small and of no value; but pomologists are interested in this tree as a stock on which to work the common peach tree, for it is hardy north of the region where peaches flourish.

Early-Flowering Rhododendrons.—The bright, rose colored flowers of the Siberian and Mongolian Rhododendron dahuricum opened this year as early as April 10 and remained in good condition until the end of the month. It is a small shrub with dark green leaves which in this climate remain on the branches until late in the winter, and it would be a good garden plant here if the flowers were not so often ruined by late frosts. There is a variety sempervirens with more persistent leaves and darker colored flowers which has bloomed this year with the species on the upper side of Azalea path. In the rhododendron collection at the base of Hemlock hill a group of a hybrid of R. dahuricum with the Himalayan R. ciliatum, known as R. præcox, Early Gem, is now covered with flowers. This is a perfectly hardy plant, but, unfortunately, blooms too early in this climate and the flowers are generally injured by frost. More valuable here is the north China R. mucronulatum, which this year began to flower a little later than R. dahuricum and is still covered with its pale rose colored flowers. It is a tall, hardy, deciduous leaved shrub which has flowered freely in the arboretum every spring for the last 20 years. The flowers open before the leaves appear and are not injured by spring frosts. This year they have been in good condition for nearly three weeks. In this climate this is the most valuable of the rhododendrons and azaleas which bloom in April.

Early-Flowering Magnolias.—The flower buds and the flowers of the Japanese Magnolia stellata, M. Kobus and its variety borealis, and of the Chinese M. denudata, more often called M. conspicua, and its hybrids have been uninjured by winter cold or April frost and are blooming well this year, with the exception of M. Kobus and its variety, which, never very free with their flowers, are less prolific than usual this year. The plants of the Japanese M. salicifolia, which has never succeeded in the arboretum (by which it was first introduced into cultivation), appeared to have been killed outright this winter.

Corylopsis.—All the species of this genus of shrubs of the witch hazel family cultivated in the arboretum have survived the winter with little or no loss of wood, but the flower buds of the Chinese C. Veitchiana and C. Willmottiae, and of the Japanese C. pauciflora and C. spicata have been killed by the cold, and the only species which has flowered is C. Gotoana of the elevated region of central Japan. This is evidently the hardiest of the plants of this genus, and as it has now flowered in the arboretum every spring for several years there is good reason to hope that we have here an important shrub for the decoration of northern gardens. The flowers are produced in drooping spikes and open before the leaves appear, as in the other species, and are of a delicate canary-yellow color and pleasantly fragrant. The best specimen in the arboretum can be seen on the left-hand side of Hickory path, near Centre street.

Prinsepia sinensis is a tall Chinese shrub with stem and branches armed with many spines, bright green leaves which unfold as early as those of any other plant in the arboretum and bright yellow flowers about two-thirds of an inch in diameter in few-flowered axillary clusters. The large specimen on the right-hand side of Hickory path, near Centre street, is now covered with flowers and nearly fully-grown leaves. There can be no question of the hardiness of this shrub or of its ability to flower under any climatic conditions it may have to meet in Massachusetts. It will perhaps be found that it will prove to be as good a hedge plant as can be used in this part of the country. Unfortunately, the arboretum plants have not yet produced more than an occasional seed, and as Prinsepia is not easy to increase from cuttings it has remained exceedingly rare.

Maddenia hypoleuca.—This interesting shrub, which flowered last year in the arboretum for the first time in America and was described in the Bulletin of May 8, came through the winter without injury on the southern slope of Bussey hill and was in full bloom this year on April 18. It is related to the rum or choke cherries, but the flowers are without petals and are not conspicuous.

Cherries and Plums.—This is a good season for many of these plants. Among the cherries, Prunus tomentosa and the single-flowered form of P. triloba from northern China are already in bloom. The trees of the Sargent cherry (Prunus serrulata var. sachalinensis) have never been more covered with their pink and rose colored flowers, and the Japanese spring cherry (P. subhirtella), which has been described as the most floriferous and perhaps the most delightful of the Japanese cherries, is just opening its countless flower buds.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 4, 1918.

GOOD DEMAND AND SUPPLY PLENTIFUL.

Trade during the past week has been good with a plentiful supply of all seasonable stocks. Carnations are here in abundance and the call for them is heavy. Roses are also coming in with supply and demand balancing. Lilies are good and sell well. Outside daffodils are also among the best sellers. Funeral work in the suburbs has been brisk but the town demand in this line has been slow.

NOTES.

Jensen, The Florist, has sold his entire stock of pot and bench lilies to Macnair, who made a cleanup on them. The houses are now being replanted with vegetables and summer flowers.

Howard Almy has returned from the south and is now making a specialty of growing English daisies and myosotis in baskets and flats. They find a ready market in this city.

John Wood is back on the street selling May flowers and sweet peas and intends to open a store in the near future.

Fred Davis is adding one house 30x100 feet which will be devoted to cyclamens exclusively.

Joseph Kopelman is making good cuts of roses at his range in Riverside.

Harry Oakley is again in business for himself. H. A. T.

Railroad Aids War Gardens.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 27.—In addition to helping win the war through what they are doing to facilitate transportation, employees of the Pennsylvania railroad are going in for war gardening. Home food production via the Pennsylvania route is the motto under which they are working with their hoes.

W. J. Rose, division freight agent for the system here, is distributing a large lot of garden primers furnished him by the national war garden commission, Washington, among the agents and men of the road in Dauphin, Cumberland, York, Lebanon, Lancaster, Chester, Berks, Buck and Montgomery counties. Reports being received here show great activity all through the state in the home food production movement. It is believed there is scarcely a city or town in the Keystone state that will not go far toward feeding itself this year through the cultivation of back yards and vacant lots. From Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Scranton, Reading, Johnstown, Altoona, Easton, Wilkes-Barre and other places comes word of soldiers of the soil lining up in formidable numbers.

Food Production and Distribution.

The department of agriculture and Mr. Hoover have been doing everything possible to stimulate production, but what are they doing to facilitate distribution? There has always been wastage in the summer season when gardens were at their best. Always in fruit growing sections thousands of barrels of fruit have rotted on the ground while city markets were demanding high prices. Wastage and decay will be criminal this year, and yet with every householder having his little garden and a record breaking production of all commodities, wastage and decay will set new records unless there is better conservation and distribution.—Leslie's.

The tribute of J. B. Ward to Davey Tree Surgery

A tree with a badly weakened crotch, saved by the scientific methods of Davey Tree Surgeons. Note that, in 4 years' time, the filling is almost entirely healed over.

The Davey Tree Expert Co., Kent, Ohio.

Dear Sirs: The work you did for Mr. T. De Witt Cuyler in 1914 is a living monument to the efficacy of Davey Tree Surgery and it is a pleasure to be able to write a few words in commendation.

The trees, a number of which were in a critical condition, are now healthy, strong and vigorous in their growth. The healing in particular is wonderful. In my estimation Davey Tree Surgery is in a class by itself, and the high standard which your company has set is bound to elevate the entire practice of Tree Surgery.

Yours truly,

(Signed) J. B. Ward, Haverford, Pa.

This tree was in such a weakened condition that the next severe wind-storm could easily have wrecked it. Today the tree is perfectly sound, thanks to Davey Tree Surgery.

The saving of priceless trees is a matter of first importance on every estate. Davey Tree Surgery is a fulfillment of the maximum expectations of those who love and value trees. A careful examination of your trees will be made by appointment.

HEAVY EARLY DEMAND FOR MOTHERS' DAY.

The early demand for Mothers' day is heavy, especially for carnations, which promise to be in short supply at the advertised quotations, notwithstanding the warm weather experienced this week. Practically all the wholesale houses have refused orders for carnations and have requested their buyers to accept other stock instead, particularly roses, which promise to be in heavier supply than was at first expected, but will no doubt clean up completely in all lines before the week is over. American Beauty roses are in fair supply and in good demand. Roses in general are plentiful, especially Ophelia, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Champ Weiland, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Richmond, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst, Mrs. George Shawyer and all the other varieties grown for this market. Sweet peas are reaching the market in large quantities but are in good demand and are cleaning up very satisfactorily every day. Peonies will be quite a factor in this market for Mothers' day and a grand clean-up in this line is expected. Orchids, gardenias, lily of the valley, callas, lilies, Paper White narcissi, gladioli, jonquils, tulips, mignonne, calendulas, white and yellow daisies, iris, daffodils, snapdragons, lupines, forget-me-nots and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is included in the many offerings and furnish a splendid substitute for carnations for this occasion. The shipping trade is unusually heavy, and with favorable weather, the local demand will be surprisingly large. Many of the retail stores are featuring special Mothers' day windows which are unusually attractive and in almost all cases announce the date, Sunday, May 12, so that the public is being well reminded of the big day. One thing in favor of the trade is, that the third liberty bond campaign is over, and successful, so nothing is left to interfere with anyone paying his respect to his mother with a nice box of flowers. The continued warm weather has affected stock considerably, a great deal of which is arriving in poor condition, particularly carnations and roses. Good shipping stock is in brisk demand, but short supply.

NOTES.

Nic Dahm received a photo this week from his son, Nic Dahm, Jr., and two other Morton Grove boys, who are with the colors, which we are reproducing in this issue. When last heard from, they were with the 602nd Engineers, Company B., at Camp Devens, Mass. Edward Seramore was a carnation grower at Pohlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove for over eight years and Jake Baumhardt was a rose grower at the same range for a similar period. Nic Dahm, Jr., was a carnation grower for a number of years and also had charge of a large acreage of gladioli at his place. The young men are well-known here and their many friends wish them every success with the colors and a safe and speedy return.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, and George Mohn, with Vaughan's Seed Store, attended the last meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, May 2, returning home the following morning.

H. G. Berning, well-known St. Louis, Mo., wholesaler, was a welcome visitor this week.

Phil Daut, of Daut Bros., Decatur, was in the city this week buying stock for Mothers' day and Memorial day. He is in Class 1 of the draft and has been ordered to leave for Camp Dodge in the near future. Miss Myrtle Hahn, who made the trip here with him, will have charge of the store during his absence and his brother Frank will look after the greenhouses. They are indebted to Ed. Jacob of the A. L. Randall Co. for the many courtesies extended them on their visit.

The third liberty bond campaign was a complete success all over the country and it is a great pleasure to note the whirlwind finish the "I Will" city made. The wholesale florists and growers subscribed $103,850, retail florists $45,300, seedsmen $89,950 and the nurserymen $36,800, making a grand total of $275,900 all of which is credited to division 19. The trade did remarkably well and were highly complimented for their magnificent showing.

O. A. and L. A. Tonner received word this week from Dr. Knapp of Evansville, Ind., that his peonies are coming in crop and that they could look for several shipments the latter part of this week which will come in handy for the late Mothers' day demand.

Joe Einweck, of the Bassett & Washburn force, who left for Jefferson Barracks recently with the drafted men from his district, has been transferred to Fremont, Calif. Allan Gerling, of the same firm, has signified his intention of joining the navy.

John Poehlmann, who graduated from the third officers' training school at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., left Tuesday to report for duty at the same place. He is eligible to a commission as second lieutenant as soon as a vacancy occurs.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a good supply of both roses and carnations in all the leading varieties which are in exceptionally brisk demand this week. Some particularly fine Sunburst are included in the daily receipts.

Zech & Mann are more than pleased with their Mothers' day demand so far which compares most favorably with that of last year if not better. Roses are in large supply here, especially Ophelia and Mrs. Chas. Russell.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report a brisk out-of-town demand for stock for Mothers' day especially for roses and carnations. Miscellaneous stock Mike Poletsos, of The Chicago Florist, is interested in the new retail florist store that will open in the near future at Lawrence and Broadway. He is at present managing the store at 35 East Adams street.

Percy Jones, Inc., never experienced such a heavy call for stock as it did this year especially from out-of-town points. H. Van Gelder is still under the doctor's care but is on the job every day at the store.

Gust. Poehlmann, brother of August and Adolph Poehlmann, is on the sick list. He has been in the employ of Poehlmann Bros. Co. for many years with headquarters at Morton Grove.

J. A. Budlong is cutting heavily in roses this week which are in brisk demand for Mothers' day. Peonies and anemones are included in the list of offerings at this establishment.

Andrew McAdams is again on the sick list at Melbourne, Fla., and expects to return to this city the latter part of this month.

For Your Supply of CUT FLOWERS

Remember when ordering that our line is so complete that it includes every item offered in the Great Chicago Market.

Peter Pearson, 5732 Gunnison street, cordially invites the trade to come out and inspect his bulb field at Jefferson Park, which is now in bloom. He has 60 varieties of Darwin tulips not to mention the early varieties and jonquils, some of which have been grown there for three years. This stock is grown for bulb purposes only and is a sight worth going a long distance to see. Mr. Pearson says that the next week will be the best time to inspect it and will be glad to show all members of the trade about.

Henry Schwartz, who was struck by a hand mail truck in the La Salle street station, May 6, died the same evening from a fracture of the skull. He was 73 years old and lived at 6810 Lowe avenue, and was well known to the trade here, being a retired florist. He was in the employ of W. W. Barnard at Washington Heights before the accident.

Blaine Wilcox, of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., passed through here this week on his way home from an auto trip to Detroit, Mich., with several friends. His firm will discontinue growing American Beauty roses and considerable bench space will be devoted to the new variety Columbia.

William G. Earl, chief assistant to Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, has left for Camp Merrett, Kreskill, N. J., to visit his son Walter, who expects to sail for France any day. Walter is 20 years old and has been in the service two months. Mr. Earl expects to be away a couple of weeks.

A French flower market will be held at the Community house, Winnetka, May 18, at which time plants grown in the gardens of the suburbanites will be sold by society women in French costume, the proceeds to be donated to the American fund for French wounded.

Miss Marguerite McNulty and Peter Bauman, of the Peter Reinberg store force, visited their firm's greenhouses May 5 and found that the roses would be in splendid crop for Mothers' day, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell, which is the leader at this store this week.

Vaughan's Seed Store tulip display at the firm's Western Springs trial grounds will be at its best May 12 and succeeding days if the weather continues favorable, some 50,000 bulbs in many varieties.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Rudd announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret, to Major Kellogg Speed, Medical Reserve Corps, United States Army, March 14, at Camiers, Pas-de-Calais, France.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association has installed a new lighting system which is one of the best in the market and is used largely by the leading mercantile establishments in this city.

F. O. Franzen, 5319 North Clark street, who has been on the sick list since early last fall, is slowly recovering his health and his many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Chas. T. Johnson, son of Chas. W. Johnson, graduated from the third officers' training school at Camp Grant recently and is eligible to a commission as lieutenant.

Bassett & Washburn will grow the new rose Columbia quite heavily this season, which will replace to a large extent the variety Mrs. George Shawyer.

J. S. Wilson, Jr., of the Alpha Floral Co., and wife, Des Moines, Ia., spent several days here this week on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Arnold Ringier has been on the sick list for over a week but his many friends are pleased to hear that he is well on the road to recovery.

Roy Boughen of the Peter Reinberg force has enlisted in the coast artillery and will leave for Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, Mo., May 11.

Victor Young, of Victor Young & Co., 1239 North Clark street, has been drafted for military service. The store has been closed.

ROSES FORM BULK OF SUPPLY.

The local market is not any too well supplied and at that the bulk of the offerings are roses. Sweet peas are fairly plentiful, but in general the quality is not very good. Carnations are scarce. The outlook for Mothers' day is promising, if the stock is adequate to meet the requirements.

NOTES.

Local greenhouse owners held a meeting, May 4, at the Wm. L. Rock Flower Co's. establishment to discuss the fuel situation for the coming season. Messrs. Rock and Lamb were delegated to take the florists' point of view before the fuel administration.

T. J. Noll & Co. have had a surprisingly good trade from out-of-town points. They will have an extra large supply of stock to take care of the Mothers' day demand.

H. Kusik & Co. report business exceptionally good. They are carrying a full line of roses and sweet peas, with carnations the scarce item.

E. G. Bunyar has disposed of the greater part of his bedding stock and says the number of cash sales are gratifying.

August Luther reports everything in tiptop shape and all set for the spring trade, with stock in the pink of condition.

Beiderman & Son are busy filling boxes, baskets, etc. They have a very good display with stock in fine shape.

W. J. Barnes has been selling bedding stock for two weeks, and all indications point to a heavy trade.

A. Mohr has sold his surplus stock of bedding plants and is well pleased with the spring trade.

E. J. B.

My Bulb Field is Now in Bloom

Everyone in the trade is cordially invited to come out and inspect same. There are 60 varieties of Darwin Tulips not to mention the Jonquils and Early Tulips now in full bloom. This stock is grown for the bulbs and not for cut flower purposes some of which has been grown at Jefferson Park for three years.

IT IS A SIGHT WORTH SEEING.

MARKET TIGHT BUT IMPROVING.

The market has been pretty tight but the latter part of the week it became easier on account of the change in weather which brought flowers back into bloom. Carnations showed a tendency to produce better than they have for several weeks, and sweet peas have been very numerous. Roses have been fairly plentiful, but move daily at a bit lower than normal price. Peonies have made their appearance but in small quantities. Outdoor iris is coming in, but has very little call. Spanish iris has a good call and cleans up daily at a good price. Other outdoor stock of all kinds also shows a decided improvement. Lilies and callas are in good supply. Business the past week was a little bit better than normal; in fact, it is the writer's opinion that trade as a whole since February has been better than normal in this section. This condition no doubt has been brought about by the consistent advertising campaign, both national and local, and with persistent advertising we should continue to do a good business.

NOTES.

Paul Reden, a member of the florists' club, was one of the first Liberty Bond salesman to reach a sale of $40,000 worth of bonds, which entitled him to a medal from the Liberty Loan organization. Mr. Reden's business at other times is selling pots. He is manager of the Missouri Pottery & Supply Co.

Quite a few weddings have taken place since Easter, which has created quite a bit of nice wedding work. This is a little unusual for this time of the year. However, the retailer is not complaining as he is ready to take wedding orders now as well as in June or fall.

From present indications Mothers' day should be good from both the point of sales and from the point of supply of flowers. The local publicity committee is pushing the day, and many of the retailers have followed this up with their individual advertising.

Frank Windler is sporting a new Hudson "Supersix." His Velie roadster did not hold enough of his friends, so he had to get a big car. At least that is the reason the boys around the market give.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, wishes to announce his annual barn party and dance at his Denny road greenhouses. Everybody in the trade is invited and all are assured a good time. The date is May 18.

The city florists like the whole St. Louis district went over big in the Liberty Loan drive. It is estimated that the local and county florists contributed approximately $30,000 to the quota.

WARM WEATHER BRINGS GOOD SALES.

The weather during the past week has been pleasant and business has held up well. Perennials of all kinds, trees, shrubs, etc., have all enjoyed a good sale. Roses are excellent and the bright days have increased the supply. Carnations are also plentiful. A small quantity of lily of the valley is seen now and then, and with violets of very poor quality the demand for them has ceased. The trade is looking forward to a good Mothers' day business.

NOTES.

George T. Boucher has sent out some very attractive folders offering suggestions for Mothers' day gifts. He is making a special feature of vegetable seeds at his store.

INTERESTING CLUB MEETING.

The announcement of the fuel administrator in the daily press, stating that all florists would only be allowed 50 per cent of their normal fuel supply the coming season, brought out an exceedingly large attendance, some of whom were non-members, no doubt to gain more definite information regarding this all important matter. It certainly was bad news to most of us, yet there were a few present who had enough coal on hand to carry them through for another winter, and the question arose, whether they would be permitted to do so. As no one had any definite knowledge in this respect, the secretary was instructed to write to Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists for all official details he could give. Allie Zech of Zech & Mann and Geo. Mohn, representing Vaughan's Seed store, Chicago, who were visitors, said that they knew nothing at all about this order—it was news to them. Mr. Mohn, whose work brings him in contact with the trade in the different states, says that he knows of quite a few growers who already had an ample supply of coal on hand, and urged all present to do likewise. Mr. Zech, who also took a lively part in the discussion, voiced the opinion that it is much easier to get all the coal you want now, rather than wait till September 1, after which date he thought it would be next to impossible to expect any consideration. He also made a strong plea to have all those who were not members, to join the Society of American Florists, for the larger the society the easier the work and the greater the prestige, especially in these troublesome times. A. Hare, for the entertainment committee, reported a net profit of $46.90 realized at the recent

GOOD MOTHERS' DAY DEMAND

Business continues to lag, although at the end of the week a little spurt was shown, just enough to clean up the stock on hand. All growers at present are planning to cut down their stock and comply with the wishes of the government regarding use of coal this coming winter. There is a large demand for tomato and cabbage plants and a number of growers are seen carting to town large truck loads which clean up readily. Great preparations are being made regarding Mothers' day and the sentiment is running stronger than ever. Growers are looking for a clean up and the crop of white carnations is in excellent condition. Roses seem to be a drug on the market and are selling lower than ever before this season. Sweet peas are good with the best at $1.50 down to 35 cents a hundred. American gladioli have started to arrive and bringing $2 a dozen. American Beauties are scarce. Gardenias are good at $4 a dozen. Orchids had a large demand this past week and sold well at $6 and $7.50 a dozen. Yellow marguerites are a drug on the market and are sold as cheap as 50 cents a hundred.

NOTES.

Henry N. Robinson & Co. are having one of their best seasons. This firm is going into the prepared flower line very heavily for Memorial day. Although this force is very much demoralized on account of the help going to war, their places are filled temporarily by older help, who are kept busy evenings shipping out-of-town orders.

Penn, The Florist, had a very attractive window display in honor of the final week of the Liberty Loan drive. In one window was a large American flag made up of flowers which attracted a large gathering.

Snyder Bros. Co. show a large number of orders and an increase over last year for Mothers' day. Orders are beginning to arrive in good number and showing that Memorial day is going to be larger than ever.

From the Sutermeister estate at Readville large shipments are arriving in this city of forget-me-nots, pansies in baskets, geraniums, spireas and verbenas.

Peter Hylan, of Randolph, is cutting his last batch of jonquills and poeticus. After this crop is off he will go heavily into tomatoes and cucumbers.

C. Joseph Sloane, salesman at the flower market, has entered the navy. His stall will be looked after by his two brothers.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. had a very attractive window arranged with baskets of anemones, ranunculus and iris.

EXCEPTIONAL PLANT DEMAND.

The plant trade is booming and dealers have all they can do to supply the demand, but there is a wonderful supply of bedding stock of every variety and Saturdays at the market house give the visitor the impression he is attending a regular flower show. The prices realized are good.

NOTES.

Geny Bros., in view of the fuel order, will close their older and smaller houses located within the city limits and confine their operations to their new range and in this way carry out the conservation plan. This firm has donated a large number of plants to the war garden movement.

Some consternation was created by the 50 per cent fuel order but as considerable coal is coming into this market at present, if growers will arrange for their needs now there may be no occasion for alarm.

The war gardens are creating a good deal of interest among all classes and even the school children have been organized into classes and brigades to push forward the movement.

The Joy Floral Co. is showing some very handsome wistarias in pots which are attracting much attention.

MARKET SUFFERS FROM OVERSUPPLY.

The past week has been full of trouble for the wholesalers, who had all they could do to handle or in some way dispose of the great quantities of almost everything that flooded the market. American Beauties, Russell and long stemmed Ophelia were leaders in the roses, with quantities of the lower grades of all the varieties. Easter and calla lilies, snapdragons, Spanish iris, Darwin tulips, stocks, calendulas, daisies, sweet peas and many other of the so-called spring flowers filled the boxes everywhere. Carnations were not in such oversupply, the weather has been cool, and the chances are that record shipments will come in for Mothers' day. The quality of carnations offered the past month has been very good, owing no doubt to their coming on under reduced temperatures. Cattleyas find a fair demand at good prices. Mosses and gigas are the varieties. Southern Dorothy Perkins are offered,—they come from South Carolina. Except as a novelty, they attract little attention. Home-grown asparagus is now coming into its own; the southern stock is beginning to shake badly. This latter has had a great run the past season, particularly since transportation has been via parcel post. Saturday last the various accumulations in the market were distributed to the street men at clean up prices. "Get what you can, and even give it away, rather than pay to have it taken to the dump, is the plan that rules in the bargaining. Those who for one reason or another appear to have plenty of time, fill in the intervals with discussions, generally pessimistic, of the various aspects of the business. The new coal order is to them alarming, and the worst is predicted. "Turning the dark cloud inside out" to get at the silver lining, would not fit in with their view point, and is not attempted. "The effort to popularize flowers through cooperative efforts of the trade, is all wrong at this time," in their opinion. The fact that there is more money per capita to every person in the country at this time than ever before is not considered. "There was good business at Easter. Yes, but that was just a flash in the pan; it has not been kept up and the present glut of the past two weeks is the worst ever," etc. The busy man who keeps hustling, getting out his orders or planning for new trade, finds the days none too long, and has little complaint to make about poor business or any doubt of the future.

CLUB MEETING.

The feature of the meeting of the Florists' club, May 7, was the talk on parcels post by Mark J. Mullin. His description of the history and progressive features of the service was intensely interesting. It is intended to establish motor routes to districts without railroad service, so that in time the entire country will be benefited in this way. The speaker was given a rousing vote of thanks.

To cut his production in half, would break up his small organization and practically put him out of business. It is thought that if the predicament in which the small grower was placed, was presented to the fuel administration, it might make a new ruling to cover men with not over 10,000 feet of glass. Quite a number of the larger growers in this vicinity profiting by their experience of last winter, have taken every opportunity to lay in what coal they could for next season, and some are now fairly well supplied. It is hoped that with a larger output at the mines, and better transportation facilities, there will be sufficient to justify a new ruling, so that the trade will get all they need. Growers who used enforced drafts by means of blowers, and were thus enabled to burn the cheapest grades, such as screenings and yard sweepings, are told that at present all such sizes are included in the order.

THE LIBERTY LOAN.

Considering the way in which everybody was aroused and interested in the third Liberty Loan, it is a wonder there was any business for florists at all. Never before has there been such interest shown in any public movement. The allotment of seedsmen, florists and allied industries was $230,000. This was over subscribed; just the exact amount is not known, however, at this time. The whole district was about $60,000,000 over. This immense amount of money, much of it, taken from banks where it has laid in reserve and put into active circulation, should certainly speed up the industries and give to every avenue of business an added impetus.

There will be a Third Liberty Loan honor flag awarded to the Leo Niessen Co., whose employes numbering between 40 and 50 each took one or more bonds, the total, together with the subscriptions of the firm, amounting to $15,000.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons, adopting the Wanamaker idea, contributed the sales of the last three days of the drive, to be invested in Liberty Bonds. This was in addition to other large subscriptions made by the firm and their employes.

Miss Mary A. Baker was an enthusiastic worker for the florists' club fund, securing a number of subscriptions.

WITH THE WHOLESALERS.

Edward Reid is again on the job, a little shaky after his recent illness, but gaining daily. The past week's business was found very slow. A fine stock of carnations and other flowers is expected for Mothers' day.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is featuring Easter and calla lilies, together with a fine stock of roses. They have found it difficult to make anything like a clean up this week.

Choice cattleyas, Mossiae and gigas, were features of the stock of the Jos. Heacock Co. Rose shipments were medium in quantity, but ample for the demand.

The Leo Niessen Co. is pleased with the prospects of Mothers' day business. A large stock of flowers, particularly carnations, are insured.

"No medals on this week's business," is the report of Berger Bros. Darwin tulips, superb stock, and choice sweet peas were features.

Nothing good to report on the week's business, at Eugene Bernheimer's. The market is greatly overstocked.

Walter Yates, who has had considerable experience with automobiles, is going into that business.

New York.

DEMAND IS WEAKENING.

Since the middle of the past week, the market has been in a chaotic condition, with a surplus in nearly every stock and a failing demand. Good orchids and lily of the valley are not, in proportion, as plentiful as other stocks, but there is more than enough to supply the call. The best C. Mossiae are 40 to 50 cents per flower, wholesale rates, but small stock is going as low as 10 and 15 cents. There is a little lily of the valley on the market that brings $6 to $8 per 100, but inferior stock goes for $2 to $5. There has been a great drop in American Beauties. The first of last week, the best specials brought $40 to $45 per 100; now they are down to $10 and $25. The arrival of a heavy crop and little demand has brought this state. Conditions are not so bad in other roses, but they are much cheaper. Ice boxes are full of carnations and good stock is going for $2 per 100; old and inferior stock being practically unsalable. In sweet peas, iris, snapdragons, lilies, daisies and other stocks there is a surplus and they go practically at the buyers' prices. The market is flooded with lilac, which in part accounts for the stagnation in some other stocks.

May 6.—Indications point to a dull week in business. The weather has grown warmer and the supply of stock is on the increase, with no corresponding increase in demand. A good quality of cold-frame lily of the valley is now on the market, the best bringing $4 per 100.

NOTES.

Historians and biographers, when they reach Governor Whitman of this state, might write: "This is the Governor who signed the bill to kill the cat that killed the bird that killed the bugs that ate the plants." The following is now a law of this state: "Any person over the age of 21 years, who is the holder of a valid hunting and trapping license, may, and it shall be the duty of a game protector or other peace officer to humanely destroy a cat at large found hunting or killing any bird protected by law, or with a dead bird of any species protected by law in its possession, and no action for damages shall be maintained for such killing." It has been recorded that the mice once held a convention and decided that a bell should be placed on the cat, but for obvious reasons the plan was abandoned. The above is said to be the first law passed in any state to curb the activities of vagrant cats.

Hall park, Mrs. George Kent and a number of young girls were active in the sale of forget-me-nots. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who is a patroness of the movement, received, through the Belgian military mission, the following message from the Queen of Belgium: "I express to the people of America my sincere thanks for the sympathetic aid they are giving to the Belgian babies in buying my sovereign flower." (Signed) Elizabeth.

George Golsner, of the growing firm of George Golsner's Sons, College Point, N. Y., when asked what he would do about the 50 per cent fuel order, replied briefly and to the point: "Obey it." In this connection, Secretary John Young has pointed out—and we agree with him—that the greater hardships will fall on the growers with a small amount of glass. It is now hard enough for some of them to make a living, and if their output is cut in two, it will practically put them out of business. We hope that when this is fully understood by the fuel administration, some concession will be made in their favor.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Cut Flower Exchange was held May 4. The following officers were re-elected: John Schroeder, president; Victor Dorval, secretary; Chas. Beckman, treasurer. Directors, G. C. C. Schroeder, Philip Haas, Jasper McMullen, Victor L. Dorval. Inspectors of election, Adam Greener, Thos. Jackson.

Agnes A. Kessler, daughter of Philip F. Kessler, of the Cut Flower Exchange, recently passed a civil service examination for stenographer, scoring 90 points. Though but 19 years old, she now has a government position at a good salary.

Four men from Peter F. McKenney's store, Fifth avenue and 42nd street, have joined the colors. George Wacker, who has been at the store for 10 years, went to Fort Slocum the past week.

A. T. Bunyard, 413 Madison avenue, who has been active in the Liberty Loan campaign, advises us that the florists and allied trades of this city subscribed about $310,000.

William Weigert and family have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of a devoted wife and mother. Further details will be found in this week's obituary column.

William Scharp, for the past seven years with A. M. Westwood, the Pennsylvania Terminal florist, is now at Camp Upton, L. I., having been called in the draft.

Frank Spurvin, formerly in the retail business at 127 Sixth avenue, Brooklyn, who has been in the army for six months, has been reported as arriving in France.

Miss Helen Totty, daughter of President Totty of the S. A. F., who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is reported to be rapidly recovering.

The Flatbush, Brooklyn, carnation growers have about finished planting out. At the Hession range, we have noticed a fine stock in the field.

CLUB MEETING.

"Coal" was an interesting subject of discussion at the May meeting of the florists' club. The federal order reducing the amount to be consumed next winter to 50 per cent of the average for the past three years brought out the views of the growers present who agreed, however, that under present conditions the order is the best solution the government can find. Emphasis was laid, too, on the fact that the order affects the winter growers of vegetables to the same extent as the florists. The flower box committee reported that 52 window and porch boxes, metal, self-watering, had been ordered for the retailers from a firm in Chicago. Owing to freight congestion the consignment had not yet been received, but it is hoped that it will be here in time to have the boxes distributed and sold. Owing to the resignation of President Earl Shaw at the April meeting it was necessary to choose a successor. Two nominating committees named by Chairman William Newport to select a ticket for the office, agreed upon Vice-President William Newport for the office, and he was unanimously elected. The committees nominated Edward P. Tracey and Harvey Woodland for the office of vice-president. Mr. Tracey declined the honor and Mr. Woodland was unanimously elected to the position. The visitors present were three commercial travelers: Morris Cohen, New York; Charles Ford, Philadelphia, and Louis Hanfing, New York. They gave interesting talks on trade conditions through the territories they have been visiting.

NOTE.

Under the direction of Philip Bender, superintendent of parks, the city is to beautify the grounds around the new sewage disposal plant on Westerle Island, south of the city. Near the grit chamber, will be located a sunken garden for roses. Hundreds of Norway maples and rows of shrubbery are being set out on the grounds. Ivy is being planted against the walls of the buildings. The idea to make the grounds attractive originated with City Engineer Frank R. Lanagan, who called into consultation Charles D. Lay, landscape architect, who is employed by the city in an advisory capacity. Following the conference with Mr. Lay the work of improvement was turned over to the park department.

New York Florists' Club.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held May 13. Among the exhibits promised for this meeting will be one of lilacs and flowering shrubs which will be staged by T. A. Havemeyer, Brookville, L. I. While the date, Mr. Havemeyer says, is a little early for the finest varieties of lilacs, he will do the best that can be done to make a fine and comprehensive exhibit. GOOD MOTHERS' DAY BUSINESS.

Business is good. The call preceding the Mothers' day demand was active and steady, while the call for stock is excellent. Receipts are not as large as they might be, and for the past fortnight there has been hardly more than just enough stock to go around. Roses and carnations are in fair supply. Sweet peas are not as plentiful as they were early in the season. Some Easter lilies and callas may be had. Excellent outdoor iris, lily of the valley, tulips, and double poeiticus are coming into the wholesale houses. Peonies from the south are received each day. Other offerings are cape jasmines, snapdragons, orchids and marguerites.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger, upon his return from his trip to his greenhouses, May 5, said that he expects to have the largest cut of carnations he has ever had for Mothers' day, as well as a good assortment of other stock.

Mr. Bauer, formerly of this city, and later with the Bristol Floral Co., Bristol, Tenn., and now in the United States motor truck service was in this city last week.

J. A. Peterson & Sons are cutting some choice outdoor lily of the valley.

A baby daughter arrived at the home of Jos. Beran and wife April 28.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some fancy iris blooms.

BUSINESS CONTINUES SATISFACTORY.

The weather conditions have been above reproach and business has been correspondingly good, although there was a heavy demand for funeral work during the entire week. The bedding season has opened up in earnest with the advent of summery weather, and the demand for shrubs and other outdoor plants is very brisk. There have been a few weddings the past week, but funeral flowers have constituted the main volume of the trade, both local and out-of-town. There is plenty of stock in all lines with the exception of carnations, which are extremely scarce on account of the proximity of Mothers' day. Roses are leading in cut flowers, and the quality of all varieties is fine. The advance demand for flowers for Mothers' day is unprecedentedly large. Wholesalers say they have booked orders for all the stock they will be able to cut for that day.

The monthly meeting of the florists' club was held May 3, at the store of the Doswell Floral Co., with President Edgar Wenninghoff in the chair. It was decided to run large display ads in all the daily papers, with club co-operation. Prices for Mothers' day were also agreed upon. A discussion of the order of allowing florists only half their usual amount of coal for next winter's consumption was held, but nothing definite in this regard was decided upon.

Miss C. B. Flick, of the Patten Flower Shop, Toledo, Ohio, who came here last week to attend the confirmation of her nephew, Joseph Flick, was called to Ada, Ohio, Sunday on account of the death of a relative. Miss Flick says the demand has been excellent in Toledo this spring. Miss Helen Patten, of the same firm, has just returned from a rest at Mount Clemens, Mich.

Miss Margaret Vesey left last week for Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., where she will have charge of a hostess house.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

POTATOES for seed are slightly lower in the Chicago market.

CLEVELAND, O.—James Fisher, of the Walter E. Cook Seed Co., has been drafted.

GARDEN BEAN acreage planted for seed in 1918 is estimated at seven per cent increase over 1917.

THE American Beet Sugar Co. has raised the price for growing beets to $10 per ton, an increase of $3.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The rainfall for the season to May 4 was 13.43 inches; last season, 15.05 inches.

THE Michigan state seed corn commission is distributing seed from northern Delaware and New Jersey.

ONION SETS jobbing trade in the Chicago district is dead, odd lots to be had on buyers' terms with a dollar the top price.

A BILL regulating the price of fertilizers and farm implements will be reported to the House of Representatives soon.

CAMBRIDGE, N. Y.—The death is announced this week of Mrs. Jerome B. Rice; funeral May 8. Three daughters and one son survive.

CINCINNATI, O.—J. Charles McCullough has returned home and will now take up consideration of the seedsmen's many new problems.

MARIETTA, PA.—Charles Johnson, American representative for Denaiffe & Son, Carignan, France, has removed to this city from Cynwyd, Pa., for the summer and fall months.

TOLEDO, O.—March clover, cash, was weak May 6, at $18.00, closing at the same price as on May 4. Timothy was 10 cents lower for October, old quoted at $3.80; new, $3.82; September, $4.45, and October, $4.15.

VARIOUS state seed corn departments, in their circulars and announcements, entirely ignore the fact that for many years American seedsmen have made it their especial business to care for the country's needs in this direction.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—John H. Earl, son of Howard M. Earl, of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., in attendance at the third officers' training school, has been made a sergeant and will soon receive a second lieutenant's commission. Another son, Douglas, is a corporal in the 111th Infantry. Both boys are enthusiastic and cannot get "over there" too soon.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Northrup King & Co. report that up to April 20 trade was quite satisfactory, but during the last 10 days in the month the demand was not quite up to that of the corresponding period last year. The season, however, is earlier. The grass seed market is steady, with moderate inquiry. The onion set supply is sufficient for all requirements, with prices and demand subnormal.

Storage Lily Bulbs.

London cable advices of May 5 state that cold storage giganteum lilies averaged at auction $41.00 per case, while flowers of these are selling at $18.00 per 100 at wholesale.

Iowa Seed Dealers' Association.

The Iowa Seed Dealers' Association will meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, Walnut street, Des Moines, June 4-5. Vice-President C. E. Atherton, Deep River, will preside, in the absence of President Frank Page, who is now in the service of his country. A very interesting meeting is promised.

A. M. ELDEIDGE, Sec'y.

Commission Seedsmen Meet.

The box commission seedsmen held a meeting at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, May 8. About a dozen of the leading houses in this line were represented and the ways and means of 1919 business were the principal subjects considered. It is common belief that increasing costs will compel United States commission dealers to adopt the 10-cent packet, which, we understand, met with no serious reverse in Canada this year.

Wheat Crop Forecast.

Washington, May 8. — A winter wheat crop of 572,000,000 bushels is forecast by the government report issued today, showing a condition on May 1 of 86.4 per cent of normal, against 78.6 on April 1, 73.2 on May 1, 1917, and 85.7 the 10-year average. The estimate on April 1 was for 560,000,000 bushels. Last year the crop amounted to 418,070,000 bushels, and in 1916 it was 480,553,000 bushels. This year's yield promises to be one of the three largest crops ever raised in this country. With the spring wheat the total harvest this year, while falling short of the billion bushels sought by the department of agriculture, is expected to give material relief to the food situation of this country and its allies.

Onion Seed Crop in Canary Islands.

The outlook for the 1918 Canary Island onion seed crop is reported, April 30, according to Commerce Reports, as showing a probable reduction in the amount of seed, despite the fact that the big demand and high prices during the 1917 season caused an earnest effort to be made by the growers to enlarge their plantings for the coming season. The high prices demanded in September and October for first-class bulbs, which were due to a decided scarcity, especially as regards the white or wax variety, actually resulted in considerable underplanting, so that at the present time the best available figures appear to indicate a shortage of approximately 20 to 25 per cent in developed plants on this date as compared with 1917 figures. The plants are about 15 inches high and, as a result of a more than normal rainfall during the November-February period, are well developed and in excellent condition. The onion bulbs used for planting last season suffered somewhat for the lack of potash salts, while there is reason to believe that there is not so much phosphate being fed to the present crop as is usually considered desirable in order to obtain the best results from the seed viewpoint.

It may perhaps be of interest to American growers to state here the methods employed by some of the most successful growers as regards the choice of onion bulbs used in planting for seed. A two-inch bulb, weighing approximately 25 grams, is considered the ideal bulb from which to grow seed. The bulb should preferably feel very hard under pressure and be of a close texture. The onion seed is planted here from October to December and the onions are taken up from April to June. The variation in time is due not so much to weather conditions, which are fairly steady, as to the variation in the amount of water available for irrigation.

To obtain good bulbs with say 90 per cent of germination requires considerable potash in the way of fertilizers, and the leaf should be kept down as much as possible, to throw more nourishment into the bulbs. These bulbs, lifted from April to June, should be planted in the following October to yield the seed crop in the period embraced between June 20 and July 15.

The original Canary Island bulb of the best quality is said to have come from the Bilbao district in Galicia, that northwestern section of Spain fronting on the Bay of Biscay. These onions were a pinkish onion, which, by selection, developed into the yellow onion of a light golden color. This, by further selection, was gradually developed into the pure white, or so-called wax, Canary onion, the most expensive and most sought after.

The prospects are that the white or crystal wax seed will be somewhat scarcer this season than last, due to a scarcity of white bulbs up to the standard in character for planting purposes. Yellow and red are now said to be also somewhat scarcer than last year, although not to the same extent as is true of the crystal wax.

The unsettled conditions as regards sailings of Spanish steamers are causing some anxiety among the larger shippers at this time and may develop into an extremely important factor in the movement of the 1918 crop.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Currie Bros. Co.
reports this season's business has been exceptionally good although grass seed sales have not been as firm as usual and prices have been high. Prices on onion sets have a downward tendency with demand not very brisk.

JACKSON, MICH.—In nearly all instances, report S. M. Isbell & Co., the demand is holding up well compared with last season's business, with an upward tendency in prices of grass seed. On onion sets, of which the supply seems to be greater than the demand, prices are low.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The demand for garden seeds in general, previous to April 1, was ahead of any former season, according to the Harnden Seed Co. Since that date rain and cold weather has caused a considerable falling off in sales. The market on grass and field seeds is weak, probably due to high prices prevailing. Onion sets are in heavy supply but the demand is not brisk. Prices are $2 to $2.50 per bushel for colors and $2.75 to $3 for white of good quality.

Garden Vegetable Plants.

Nearly every bedding plant grower who markets his own stock will this spring run garden vegetable plants as a side line; in fact, many will make them an important feature of their business.

The H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who find all kinds of seedling vegetable plants an important adjunct to their spring business, have this season gone extensively into tomatoes, egg plants, peppers and parsleys. Their houses at Andalusia have a stock in seed boxes, tables, and already in 2½-inch pots, which foots up to about 200,000. The seed was sown in succession from the last of February. Batches of middle of March have come along very fast, almost catching up to the others, and giving Superintendent A. Burton, who is now in charge, a job to find pots and room for them.

Temperature and water are important features, and as well to see that they do not become too crowded in the seed beds and boxes, as a damaging fungus will appear and create havoc almost over night. Many of the seed boxes are placed on pipe shelves up next the glass, where the seedlings make a sturdy, stocky growth. When of sufficient size, they are set into 2½-inch pots, from which they are sold. The stock is all in good condition as to vigor and preparedness, the first shipments going out about April 1 for southern trade. The home demand commences about April 20, many home gardeners risking the danger of frost in their eagerness to get things going. The varieties are as follows: Tomatoes—Stone, dwarf; Stone, private stock; Cracker Jack, Earliana, John Baer and Ponderosa. Egg plants—New York and Black Beauty. Cauliflower—Snowball and Early Paris. Peppers—Bull nose and Cayenne. Parsley—Covent Garden.

A house of cannas, small crowns rooted and ready to pot up, were in fine condition. A house of dahlias, from which cuttings were being taken, and 40,000 seedling cyclamens were also features here.

Canned Corn Labels.

Early frosts of the last season and an increased demand for canned corn have caused a shortage of "sweet corn," which the housewife usually expects to get when buying "canned corn." To offset this scarcity, says the bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture, some packers have canned the green or immature "field corn," which is tougher and coarser and of lower quality than the ordinary sweet corn, and have sweetened it with sugar.

This product, says the bureau, is not, strictly speaking, a "canned corn," and the federal authorities require the product to be labeled as "field corn." When the product is sweetened with sugar this fact should also be declared upon the label. Purchasers and consumers are advised to read the labels on canned corn and to remember that if they are purchasing sweetened canned field corn which has been properly canned they are obtaining a wholesome article of food. They should expect, however, that the field corn will not be of the same quality as the ordinary sweet corn, and they should be compensated by not paying so much for it.

MANISTEE, MICH.—There has never been a finer showing of stock at the Clarkson Greenhouses than that seen here this year. The fine display at Easter especially was much admired by many visitors to the establishment.

Imports Embargo Hearing May 28.

Nurserymen should not forget to engage railroad accommodations and arrange for hotel rooms at Washington, where they are called to appear on the above date and show cause why their foreign importations should not be cut off. And why not look up some war job at the same time?

The sooner the importing nurseryman gets into some other business the better he will fare. It may be up to some war board at the capital to suggest what can be done by patriotic men to help win the war. In Washington, on the manufacturing side, there is the Bureau of Manufacturing Resources of the Council of National Defense, which is giving its attention to the problem of plant conversion. On the commercial side, there is the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense, which has undertaken to co-operate with business men  in eliminating the needless use of men, materials, equipment and capital in all lines of commercial business.

Embargo on Nursery Stock, Bulbs, Etc.

James McHutchison, of McHutchison & Co., New York, member of the committee on tariff and legislation of the Society of American Florists, reports that although further negotiations are still proceeding, prospects are not favorable for the lifting of the present embargo on shipments of lily bulbs from Japan next fall and it appears as if florists will have to make another sacrifice in the interests of the national welfare. The correspondence between Mr. Hutchison and the war trade board, bureau of imports, is subjoined.

New York, April 27, 1918.
War Trade Board,
Bureau of Imports,
45 Broadway, New York.

Gentlemen:—
Your supplementary list of "Restricted Imports" dated April 1 (which classifies items on No. 1 list of March 23) includes "Bulbs
No. 61" and temporarily shuts out shipments of Japanese lily bulbs. As these bulbs are of such vital importance to American florists, I wish to briefly present a few facts for your consideration in behalf of this national organization of florists and allied trades.

1. These lily bulbs produce the "Easter lilies" handled by practically every florist in the United States; they cannot be produced in this country—but must be imported from Japan.

2. The florists have already made large sacrifices—though loyally supporting war measures. Many florists specialize in forcing these bulbs and without them would be forced out of business, as nothing else takes their place.

3. Being not only perishable but seasonable, shipments of these bulbs must leave Japan during August, September and October, or as the different varieties become ripe. They cannot be shipped before August or until they are ripe, nor can they be shipped after October or they would arrive frozen and worthless and too late.

4. Last year importers of these bulbs lost upwards of $50,000 worth, due to the consignments being delayed and arriving frozen. This loss falls exclusively on the American importers and in many instances makes the purchase of Liberty Bonds impossible.

5. The shipments of these bulbs represent raw materials. They occupy very little space as compared to their importance to American citizens, and much material from Japan not now restricted could be substituted with much less loss to the country's interests.

6. As these bulbs are grown in Japan only for export, the stoppage of exports for even one season would cause the Japanese growers to discontinue their production and destroy their stock bulbs and it would be many years after the war ends before these bulbs would again be available in commercial quantities.

7. The government now derives a revenue through duty of $5 per 1000 bulbs, or approximately 30 per cent of Japan value, and if importations were stopped, customs would lose this revenue.

8. The policy of this organization is to do everything possible to "get the war won," but you absolutely tie our hands if you prohibit the importation of absolutely essential raw materials.

9. Outside of war supplies, we know of nothing imported from Japan that is more essential to the welfare of this country, and the policy of getting the war won, than the importation of these bulbs. Without them many more florists will be forced out of business.

If you cannot permit imports on the presentation of these facts, I respectfully request that you arrange for a hearing when the facts can be presented personally by a small delegation. We realize the pressing need of war supplies and are prepared to make any necessary sacrifice to enable them to come, but if there is any space available on steamers from Japan, we feel that these bulbs should be given preference above all other commercial merchandise.

JAMES MCHUTCHISON,
Member, Legislative Committee, S. A. F.

May 1, 1918.

Mr. James McHutchison,
95 Chambers Street,
New York City.

We beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 27th inst., which has been referred to us by our New York office. We have carefully noted your statement of facts, and have laid your letter before those who have in charge the consideration of any possible modification of lists of restricted imports.

You will appreciate, of course, that the urgent need for increased tonnage in order that troops and supplies may be transported overseas, and our armies maintained in France, makes essential the reduction in importation to provide the necessary and additional space. It is the urgency of this problem that makes the immediate and rigid enforcement of all restricted lists imperative.

This demand for shipping space for military uses is so great that all dispensable commodities must be eliminated from our imports. In fact, it is probably true that with all dispensable commodities eliminated, and essential imports pared down to the very bone of minimum requirements, there still will remain a shortage of shipping to satisfy the needs of military uses, and our essential industries during the remainder of this year.

For your further information, it may interest you to know that 9000 dead weight tons of shipping saved, would be enough to carry the supplies required for the annual support of at least 7000 soldiers in France, or, to put it in other terms, it would transport for the support of the Allied nations, approximately, 500,000 bushels of wheat. You will, therefore, readily understand that there is very little likelihood of any modification being made to the restricted lists. However, should there be any, you will receive notice thereof.

HILL'S SPECIMEN EVERGREENS—B & B (Balled and Burlapped)

FOR FLORISTS' TRADE.

Every Hill Specimen Evergreen is hand dug with a solid earth ball, which is securely burlapped. (Hence the term B&B—balled and burlapped.) When you want quality Evergreens come to headquarters. Large and complete stock always on hand.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS FOR PROPER PLANTING ARRANGEMENT.

The following list of Evergreens have been classified with regard to their uses in the garden and landscape arrangement. Each distinct type naturally lends itself to the situation best suited by its natural habit of growth.

ROSALIND

A GLORIFIED OPHELIA.

A greatly improved Ophelia. The particular value of Rosalind lies in its exquisite coloring. When the buds first show color they are bright coral, changing as they develop to apricot-pink, and when fully developed they are a most beautiful shell pink. The flower is much more double than Ophelia, having at least one-third more petals. It is also delightfully fragrant. In habit of growth Rosalind is identical with Ophelia, from which it is a sport. It originated with us two years ago, and grown side by side with Ophelia, is far superior to that variety.

Awarded First Prize at International Flower Show, New York, March, 1917, for best new rose. Awarded additional Silver Metal at same show for display of Rosalind. Awarded Silver Medal by the Horticultural Society of New York. Awarded Silver Medal by the Tarrytown Horticultural Society. Also numerous certificates.

WILL BE DISSEMINATED SPRING OF 1918.

MEMORIAL DAY SUGGESTIONS.

Memorial Day.

The coming observance of this patriotic anniversary promises, on account of the martial spirit now uppermost in the public mind, to exceed in importance that of any that has gone before. It is a business opportunity of great value to the florists who are alert and equipped to make the most of it.

It is not enough that one accepts just what trade is offered, for those who were from the first most active in its observance, the army veterans, have of late been rapidly passing away, and before long, in many sections of the country, if the patriotic spirit is not in some way kept active, this beautiful custom will die with them. Everything possible to revive and keep alive the floral decoration of soldiers' graves at this time, should receive the best attention of the trade.

The florists of Boston and the New England states have in some way so featured the celebration that it has become the custom to place flowers on all graves, so that the week previous and including Memorial day is their busiest period of the year. The various florist supply firms find in Boston their best market at this time for all classes of stock such as metal wreaths, magnolia leaf designs, artificial, crepe and waxed flowers, etc. Boston patriots are no more loyal than are to be found in any other part of the country, but they "Say it with flowers" to a much greater extent.

If all the trade in each community would unite in a movement to encourage and increase the use of plants and flowers for Memorial day, it would not be long before there would be a noticeable impetus in the demand, which would grow each year in proportion to the efforts made to further it. Well written articles, recalling stirring incidents of the War of the Rebellion, bringing in the names of local heroes of that day, many of them now almost forgotten, would be particularly interesting at this time, and be almost sure to find space in prominent and local newspapers all over the country. Such accounts should always contain references to the proper observance of Memorial day and the beautiful custom of decorating with plants and flowers the graves of these defenders of the Union, who gave their lives for the cause of freedom. Even without this unity of action, if each would put his best foot forward, and feature the day in advance, he would get his reward in the business that comes to him who helps himself. Working with, and using the literature, window cards and other publicity material of the S. A. F. committee, will be found of the greatest advantage.

Cemetery Florists.

Those who are situated near, and make a specialty of cemetery trade, who grow and retail most of their products, find in Memorial day, the climax of their season. The trimming and cleaning up the lots, planting beds and graves, filling vases and hanging baskets, must be completed, with every basket and vase looking its best and in place before May 30. On that day, there are to be placed all the wreaths and sprays and fresh flower decorations for those who keep the anniversary by visits to the cemetery.

Much of the strain caused by long hours of working overtime can be avoided by a systematic laying out of the business and its needs in advance.
Magnolia and oak leaf designs, prepared long before, should be in stock in sufficient quantities to meet all expected demands, finished and ready for all kinds of decorative effects.
Many trimmed with cape flowers, or immortelles in colors, can also be prepared and used early in the month nicely displayed to feature the event.
There is no question but what prepared pieces in assortment, well arranged, turn admiring visitors into customers, who buy much more than they expected because the goods look so inviting.

Much can also be done in the preparation of standard sprays for the decoration of the graves. There is the 50 cent, the 75 cent and the $1 size which is to consist of so many of each kind of flower, mostly shrubbery with a few carnations or cheap roses for color. Peonies can be bunched with sprays of snowball or deutzia or used by themselves in bunches to sell from $1 to $3. A good stock of cycas leaves in medium sizes can be handled to good advantage as many will have them added to their sprays or wreaths if properly shown. If these are gotten together the day or night before, well sprinkled and covered up on a damp floor or cool place, they will be in good shape to hand out when the rush comes. All such work should be well covered from drafts, or it will soon wilt down.

Low bulb or fern pans, filled with geraniums, will sell readily for $1 to $1.50. When well in bloom, they are very showy and move off quickly. They appeal to customers as lasting longer than cut flowers, and not likely to be overturned by the wind.

Metal designs are good stock, which although artificial, are preferred by some on account of their natural appearance and lasting qualities. Some stores carry a large line and find them quite salable and profitable.

Flowers and Designs for Memorial Day.

Memorial day is the one period of the year when the grower-retailer, with an acre or two of ground, handles his cut flowers to the greatest advantage. Peonies are generally at their height or can be cut in bud and kept for a week or 10 days so as to insure the bulk of the crop at this time. In addition to the peonies, the shrubbery for the most part, will be at its height of bloom, the Japanese snowball being particularly useful. Weigelias, pink and white, and deutzias give variety. With these as a foundation, and carnations and roses to give color, designs, baskets, and cluster arrangements can be quickly gotten together in great variety.

Laurel wreaths are especially appropriate for grave decoration; these, loosely arranged in frames of moss, made up in advance and decorated with red, white and blue immortelles and a knob of tricolor ribbons, are preferred by some on account of their lasting qualities. A few medium-sized sago leaves can be worked into the centers of the wreaths with good effect.

Bronze and green galax leaves are still favorites for those who have a horror of prepared or artificial leaves or flowers. These can, of course, be decorated with any of the fresh flowers at hand.

Florists who advertise and solicit parcels post mail trade, handle large quantities of magnolia leaf wreaths decorated with waxed crepe flowers made in the form of roses, chrysanthemums and carnations. An immense trade of this character is done by the florists of New England, worked up entirely through advertisements in the newspapers. They use but little wording, just a cut of the wreath with the price, and the fact that it is a special price feature at this time. Now that the use of this branch of the postal service has become so efficient, there is no reason why such a business could not be built up in all parts of the United States. One must be prepared to handle the trade when it comes, and also spend quite a sum for newspaper space in encouraging the demand.

National color effects are popular at this time and small flags worked into clusters and wreaths of flowers are particularly appropriate for the decoration of soldiers' graves. Grand Army lodges and corps marks made of red, white and blue immortelles, were at one time very popular for Memorial day. Grand Army posts were then large, and their membership took an active part in the decoration of their comrades graves.

The accompanying illustrations give a few examples of arrangements of natural and prepared foliage, combined with flags, tricolor ribbon, immortelles, etc. The spray of red and white peonies and iris on palm leaves, tied with tricolor ribbon gives the natural colors. Cornflowers are a better blue than the iris. The addition of the palm leaves adds considerable to the appearance of a bunch of peonies and provides a foundation on which the flowers can be spread over to show to a better advantage. Peonies also look well on magnolia wreaths; here again with the cornflower we have the same national color effect. Short or medium sized sago leaves work nicely into wreaths, making a finish and giving value that greatly exceeds their cost.

Window Cards.

The importance or advertising value of neatly printed notices or cards for window display, announcing the hundred and one things that are live features of the retail cut-flower business, throughout the year, is not appreciated by most of the storekeepers. The number of people that pass given points in the central retail districts of any large city or town each day during business hours, is about equal to the circulation of any one of the large daily newspapers. If the windows of the shop are attractive, many will stop and have a look. If window cards bearing the message of the store are on duty, they will be read, even by the man in a hurry, who will then take the store news with him, which will make more or less impression, according to his tastes and mood at the time. Ninety per cent of the people who stop and notice the display will read the cards and receive a more or less lasting impression. If the cards refer to a week-end sale, in which prices are featured, comparisons are at once made with the stock. If the prices are favorable, a point is gained, the store being set down as worth a trial; if not then, at the first opportunity. Dates often present the idea that is intended to be conveyed; as a red heart with the date, February 14; an ax or two or a couple of hatchets with February 22 on the blade is sufficient. St. Valentine's day and Washington's birthday at once flash to the mind.

MEMORIAL DAY WREATH.

Laurel with Peonies.

A window filled with various-sized cut-flower boxes tied up as if for delivery, a couple nicely filled and exposed, together with choice corsage bouquets, will make a showy and attractive window. To make more effective there should be a good-sized card with the new S. A. F. slogan, "Every Day Is Somebody's Birthday—Send Flowers, Always a Good Thing to Do." For instant effect, "To-Day" might be substituted for "Every Day," and perhaps the fact to the observer calls to mind that "To-Day" is the birthday of some particular friend that a sale is at once made.

A window filled with choice house plants should have as a central feature, a card reading "Six of the Best Varieties of Plants for House Culture." This attracts attention to them with renewed interest, and perhaps the desire to have one at home. When the display is ferns and table ferneries, the card might read over a large interrogation mark, "How is the Fernery? This suggests that perhaps it needs renewing, and the order is received owing to the suggestion of the card.

Cards referring to all floral holidays should be displayed at least a week or two weeks before the event, always backed up by stock or something suggestive of the occasion. All the floral days should be featured with window decorations appropriate to the event, and from 10 days to two weeks before, in order to get all the advertising possible out of it.

A window decorated with wedding accessories, should include several photos of brides, holding bouquets. "Let us send you our estimate" appeals directly to interested parties or lookers-on, who might have intended to order elsewhere or perhaps had not attended to this important matter. "Don't forget her violets today", would be a good inscription for a violet window. When there is a fern sale on with a window of Scottii's or the like, the card might read, "Every home should have a fern. Your choice of these sturdy plants for $1.00."

These are but a few samples of the cards that may be used, which if backed up with the goods at fair prices, will be sure to give good results. Feature windows should be the rule, not the exception. The idea and material for this work, week after week, as the seasons roll by, should be planned well in advance, when with everything ready it takes but a comparatively short time to make a finished and effective decoration.

A number of firms are now issuing a weekly service of illustrated cards that are suitable for various lines of business. Many of these are quite attractive, and being made in quantity for broadcast circulation, are reasonable in price. Very neat cards that have a personal touch, and are exactly suited to the window or store display, can be made to order for trifling sums and are really to be preferred to the stock systems.

The cards and pamphlets now being sent out by the S. A. F. publicity committee are exceptionally good. They should have a place and be kept to the front in every store and window. The florist who does not join in this movement and contribute to the fund so as to be able to use this literature, stands in his own light. To W. F. Thirkildson, chairman of the publicity committee, who worked the members of the S. A. F. at the New York convention up to such a pitch, by the well-planned campaign and started the fund in such a substantial manner, and to Henry Penn, who is now in charge of the campaign—our hats off to both of them. Mr. Penn's recent appeal to each member of the S. A. F. is a masterpiece of logic that should awaken the slothful ones to realization of the grand opportunity open to them through their co-operation. To wait for a more propitious time is the plea of the weak-kneed, vacillating ones. The man who is sure of himself, has confidence, and goes after the business, gets it.

All the large advertisers in other lines are using both newspapers and magazines, and with very few exceptions, taking as much space as ever, driving ahead and reaping the benefit. Let every retailer boost his business. Keep his best foot forward, use every legitimate means of publicity. Talk flowers, first, last and all the time, and carry a supply for all demands.

Progressive Ideas.

In these days of keen competition one's wits must be working overtime, hatching out new ideas or methods of presenting the staple articles in a new guise or manner that gives to them an added importance. Every foot of the expensive store space should be filled with up-to-date articles of either direct or good side lines that can be handled with more or less profit and add materially to the revenues of the store.

The trellis box is an example of what can be done with an old idea, which, when used in a different way, makes an entirely new and salable article. The miniature box, empty or filled with a few small plants, is often passed without notice; the addition of the trellis at the back, however, on which to train a small leaved ivy, gives it character. It becomes at once a miniature garden and has had a wonderful sale. Many patterns have grown out of this idea, the trellis taking the form of arches, pergolas, columns, etc. The boxes are in various shapes, oval and half circles, woven out of rattan, open work with various colored tin and zinc linings. They are made in large sizes, which, when filled at Easter with rambler roses over the trellises, are very showy and salable.

The ivy trellis, a wooden white painted, fan-shaped trellis for ivies, completely transforms the ordinary plant, with its branches tied to a single stick, giving it an ornamental and decorative effect that is seen to just fit in with this or that spot in the house that needs something to enliven it.

Select a few of the bushy Scotti ferns, place them in terra cotta hanging baskets and show them in the window. Let one balance the other over pulleys; they are much easier to water handled in this way.

Some florists have quite a run on certain lines of baskets that in other shops remain on the shelves. For the most part this is because one man sees the utility, the best use or way to fill it, while another does not. There is not an article in the shop but is the better for being featured, its use and good qualities shown to the best advantage. A novelty table, on which to display new stock, made-up baskets, or some line that is being pushed, should occupy a position well to the front of the store where it cannot fail to attract all visitors.

Many florists have something new and exclusive for their trade for each holiday season. This may be a creation of their own or a line of baskets seen in their supply house, of which, by buying a quantity, they contrail the design for their city. At times a certain shade of color is adopted, which tone runs through all baskets, boxes and ribbons.

H. H. Battles, of Philadelphia, Pa., made a hit last Easter, having a varied line of baskets and hampers made of cornstalks, which he furnished to his supply houses. These were painted in various color tones, presenting a very fine appearance, equal to the most expensive work.

New ideas in the arrangement of cut flowers, color combinations, ribbon effects and plant baskets, also for Valentine's, Washington's birthday and Paddy's day are now in order. It is enterprise in this direction that marks the progressive man. There is a character and exclusiveness in the products of his store that stamp him as a leader. One success follows another, but not without hard work. He is to be found on the job all the time, growing in experience with the business which it is a pleasure to manage and direct.

One should have their eyes open at all times for ideas that can be adapted to their particular business. Comparatively few flower stores display their various articles to the best advantage. A visit to the gift shops conducted in connection with drug or the department stores of the large cities will show examples of all classes of goods arranged in the most inviting manner. Nearly every table will contain a printed card calling attention to the stocks and price. Every foot of display space is filled with salable and seasonable things placed to the best advantage. No forlorn-looking articles or dust-covered, rubbishy corners are allowed in these up-to-date business houses.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Jones-Russell Co., in order that the soldiers at Camp Sherman might have carnations for Mothers' day, donated its entire supply as a patriotic gift, and in advertisements in the daily press asked its customers to co-operate in the spirit by purchasing other flowers.

PLANT NOTES.

Dahlias.

Although the dahlia is of very robust growth and comparatively easy of culture, yet it is one of the most tender plants and will not stand any cold treatment, for the slightest frost will check the growth and almost invariably kill the plant back. It is, then, too early yet to plant the clumps except where all danger of late frosts has passed, but the eyes may start into growth during the warm days of May, so they should be kept in safe and warm quarters. Where the grower has a good, tight frame that is frost-proof the clumps can be taken from storage and placed in the frame and the tubers will grow plump and the eyes break ready for planting as soon as the weather grows warm enough. The place selected for growing them the coming season should, however, be prepared, the ground spaded deeply and, if not manured last fall, some well rotted manure spaded in. Many growers do not advise heavy manuring when the clumps are planted, and especially no fresh manure, much preferring to get a fair supply in the ground the previous fall, so that the rankness will be dissipated in the soil, for too strong manure causes a rank growth and the plants do not bloom as early. With enough manure incorporated in the soil to produce a good hard growth, and not too soft, then mulch with manure when the buds begin to set, in the manner of some of the most successful growers. The young stock that was propagated from clumps started in March should now be good, stocky little plants, and the last of the propagating should be done early in May to have good stock for June planting. Keep the young plants under safe cover and plunge the pots in soil to keep them moist and not require too frequent or too heavy watering.

Peonies.

The peony is one of the most important flowers to the florist during the early part of summer, and they are used in large quantities for decorations and other floral work. In cutting peonies for market, especially those that are to be shipped, it is best to cut them when the first petals unfold, and allow them to open in water. They ship much better in this condition and also last much longer. Where they are allowed to remain on the plant until open the flowers not only bruise more or less in transportation, but the petals drop more easily when the flowers are unpacked if they are open when cut and made ready for shipment. In cutting the flowers from the plant, many growers make the mistake of cutting too low. The demand of the customers is, of course, for long stems, but for the good of the plant there should be left two well-formed leaves upon the stem when the flower is cut off. This will allow enough foliage for the plant to continue its growth and thoroughly ripen off. Where the plant is cut back too severely the root action is injured and a diminished number of flowers will be the result in the succeeding year. Keep the plants tied up by stakes and strings outside of the row; a heavy rain when the plants are heavy with buds will often knock them down and ruin many of the flowers.

Ficus Elastica.

While the rubber plants do not enjoy the popularity that they did 10 or more years ago, yet there is always more or less demand for good small plants every fall, and cuttings rooted now and given good culture can be grown to fine stock at that time. Every plantsman will have plants of Ficus elastica that have outgrown the salable size or have lost many of the lower leaves, and the tops of these can be propagated during the warm weather. The best way to root the young plants is on the plant by mossing the cut. Make an incision in the stem about half way through, in which insert a small stick about the size of a match stick to keep the cut open. Bind around the cut wet moss, which should be firmly tied on with raffia and kept wet constantly. The plant should then be placed in a warm, moist house, kept fairly close, and in two or four weeks the roots will be seen protruding from the moss. The top should then be cut off and potted in a 4-inch or 5-inch pot and grown in a warm, close house until the roots have become established in the soil. If a number of these plants are being grown, a mild hotbed can be made up outside, built up with boards so as to allow 18 inches of room between the soil and glass, and covered with a shaded sash. Plunge the pots in the soil, and if the frame is kept close, allowing air only on the warmest days, the plants will grow rapidly. As fall approaches more air can be admitted, the plants gradually hardened off and splendid stock will be the result.

Marguerites for Winter.

To have good marguerites for winter flowers the plants must have a good start in the spring. For large plants the stock should now be in 2½ or 3-inch pots and growing vigorously, but if the cuttings have not been made they can now be propagated in a cool bench and good-sized plants grown, or stock should be secured at once. Do not allow these plants to become pot-bound, but shift them into 4-inch pots as soon as they require it and pot very firmly. Keep the plants pinched back, that they may branch more freely, and keep all flowers and buds picked off. For many years these plants were grown in the open ground, but in some localities they have been attacked with a club root in field culture, and inside culture has become necessary for success. A cold frame in which the pots are plunged is the culture successfully practiced by many growers. In late summer they should be potted in large pots, 8-inch or 9-inch, or planted in the bench in good, rich soil, so that they will be well established for fall and winter flowering. The plants grown in pots are more prolific in flowering, and the size of the flowers can be maintained with liquid manure. Aphids should be kept down by fumigation, while the leaf miner is a very destructive insect if once firmly established, but persistent spraying with a strong nicotine solution will eradicate this pest.

Callas.

As the summer weather approaches the callas will cease producing flowers and will require a rest to prepare them for another year. They should be dried off gradually until they become "dust dry," when the roots will be thoroughly ripened. If watered, the calla will grow all the year around, but plants grown in this way will not produce as many flowers as those that are rested. Those grown in pots can be laid on their sides in the greenhouse until all danger from freezing weather is passed, when they can be removed outdoors, still placing the pots on the side in full sunlight. Those grown on the bench can be lifted with as much soil as possible and placed under the bench, where they will dry out gradually, and later planted in the full sun outside in a dry location, and as soon as thoroughly ripened shaken out and stored until wanted to start for another season. The yellow calla, Ricardia Elliottiana, is being grown more largely and the blooms have been used the last winter in many elaborate decorations. The culture of these is in pots and similar to the older varieties.

The Spirit of Sacrifice.

David L. Ewing, assistant director of operations of the United States shipping board, is exhibiting to his friends a copy of a letter recently received by the American Red Cross at San Francisco, Calif. The communication was accompanied by a gold tooth, to which it refers, and breathes the spirit of war sacrifice as exemplified in the west. The letter follows:

"Gents: Somebody told me that you was after old stuff like old jewelry and such. I got a gold tooth that I can get along without, as I guess the Red Cross needs it more than me. I got two, so I loosened this one and broke it off. The dentist charged me 10 bucks for it, so I guess it will bring you one buck. I don't think he made more than nine on it. Of course it was new then, but I just used it a little better than two years.

"I miss it a lot but the price of victuals is going up so I guess I won't need it so much for mush and hamburger as I did when we was used to getting stake for 18 cents a pound and a chunk of liver threw in. As I said, I got another tooth I might spare if the war gets worse. (Signed) JAKE THOMPSON."—Wall Street Journal Straws.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.—W. A. Lankford, who has developed one of the most extensive florist establishments in this section, opened a new retail store here, May 4, in the First National Bank building. The shop is modern and thoroughly equipped and was inspected by crowds of visitors, to each of whom was presented a floral souvenir.

SPRAY OF ROSES, LILAC AND CYCAS, BY A. LANGE, CHICAGO.

Mid-Western Horticultural Exhibition.

Flowers will be an important feature of the Mid-Western Horticultural Exhibition which will be held at Des Moines, Ia., November 5-8, 1918. The premium list has been issued and copies may be had upon application to Hon. Wesley Green, secretary of the Iowa State Horticultural Society, Des Moines. The flower section is divided into 30 classes with liberal awards for chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, decorative plants, etc. Nursery stock will also have a prominent place in the exhibition, and the garden movement will be well represented. The Iowa State Horticultural Society, the Iowa Nurserymen's Association, and a number of other organizations are extending the plan into all of the mid-western states, to make the show one of more than usual interest.

THE ROSE.

Care of Young Stock.

Everything that can be put in ship-shape for the benching of the young stock, only a few weeks off now, should be carefully looked after, and from May 15 to June 15 is about the best time to do the planting, to have the plants of fine size by September. So the thing to do now is to keep the young stock (in pots) moving along without check of any kind. There may be some of them that will be greatly benefited by a shift to a larger sized pot; the 2¼-inch can go into a 3-inch if they are to be planted at an early date, and this shift will carry them along nicely for about a month. Any stock in 2½-inch pots can now go into the 3½-inch sizes. The 3-inch pots will hardly require drainage, but from a 3½-inch and larger drainage will be required. Remember to use two pieces of broken crock, forming a kind of bridge over the drain-hole, instead of a handful of crushed crock.

Use a fairly rich compost when shifting. About two parts of soil to one of well rotted cow manure, with a small amount of finely ground bone (bone flour), will be about the thing. Pot carefully and firmly, so that the fresh soil surrounds the ball evenly in the new pot. Give the shifted stock plenty of room, at least between the rows; they can touch in the rows, which will hold them firmly so as not to upset them when syringing with plenty of pressure.

Keep them clean by thorough spraying, and fumigating regularly, as, if once the spider gets going on the pot stock, they will get a check they will be a long time recovering from. All ties should be removed from the young grafted stock, and they should be staked immediately afterward, otherwise a great many of them may become broken when syringing. The soil for the benches should be gone over from time to time and broken up finely, piling it up in a rick that will shed as much rain as possible. Also see that there is no chance for the water to lie around the pile; a shallow trench can be shoveled around close to the pile to carry off any surplus rainfall. It is not too late, by any means, to get a new compost started, if the quantity prepared in the fall is likely to run short. Pick out a good stiff sod and plow it to a depth of about six inches. Clear off a good convenient space near where it is to be used, loosen the manure well and haul quite a quantity before hauling the sod. Have some good medium fine bone meal near by and start with a layer of sod (grass side down); the layer should be about six inches deep. After the rough sod is laid, the loose shaken soil can be thrown over the top and a liberal dusting of bone given, then just enough of the fine soil scattered over the bone to cover it. Now put on the manure; if a six-inch layer of soil is used, about four inches of manure in the layer will run about right, as the manure will settle to a rather thin layer when it comes to cutting down the pile two weeks later. Do not go too high with the pile; about five feet is enough, if one has plenty of room. Let the last layer be one of soil left in a ridge and firmly packed with a shovel, to shed the water. In about two weeks it can be chopped down and repiled, and as often as possible from then until it is to be carried into the houses it should be gone over and broken up.

A few words concerning the care of the general stock at this time may not be amiss. Do not dispense with the nightman until all danger of the rose houses going below 56° is past. Get the air on the houses early and raise the sash gradually. Keep the beds well mulched and give plenty of water, now that the air can be increased. Plants that are to be carried over another season should be kept in vigorous growth right up to the time they are to be dried off for pruning. Perhaps there are one or more beds that will be benefited by pruning earlier. Plants that are throwing but few blooms and show a strong tendency to ripen up can very often be dried off early, pruned and started by July or earlier. Such plants will give good summer blooms, and it may be desirable to have at least a bed or so handled in this way. One-year-old plants on raised benches can be dried off a little, lifted (stakes and all) with a good ball and transferred to solid borders into absolutely fresh soil and they will be found to give a good account of themselves; in fact, this method has everything to recommend it, and by planting every year on the raised benches the young stock gets away faster and without a doubt will give more flowers than if planted in the solid borders the first year. Speed Up.

Doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark, you know what you are doing but nobody else does. You are in the greatest business in the world and why not let the public know it?

Here is the opportunity to start things moving by keeping up our national publicity campaign. Or, are you going to let it lag for want of contributions? Do you want to be like the fellow winking in the dark, or do you want to keep your employees busy? If so, send your contributions to John Young, Secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York, and let several million people know that flowers are a commodity to be had and that we have them.

The men who never spend a dollar to advertise wonder why the largest firms waste so much money. To which class do you belong?

EVERGREENS IN YEAR ROUND DECORATION.

Evergreens in Year Round Decorations.

The all year round value of evergreens as decorative features in landscape work, where by reason of their natural or prepared formal appearance, they fit so admirably into both the winter or the summer landscape or house decoration, is rapidly pushing them to the front in all decorative garden schemes. Beds and borders of evergreens in their great variety of form and coloring, which have added so much to the winter landscape, are now, with the bright fresh coloring of their new shoots, almost like plants coming into flower, giving life and beauty all the year round. Owing to their great variety of form and foliage, they are especially useful for tubs or vases, as the right plant can be found for any kind of receptacle, high or low, pyramid, bush or globe, to fit into any decorative scheme of the garden, or on steps or landings, leading from one level to another, at intervals on the terrace, either side of entrances or doorways, etc.

In all work of this character, one does not have to wait for the plants to grow to get the desired effect. Particular attention has been given by nurserymen, who make a specialty of evergreens, in preparing the varieties most suitable for this work, such as hemlock, pyramidal arbor vitae, junipers and many others with fine cut leaved foliage. These are trained and sheared, root pruned and several times replanted, so that they are ready, particularly in the spring, to be moved and potted up with safety, as it is the nature of the trees to make root in the early summer. Until firmly established, they require plenty of water and a frequent syringing of the foliage.

Evergreens in boxes for window decoration during the summer have been found very satisfactory. They present at all times a uniform, fresh appearance, while the flowering stock, beautiful at first, blossoms out and its soft growth turns yellow and loses its foliage during the heated weeks of August, particularly in the hot dry streets of the cities. Hotels and clubs are now adopting evergreens and other foliage plants for the decoration of their window ledges in preference to blooming stock, as they get the desired effect at once, which is maintained the season through. When planted in the spring and given the proper care, particularly as to watering and keeping the foliage free of dust by frequent hosing, evergreens take a firm hold of the soil, and on the approach of winter will be in much better condition to stand the severe weather than freshly planted stock.

As they grow, particularly in the early summer, they will need the longest shoots clipped or pinched, to keep them in shape. It is better to pinch, or with the point of the shears, clip the stem and not the foliage, such as is done in shearing a hedge. The boxes and specimen plants in tubs should not be trimmed until the new growth has set and is about to break out again. It is important that they are never allowed to become dust dry; plenty of water is necessary to keep the foliage full and plump.

Artificial stone or cement jardinières or window boxes are the best receptacles as they are at all times ornamental and almost certain to be kept filled and to the front. When the wooden tub or box wears out, it is relegated to the rear and a season or two may slip by before it is renewed.

Embargoes on foreign importations, on account of the war, are as regards nursery stock, of distinct advantage. Home-grown evergreens are found to be quite the equal of the imported with but little difference in price. They can be had at any time desired, as even in the winter months, enough stock for all general demands is lifted and stored, from which delayed orders can be filled.

The accompanying illustrations are of beds and groupings of evergreens growing on private estates at Latham park, a fashionable residence district on the Old York Road, Philadelphia, Pa. The large group at the entrance to the park is in splendid condition; notwithstanding the recent severe winter, with the thermometer down to 15 degrees below zero, but one plant on the north and two on the south side were killed. A close up view of the group shows a few of the larger trees which are some four feet in diameter and six to seven in height.

The steps from the lawn to the mansion of a private estate opposite the park, either side of which are grouped sheared globe specimens with taller varieties for a background shows a very decorative and effective setting. The illustration of a view across the lawn, with its varied colors, especially the bright hues of the Japanese maples, which stand out vividly in the various groups of evergreens, is a very beautiful piece of landscape gardening.

The Iris.

This showy, hardy outdoor plant is very popular, and its common, less expensive varieties are extensively used. It is to be regretted, however, that advantage is so rarely taken of the many beautiful new forms which have been introduced into this country. The comprehensive collection at the Missouri Botanical Garden, located in the central section of the perennial garden, in front of the Linnean house, represents most of the common and many rare types, and should prove of ing and loss of plants. Division of the clumps every three years is desirable, especially in the case of the tuberous iris, to avoid the matting and gradual elevation of the roots to the surface of the ground. Thorough cultivation should be practiced during the entire growing season.

Despite the numerous varieties of iris there is room for betterment through hybridization. Pollination is effected by removing the anthers when the flower first opens and preserving them in vials until ready to apply to commerce, mine operators and others are called upon to do their utmost to make the big drive a success. By the accumulation of a large volume of orders there will be demonstrated to every agency concerned the urgency of the demand, and in turn will result in increasing pressure for rapid and equitable distribution. Also, with the bulk of the year's demand ordered well in advance, the government will be in a position to properly adjust demands between different communities.

The fuel administration believes that 10 to 20 per cent, that is, 25,000,000 to 50,000,000 tons of coal, can be saved each year by correct operation of steam plants, using their present equipment. The administration is now preparing a series of official bulletins on engineering phases of steam and fuel economies, some of which are now ready for printing. They will include: Boiler and Furnace Testing, Flue Gas Analysis, Saving Steam in Heating Systems, Boiler Room Accounting System, Burning Fine Sizes of Anthracite, Boiling Water Treatment, Oil Burning, and Stoker Operation. In addition, a competent engineer will be available for each local administration, and still further instructive assistance is contemplated.

The week ending April 27 recorded not only the highest rate of production in 12 months, but was the third successive week of rising production. Reports of the United States geological survey show a total output of 11,668,000 net tons for that week, an increase of 5.7 per cent over the previous week. The average production per working day was 1,946,000 net tons, compared with 1,840,000 the previous six days and 1,680,000 net tons during the corresponding period in 1917. There was also a general improvement in car service.

Representatives of the United States fuel and railroad administrations will take an active part in the tenth annual convention of the International Railway Fuel Administration, to be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, May 23-24. The attendance, which will probably be more than 3,000, will include mine operators, representatives of mine workers, railway executives, etc.

Two recent publications bearing on the price situation have been promulgated by the United States fuel administration—"Coal Prices at the Mine, in Effect April 22, 1918," and "Maximum Prices of Coke, With Modifications, Showing Dates When Effective, Corrected to April 1, 1918."

value in popularizing some of the better varieties which are not as yet very widely known.

The iris may be popularly divided into three classes: German or tuberous rooted, Japanese or fibrous rooted, and Spanish or bulbous.

In the German group may be included Iris germanica, I. florentina, I. pallida, I. flavescens, I. plicata, I. neglecta, I. lurida, I. sambucina, I. squalens, and I. hybrida. Owing to their diversity of origin, the varieties of this group range in color from pure white through mauve and blue to purple. The flower stalks are branched, extending above the light green, flat, sword-like leaves. Two flowers are usually borne on a stem, the inner segments curved inward, the outer curving outward with a tuft of hairs near the base. The flowering period extends from late May through June.

The Japanese iris (I. laevigata or I. Kaempferi) differs from the German group in possessing fibrous roots, somewhat more slender, parallel leaves, and flat, expanded flowers free of the crest of hair, ranging in color from white through purple and blue. A moist, cool location is desirable for best results. The flowering season begins in June and continues through July.

The Spanish iris (I. Xiphium and I. Xiphoides), a dwarf, bulbous form, partly hardy, is effective because of strong color contrasts and numerous flowers. The flowers, appearing in May and June, are borne singly, having recurved segments, the outer being broader and of more brilliant hue.

The iris is easily grown. Any rich, moist, light soil will give satisfactory results, though the Japanese types require a greater degree of moisture. The common method of propagation is by division of the roots, early in the fall or spring. It is preferable that this be done in the fall in order that the plants may be established in the ground before winter. After the ground freezes a light mulch of manure or litter will help prevent heavthe stigma of the flower selected for pollination, the anthers of the female parent having previously been removed and the entire bloom covered with cheese-cloth or paper bag to prevent insect pollination. The pollen is usually viable for the period of a week. The stigma is located near the apex of the petal-like style and is ready for pollination when the upper edge drops down and exposes the upper surface. The seeds germinate readily, being either sown in the open ground in the fall or started indoors in the winter and planted out in the spring. Two or three years are required before flowers appear.—Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin.

Italy-America Flower Day.

To give encouragement to the Italian forces, and as one of the nations allied with us in the great world war which has had little or no sympathetic recognition in America such as has been accorded to other nations, the various war leagues of national character have organized to observe May 24, as Italy-America flower day. On this day everybody is requested to wear red and white flowers, with foliage, or flowers with red, white and green ribbon.

FLORISTS' HELP ASKED.

The movement is sponsored by the Italy-America Society, 165 Broadway, New York, Judge Charles Evan Hughes, president. Francis Markoe is chairman of the flower committee. This committee with the co-operation of the various leagues and societies prominent in the movement have called upon their local branches in 2,000 cities and towns to exert their influence to collect at these different points supplies of flowers, and to undertake their distribution.

Mr. Markoe, at the solicitation of the bodies working with him, has requested the secretary of the Society of American Florists to enlist the services of the florists in all these towns to take care of the flowers which the branch organizations will collect, and have them ready for the time of distribution. In other words, the florists are asked to consider their places of business as collection depots for the occasion, acting with the workers of the local organizations. No donations of flowers are asked, simply co-operation in the work of collection.

This request is laid before the trade in the belief that all florists will be willing to lend assistance as desired, and will act with the representatives of their local organizations if called upon to do so. The leagues in charge of the movement are as follows: Girls' Friendly Society, American Fund for French Wounded, Fatherless Children of France Fund, National Special Aid Society, National League for Women's Service, The American Commission for Devastated France, The Italian Red Cross, The Italian Chapter of the American Red Cross, National Girl Scouts, The Garden Clubs of America. Other organizations are being daily added to this list.

held at the Seventh Avenue hotel on the evening of May 7, the secretary attended the banquet. Mr. Asmus made a stirring address, dealing with the publicity campaign in all its phases. The secretary also spoke, mainly detailing the service of the promotion bureau. The secretary is pleased to report that several new members of the S. A. F. were obtained in Pittsburgh, three taking out life memberships. The subscriptions to the publicity campaign fund amounted to upwards of $4.00, most of them annual subscriptions for the four year period of the campaign. The secretary takes this opportunity to express his thanks for courtesies extended to him by the trade while in Pittsburgh, and his great appreciation of the especial services rendered his work by S. McClements and Ben Elliott.

The promotion bureau has sent out a number of electrotypes and lantern slides featuring Mothers' day. It should be borne in mind that neither slides nor electrotypes bear any date, consequently they are good for use indefinitely. Orders for booklets, signs, both glass and transfer, and stickers two inches to six inches long are now available for immediate shipment. All these will do better service among the florists than in the secretary's office, so it is hoped that those who have not yet taken any of these service aids will put in requests for them right away. The slogan "Say It With Flowers" cannot be seen too much, and every time it attracts attention its message goes home.

The following subscriptions are recorded for the week, annually for four years:

New York Florists' Club.

The intellectual features of the meeting of the New York Florists' Club held May 12 were first, the paper of Kenneth Gillett, of Southwick, Mass., on "Native Plants," while of equal interest was the talk of W. H. Elliott, of Boston, Mass., his subject being "Greenhouse Business in Wartime." The former conducted his listeners through a wonderful garden filled with all the native shrubs, evergreens and wild flowers that are always a source of delight to botanists and flower lovers. This paper would be invaluable to those who desire to lay out such a garden, it being most complete in the list of plants, as well as their culture. The talk of Mr. Elliott was a practical discourse by a practical man, who got right down to business and told of his experiences of the last winter and how he had met the difficulties that arose. He said he felt no person could lay out plans that would cover the case of each individual, the situations being different, and that every man would have to work out his own salvation. He urged that all accept the ruling of the fuel administration and make the best of it, feeling that whatever sacrifice was made was small compared with that being made by our boys "over there," and feel assured that the fuel administration was trying to do the right thing in curtailing coal consumption as a saving measure. In his opinion, the labor situation would also be made less of a burden with half the usual stock grown, which would result in decreased expenses and better prices. As an example, he quoted the glass manufacturers, who had cut production 50 per cent and had almost doubled prices, so that in reality they made more money than before. He said he felt that the men who had patriotically saved coal last year could safely add this amount in making out their average for three years, otherwise they would be doubly penalized in the 50 per cent order. Describing last year's management of his establishment, he stated he had partially overcome the labor problem by employing women in the greenhouses and had found them very efficient in the work; in some cases, such as grading flowers, better than men. They are not able to stand the hot weather, however, and when the heat of the spring months sets in they find excuses for getting away. He believes the main question to be: "Are we going to close up half of our houses or run the most of them on reduced temperatures?" In his case, he had reduced the temperatures in his rose houses from 60 to 48 and 50 degrees, which had saved half the coal. White Killarneys had been kept at this temperature since Christmas, and more money was cut from the plants than ever before. Ophelia and Sunburst go dormant under those conditions, but come back very good in the spring. Much coal can also be saved by careful firing, he found by experience, but it was hard to get men to do it. During his visit to Washington last fall, the idea came to him that the growers should have offered to cut down their coal supply, and he was firm in the belief that they could make just as much money with half the work. He has retubed his boiler with good second-hand tubes, which had been cleaned and polished. These cost him $300, but he expressed himself as satisfied that this had saved him $1,000 in his fuel bill. The cost of replanting his establishment he placed at $10,000 when he used wooden benches, but all of the stock now is in ground beds, where it does well for several years, and thus affects a saving of that amount, which is available for his coal supply. In speaking of coal, Mr. Elliott said that, while the dealers were allowed but 15 cents per ton margin by the fuel administration, they had manipulated deliveries to a point where people became panicky and they were finally allowed to deliver it at what was later found to be a profit of more than $2 per ton, which had made many of them wealthy. Referring to the small grower, the speaker said that he believed the majority would fare better by closing their houses and buying their flowers.

Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., said the labor problem was as serious as that of the coal. They were trying to conserve in both; they had been obliged the past winter to carry some of the rose houses as low as 40 degrees. He thought the fuel curtailment was going to be the biggest thing that had ever happened to the trade, as it would compel them to watch details of production as never before. They had put in a department of expense which cost $1,000 a year to maintain, but it was the best money they had ever invested. He showed how each branch of the business, or houses of certain stock that were thought to be good producers, were carried at a loss. After describing the labor troubles, he said he had found that life was far from being a bed of roses.

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., said he thought that a proper presentation of the problem to the fuel administration might bring about an adjustment, as a 50 per cent reduction was too drastic. He had been told that members of the administration did not know of this ruling until after it was sent out. Supply and demand were laws that even the government could not interfere with except to its own disadvantage. He read a very interesting newspaper article showing the necessity of keeping alive and prosperous all kinds of industries so that the owners would be in a position to help the government.

Charles H. Totty, president of the Society of American Florists, and Joseph Manda also spoke, and on the motion of H. A. May the club requested the committee of the S. A. F. to endeavor to get a modification of the order, particularly relating to the small grower.

An active discussion on the prohibition of the exportation of all plants from foreign countries, which measure was to come up in Washington, May 27, was led by August Rolker, who claimed the chief objection was from government inspectors at Washington, who claimed the larvae of all sorts of injurious insects was brought into the country in the soil about plants. Wallace R. Pierson said nurserymen and other plant importers could not agree on just what should come in and what be barred out. To make headway with the committee, all should agree and have something definite to work on. A committee was appointed to try and get up a workable plan.

President F. R. Newbold, of the Horticultural Society of New York, called attention to the opportunity of presenting a Ford motor car for the use of the Red Cross in France, and the purchase of this was at once unanimously endorsed by the club.

Fred H. Dressel, Jr., and A. Dressel, both of Weehawken, N. J., were elected to membership in the club. Among the visitors at the meeting was Jacques Comptine, Paris, France, representing the well-known horticultural firm of A. & L. Bremond Bros.

THE EXHIBITS.

The display of cut lilacs, Darwin tulips, pansies and pot plants of the shrubby and hybrid calceolarias, according to Patrick O'Mara, was the best and largest in the history of the club. The exhibits in general were unusual in quantity and excellence. T. A. Havemeyer, of Brookville, N. Y., who is the owner of a fine estate, and one of the leaders in the Horticultural Society of New York, made the finest exhibit of lilac ever seen in the club's rooms. All in all there were sixty varieties, the lilac color, or purple predominating, although there were also good white varieties. Among the most prominent in purple were Montaigne, Jules Ferry, Mareschal Bassoon Filere, Dr. Mastao, Negro, Mme. Anton Budmel, President Viger, Mme. F. Marel, Edmond Boisier and Vulcan. Miss E. Willmott is a fine white.

P. W. Popp, gardener for Mrs. H. Darlington, Mamaroneck, N. Y., had a fine exhibit of Darwin tulips, another of large pansies and a third of lilac in variety.

Rodman & Sons, Brooklyn, N. Y., staged a number of fine plants of calceolarias. James Stuart, gardener for Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, also had a fine calceolaria collection.

The awards were as follows: T. A. Havemeyer, silver medal; P. W. Popp, silver medal for tulips, lilac and pansies highly commended; James Stuart, certificate of merit, Rodman & Sons, honorable mention.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Bismarck, May 9, President Lautenschlager in the chair. There was a good attendance, the government's action in restricting greenhousemen to 50 per cent of their normal coal supply being the live topic of the evening. W. R. Kernohan and Otto H. Hedrich, representing the local fuel administration, covered the matter very thoroughly, advising the growers to put in their supplies of coal without delay, as it is likely the opportunity to do so will not be so good later in the season, owing to the heavy demands upon the railroads. It was again suggested that growers obtain the best coal available, this taking up no more space than inferior grades. Further, there is not so much deterioration in the good coal, which is also less subject to spontaneous combustion. There has been no change in the official order as printed in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of May 4 restricting greenhousemen to 50 per cent of the average annual amount consumed between April 1, 1915, and April 1, 1918.

August Poehlmann said it was the clear duty of all florists, large and small alike, to comply with the requirements of the fuel administration and do everything possible to aid the government in winning the war. If the fuel restriction curtails the greenhouse products, the growers, he added, must, of necessity, advance their prices or face the consequences. Mr. Lautenschlager read a telegram from President Totty of the Society of American Florists in which it was stated that the national organization has the matter in hand and will spare no effort in the endeavor to secure some modification of the order, and that arrangements for a meeting of representative men in the trade are in progress to that end.

Chairman Waters, of the good-of-the-club committee, announced that the proposed May party had been abandoned in favor of a picnic to be held in July, and he was requested to present a programme at the next meeting.

Chairman Friedman, of the war gardens committee, detailed the activities of club members in this work, announcing that the committee had secured 250,000 vegetable plants for distribution during the next few weeks.

The advertising committee presented preliminary reports of its activities which were duly endorsed.

W. E. Peterson and E. W. McLellan were admitted to membership, and Emil Danz, 1611 West Lake street, Thomas D. Long, 31 West Randolph street, Harry Blewitt, Desplaines, and John Prickett, Des Plaines, were nominated for membership.

Vaughan's Seed Store made a fine display of the newer cannas, including Firebird, Yellow King Humbert, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Wintzer's Colossal and Eureka.

Peter Pearson exhibited a fine vase of tulips from bulbs produced on his home grounds.

WONDERFUL MOTHERS' DAY SALES.

The business done for Mothers' day was about 75 per cent more than last year, and the biggest part of the increase can be credited to the advertising done by the local florists in the daily papers and the very attractive booklets sent out by each one. White carnations were most in demand, but all other flowers sold well as did any blooming plant or fern. Some very beautiful hydrangeas were on the market, which sold very well. There was an extra heavy supply of roses and American Beauties, which did not move readily, there being entirely too many of them, and on account of the warm weather they had to be disposed of at any price and many were not sold at all. Some delayed shipments reached the city on Sunday and could not be offered for sale until Monday, when their condition injured the price. This market was well supplied with carnations, which gave every one their entire order and more that they asked for. We expected a shortage, but there was plenty for all. Some growers held their stock too long, and when it was offered, it showed the results which caused some complaints. This market will pay the price as long as the stock is good, but will not stand for inferior quality at any time. Some day the growers will wake up and put their goods on the market when ready, and not hold for price and at the last day send in a lot of stock that the buyers will not have. Sweet peas were very plentiful, but on account of the hot weather, they were in a very poor condition when they reached the market. Snapdragons and yellow daisies were very plentiful, but the demand was light. Some iris was also to be had in all colors. There was plenty of stock and business was good, so we are all satisfied.

RETAIL FLORISTS' ASS'N. MEETING.

The first annual meeting and banquet of the retail florists' association was held at the Seventh avenue hotel, May 7. There were about 50 florists present and a very pleasant evening was had. The election of officers took place with the following results: Ira Harper, president; G. P. Weaklen, vice-president; Arvillo Crissman, secretary; John McClements, treasurer; Geo. Wessenauer, Wm. Drews, D. W. Ludwig, and A. E. Gibson, directors. Chairman George Asmus and Secretary John Young, of the Society of American Florists, were present and both gave very interesting talks on the publicity campaign being conducted by the national organization. Plans for the coming year were outlined and great things should be accomplished by the next annual meeting. A very good dinner was served, and the Imperial Trio furnished good songs and music which pleased.

NOTES.

Harry Hann has enlisted in the motor repair division of the quartermaster's department and leaves for Baltimore at an early date.

Fred Butz, of New Castle, Pa., leaves for France in about two weeks to engage in Y. M. C. A. work "over there."

E. C. Ludwig and family have moved to their farm in Butler county.

Geo. McCallum expects to enlist in the marines this week. M.

MOTHERS' DAY BEST IN YEARS.

Mothers' day went ahead of all expectations. The weather was excellent, all cut stock in first class condition, and how well the soldiers in France remembered the folks at home with boxes of flowers. With Mothers' day past every one is looking forward to Memorial day. This is going to be larger than ever. The cool weather the past two weeks is developing the flowers so they will be hard and in the best condition. The scarcity of cut stock and the way it is cleaned up each day indicates there will be no pickled flowers on the market. Carnations were the only flowers that went up in price for Mothers' day and five cents was the limit. Roses were very cheap. Sweet peas, myosotis, pansies, marguerites, Darwin tulips and iris sold readily at a good figure.

NOTES.

Henry M. Robinson & Co's. supply house is doing a very large business and the number of Memorial day orders received so far is way ahead of other years. He is specializing in prepared flowers in all kinds of designs.

There are quite a number of southern peonies in the market, but the quality is poor. There are a large number of shipments of Asparagus plumosus arriving from the south, which will sell readily.

Borowski Brothers are sending to market Pink Pearl rhododendrons well headed and deep in color; also a fine assortment of well grown geraniums and other bedding plants.

Henry Comley reports very good business, and is pleased to see the way Mothers' day trade increased over other years. He is making big preparations for Memorial day.

At Penn's store, Mothers' day was the biggest on record, and as he is a member of the F. T. D., he received his share of telegraph orders from all over the country.

Wm. McAlpine has spent the entire week at his farm in Exeter, N. H., rearranging his greenhouses so he will be able to comply with the rules of the fuel commission.

A. M. Davenport has some of the finest bedding plants arriving in this city and he reports that this year he will go ahead of any year in his business career.

Mr. Stewart, gardener for the Warren estate at Waltham, is exhibiting some fine Calceolaria Stenardii. They are grown in bulb pans with from 20 to 30 heads.

Houghton-Gorney Co. did a large business last week and they report business is going to be larger than ever for Memorial day.

B. A. Snyder & Co. had a large Mothers' day trade and also are well pleased the way Memorial day orders are arriving. S. K. G.

MOTHERS' DAY COMPARED WITH EASTER.

"Almost like Easter," was the comment of a leading florist on Mothers' day trade. There was an early clean up of carnations, followed by exhaustion of stock in other flowers. Roses and sweet peas were heavy sellers. There was a good supply of nearly everything to start with, and the volume of business was larger by far than on any similar occasion. This is attributed in great measure to some very attractive newspaper spreads of a co-operative nature, in which most of the largest firms took part. Carnations brought $2 a dozen, double the present selling price, roses sold from $2 to $8 a dozen, and sweet peas 75 cents to $1. All flowers brought advanced prices, a policy about which this market has heretofore been conservative. Present stocks of seasonable blooms are satisfactory in quality and volume. There is a great scarcity in fern. A few peonies are beginning to appear, and other outdoor flowers are almost ready for market. The outlook for Memorial day, which was discouraging a few weeks ago, is now bright.

NOTES.

F. M. Brownwell, one of the active young members of the local florist fraternity, has taken a position with Jacob Schulz, Louisville, Ky. For a number of years he was manager of the Livingston Seed Company cut flower department, but lately has been in charge of the retail store of the Fifth Avenue Floral Company. He was induced to leave this city by a flattering increase in salary. E. M. Hedges, who had been with Mr. Brownwell at the Fifth Avenue company store, will take his place as manager there.

A floral event of the past week has been the annual exhibition of tulips by the Livingston Seed Company store. The display consisted of 55 late varieties, which were planted last fall for the purpose of demonstration, as a guide to retail customers. It was a very beautiful exhibition and aroused much interest among lovers of the tulip. W. H. Wetherby, buyer of the bulbs, added greatly to the educational value of the event, by giving visitors the benefit of his wide knowledge of this flower.

Prof. Alfred Vivian, in a recent address before the Columbus Horticultural Society, used lantern slides to illustrate the application of landscape gardening to premises seeming unsuitable for treatment. The society hopes to secure the museum building at the university for its annual rose show which takes place in June. Last year there were 800 entries.

On the third Liberty Loan $94,600 was realized from the local florist trade. The committee which worked up interest consisted of T. J. Ludwig, chairman; E. R. Munk and H. E. Maxwell. J.

Cincinnati.

BUSINESS VERY SATISFACTORY.

Mothers' day business was good. The supply proved to be fully equal to the demand but inclement, rainy weather on Saturday and Sunday, however, had a quieting effect on the late business. Since that day, heavy cuts of flowers have been coming into the market and have kept it well supplied. Roses are in a good supply and the same is true of carnations. Sweet peas are fairly plentiful, but there are only a limited number of choice long blooms. Some excellent snapdragons are coming into the wholesale houses. Peonies are plentiful. The home grown ones are due to be cut at the end of this week. Easter lilies and callas may be had. Parrott tulips, outdoor lily of the valley, double poeticus, and iris are all rather plentiful. Orchids, marguerites, and pansies are offered.

NOTES.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held May 11, at the club rooms in the Jabez Elliott flower market.

Miss Elsie Bolson, of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, is back at her desk after a week spent on a visit to Chillicothe, Ohio.

P. J. Olinger had an elegant cut of flowers for Mothers' day and cleaned up on them very nicely.

C. E. Critchell has been having some excellent early peonies.

Visitors: Mrs. J. J. Lampert, Xenia, O.; G. A. Beckman and wife, Middletown, O.; Martin Weber and wife, Brookville, Ind., and I. M. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa. H.

MEMORIAL DAY business prospects are very encouraging.

American Rose Society.

The officers and executive committee of the American Rose Society met in executive session May 9, at the rooms of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Finance building, Philadelphia. Those present were Benjamin Hammond, president; H. O. May, treasurer; Prof. E. A. White, secretary; J. H. McFarland, Robert Pyle and S. S. Pennock. Matters pertaining to exhibitions and other items of interest were taken up. The opening and inspection of the Arlington rose trial gardens at Washington is set for June 3. A vase containing beautiful sprays of the Chinese yellow rose, Hugonis, was exhibited by Robert Pyle.

THE opening of the Washington rose garden has been set for June 3, but there is a possibility of its being held the last week of May on account of the advanced condition of the plants.

Mothers' Day in Easter Class.

The Mothers' day demand of 1918 increased in volume over other years beyond all expectations from the majority of reports received, a 25 per cent gain over last year being probably a fair average, while in some instances this lead over former years was trebled. In many cities Florists' Telegraph Delivery orders played an important part; this factor, added to the general liberal buying, gave the business for the occasion a genuine Easter or Christmas tone. Carnations, which have formerly held undisputed place, this year gave way under high prices, and the buying public made the day a flower and plant day rather than a "carnation" day, with the result that sales were brisk, prices were satisfactory to all concerned, and generous supplies of stock in practically all lines cleaned up early, many of the shops being sold out by Sunday noon. In a few instances, where the carnation supply was scant, good stock commanded as high as $3 per dozen at retail, while from some of the large eastern markets comes the information, that for the first time in the history of the day, carnations were offered for sale from street corners and push carts, while wholesale houses, with surpluses unremoved, in some cases opened their places of business on Sunday and finally accepted buyers' prices as low as $1 per 100. A cause for the dull demand may exist in the poor quality which manifested itself in many of the carnations offered. Be that as it may, their indisposition seemed to pass unnoticed, and roses, sweet peas and a varied range of cut stock of excellent quality, augmented by an ample supply of flowering plants, gave a splendid account of themselves.

Curtailment Cautioned Against.

Washington, D. C.—Before ordering serious curtailment of any industry, an investigation should be instituted so thorough and far-reaching that in many cases it is impracticable during a period of war rush, according to an informal statement recently by an important government official. It is not a question of whether the products are vitally essential in the war program, he said, but whether the entire business structure can stand elimination of the smaller manufacturers without undermining financial security of the country. Arbitrary restrictions and resultant loss of many carefully built up business establishments, it is believed, eventually will be reflected in the loan campaigns and the other calls of the government for funds to carry on the war.

The smaller manufacturers in reality need protection at present, and it has been the experience in government departments that many of them are more reliable than the big corporations. Contracts can be placed with them to advantage, but as they are not competing in the market with the large concerns it is necessary to seek them out through local agents.

While plants whose operations have been curtailed are usually expected to turn to production of war materials, there is an increasing complaint from manufacturers that such work can not be obtained, and a shut-down becomes necessary. There is a growing sentiment that there must be no industrial suspension even in less essential lines, the effects of the heatless days of last winter, which represent the greatest suspension of the kind, being still apparent throughout the country. For this reason the government is moving with increased caution before ordering the curtailment of the output in any industry.—Boston News Bureau.

Van Lindley Gives Park to Greensboro.

John Van Lindley, one of the most public spirited citizens of Greensboro, N. C., as evidence of the love for the community in which the greater part of his long and useful life has been spent, has presented that city with a beautiful 40-acre tract of wooded land, easily accessible by street car line and paved road, and which has been accepted by the city commissioners to be utilized as a park and playground. The donor has long been identified with horticulture and is widely known and highly respected. He is the head of the J. Van Lindley Co., nurserymen, his father being a noted fruit grower, and practically his entire early life was spent in the pursuit of tree growing, the present business being established nearly 40 years ago, and which has during that time developed into one of the most extensive establishments in the nursery and cut flower business in the state. He was one of the prime movers in organizing the state fair association and was its first president. He has also always been a leader in educational movements and for more than 30 years was a trustee of Guilford College and one of the largest contributors toward its permanent endowment. He is prominently connected with many of Greensboro's business enterprises and is president of the state horticultural society. His gift to the city of this splendid park is in keeping with the generous spirit which has been characteristic of his whole life.

Whitted Floral Co. Bankrupt.

The business of Hattie B. Whitted, Minneapolis, Minn., which for about a year has been conducted by trustees appointed by the circuit court, following an extension of time granted by creditors, has been declared in bankruptcy, and creditors of said estate are ordered to show cause before Alexander McCune, referee in bankruptcy, at his office in the federal building, that city, at 10 a. m., May 23, and show cause why the business should not be disposed of at public or private sale. The assets are said to be about $25,767; liabilities, $23,267.

Coal Conference at Washington.

William F. Guide, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, is arranging for a conference in that city, May 27, between representatives of the society and the United States fuel administrator at which matters affecting the trade as a result of the recent fuel order will be presented. Secretary Young advises that the conference will be open to anyone interested.

WAR CONDITIONS Of Supply and Demand

While there is no doubt the demand for spring bedding and other decorative plants and bulbs will be materially curtailed by the war garden movement, we believe this condition will be fully counterbalanced by the prosperity in the south and the effects of the coal shortage on the greenhousemen of the west, north and east, placing in the market for stock a large number of new buyers not familiar with the sources of supply.

Most of these buyers can be reached at small cost by advertising in The American Florist, and we feel that it will be greatly to your advantage to start this campaign with an advertisement in our columns.

MOTHERS' DAY TRADE MAKES A RECORD.

Mothers' day business was, without a doubt, the greatest in the history of that holiday. All of the florists had doubled their store forces, yet at times they could hardly handle the rush of business that came their way. Saturday was the day on which the greatest volume of business was handled. One notable feature of the Mothers' day business was that there was a much greater call for bright colored flowers this year than for other years and, except for wearing purposes, roses met with a greater demand than carnations. In the plant line, there were handsome hydrangeas, fuchsias, pelargoniums, begonias, Easter lilies, geraniums, primroses, pansies and yellow Sanders daisies, and most of these were completely sold out. Many baskets and hamper combinations were made up of geraniums and ferns and the smaller plants.

NOTES.

"The biggest Mothers' day trade in our history" is the report of the Flick Floral Co. This firm was well supplied with roses, but could have sold many more carnations. Their miscellaneous stock sold especially well, and a fine lot of blooming plants supplemented the cut stock.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey had an immense wholesale demand for carnations, roses and orchids, and had to turn down many orders for cut flowers. They are having a big call for their advertised vegetable plants, and the bedding plant sale is in full swing here.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. made a specialty of blooming plant combinations and had a fine sale of these. They reported the demand for roses heavier than for carnations, and that the out-of-town trade was greater than ever this year.

The Doswell Floral Co. reports a decided increase in the demand for Mothers' day flowers this year, with bright-colored roses and carnations in the lead. They had an excellent demand for pot plants.

The Freese Floral Co. had a good business in varied lines for Mothers' day. They received large lots from their greenhouses and were busy until 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The New Haven Floral Co. cut a heavy crop of roses, snapdragons and carnations, with which they supplied their store in this city and also retailed at New Haven, Ind.

The F. J. Knecht Co. had a fine crop of both roses and carnations for Mothers' day, and had a record sale.

H. K.

State Florists' Association of Indiana.

The coal situation was the principal feature of an interesting meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana held at Indianapolis May 7, a good attendance being represented in the discussion. In reviewing the recent order of the fuel administration curtailing the fuel consumption one-half, it appeared to be the opinion of many present that this ruling meant more than the limiting of production to the extent of 50 per cent, as it would have to be taken into consideration that a certain amount of fuel must be used to maintain enough heat to preserve the unused portions of the various establishments and that in order to maintain even one-half production a 75 per cent coal allowance would not seem unreasonable. A committee of three was appointed, with full power to act for the organization, and districts where local organizations exist will send their representatives to Washington to confer with their representatives in congress. The committee was also instructed to get in touch with florist societies throughout the middle west, with a view to co-operation. The point was also brought out that, in spite of the spirit of loyalty which the florists have at all times manifested to help the government and all war measures, the curtailing of earning power would of absolute necessity prevent the trade from responding to future calls in the same generous measure that has been nationally characteristic in the past.

MOTHERS' DAY BEST IN HISTORY.

Never before was there such a tremendous demand and such a complete clean up in both cut flowers and blooming pot plants as for Mothers' day this year. Outside of the publicity locally given by the Florists' Advertising Association and through the various magazines the great work of the Society of American Florists, the daily press ever since the middle of last week called the attention of the readers to May 12, as Mothers' day. All this, plus the writeup in the Sunday papers, no doubt helped to make this one, if not the best flower days of this season. As predicted, carnations were far short of requirements. Shipping orders were numerous and took so much of the supply that the local dealers who held out in hopes of securing a bargain at the eleventh hour, were sadly disappointed. With prices for these at $8 per hundred, a good many pushed other cut flowers and plants, which did not advance in price in proportion to that of the carnations. Roses, snapdragons, sweet peas, tulips and other spring stock was plentiful, the first named especially so, but the great demand made short work of anything in the form of a flower. It was indeed a banner day much to the comfort of the growers, who up to now have been kept guessing to know "what's what," while, if they take time to think of what the future has in store for them, they are having, and will have by far a harder task than the dealer. But it is only three weeks hence, when for Memorial Day we are sure to get our share, if we have the stock, especially, if the quality is there. With hard work, good will and hope, we are bound to hold our own at least.

NOTES.

Edlefsen & Leidiger featured, among a great variety of pot plants, forget-me-nots in suitable baskets and pans, and report a great demand for these. The name no doubt helped a good thing along.

At Wm. C. Zimmerman's, on Grand avenue, they had an avalanche of orders, mostly for cut flowers, but the least popular, due to the high prices, was the carnation for Mothers' day.

Ella V. Kitzerow, on Lisbon avenue, reported no advance orders for Mothers' day, but all day Sunday transient trade was far ahead of expectations and aided satisfactorily.

Fred Ernst had no orders to speak of the Friday previous to Mothers' day, but when they did come, they came fast. It was work all Saturday night for him.

J. M. Fox & Son were long on cut flowers, especially snapdragons in various shades. Their stock in all was large but a "clean up" was the report.

LARGE MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

Taking everything into consideration the demand for Mothers' day was large and while practically all of the dealers report that it was better than that of 1917 a few say their sales were behind. The shipping trade was particularly heavy and the local demand was surprisingly good. The warm weather the early part of last week affected stock considerably, consequently good shipping flowers were scarce and a large quantity of inferior goods were offered. Practically all the growers were or will be disappointed when they receive their returns, principally those who specialize in carnations, for there was very little good stock offered in this line. Prices on stock in general were not up to expectations and the out-of-town buyer who received his flowers in good condition can consider himself fortunate. Roses had the call everywhere, and while carnations in the better grades sold well and were somewhat scarce, the retailer was in no hurry to buy them owing to the fact that roses and other miscellaneous stock was in large supply. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses were in brisk demand and so were all the other varieties which cleaned up completely before the rush was over with the exception of the poor stock that arrived earlier in the week. Peonies sold well and so did snapdragons which were in large supply. Tulips, jonquils, daffodils, pansies, freesia, calendulas, daisies, iris, lupines, sweet peas, stocks, orchids, gardenias, lilac, gladioli, Paper White narcissus and other miscellaneous stock had a brisk call. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather that the growers experienced the Mothers' day trade was large and exceeded all expectations. The wholesale houses were completely sold out at noon on Mothers' day with the exception of the unsalable stock received during the warm spell and the late shipments that arrived on that day. Taking everything into consideration no one is complaining and all are now devoting their attention to the Memorial day trade which promises to be heavier than ever this year owing to the fact that many of our boys are already "over there" and others are leaving right along for training. Graves will be decorated this year on Memorial day that were neglected before, especially all our sol-

NOTES.

The Central Floral Co. reports a record breaking Mothers' day trade with the total sales showing an increase of $300 over those of Easter. Peter Duris, of this firm, says that the special $2, $3 and $5 boxes consisting of a dozen roses, a few snapdragons and a bunch of sweet peas took exceedingly well and pleased the general public. The Mothers' day window featured at this store all last week was one of the finest displays ever seen in this city and not only was a credit to the manager but to a large extent was responsible for the splendid business enjoyed. One could not help but sending a box of flowers home after witnessing this display.

Members of the City Club were told by Samuel Insull, May 8, that in his judgment the coal situation in Illinois will be worse during the coming winter than it was recently, as the vast amount of tonnage of supplies and munitions that must be moved as the result of the government's enormous operations will cause a greater car shortage than ever before. He stated it was the patriotic duty of every industrial plant and every individual, who is able to do so, to store up a big supply of coal for next winter.

Allie Zech reports that Zech & Mann's total sales for Mothers' day were the best ever and show a wonderful increase over those of 1917. He was quite busy last week but took enough time off on May 10 to go down to the depot and see Jack Byers, one of Zech & Mann's former employees who is now with the colors, leave for the east after being with the regulars for several months at Houston, Texas. Koropp, son of L. Koropp, manager of the Ohio Floral Co., was on the same train.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are well pleased with their Mothers' day trade which exceeded all expectations and caused a complete cleanup in all lines. Not a single complaint was received from out-of-town which is making Billy Johnson, manager of the shipping department, feel exceedingly happy.

Ed Hunt, with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, has enlisted in the United States naval reserves. He was one of the most popular young men in the wholesale district and his many friends unite in wishing him every success in his new undertaking.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner will be strong on peonies for Memorial day not to mention other seasonable stock and made-up wreaths which their supply department is featuring as a leader.

Julius Kline, who was in the employ of Wieter Bros. several years ago, has accepted a position with Peter Reinberg.

W. F. Schneider, of Elmhurst, who grows quite a supply of outdoor stock, expects to cut peonies for Memorial day.

For Your Supply of CUT FLOWERS

Remember when ordering that our line is so complete that it includes every item offered in the Great Chicago Market.

W. J. Wietor, of Wietor Bros., will have charge of the wholesale florists' and growers' campaign for the Red Cross fund which opens soon and will be conducted under the supervision of division 19, which so successfully handled the recent Liberty bond drive. The other branches of the trade will most likely be represented by the same people who handled the Liberty bond campaign. This is a worthy cause and every man, woman and child in the florist business should respond as liberally as their purses will permit.

George Wienhoeber sold out completely in everything for Mothers' day including all the foliage plants he had on hand for display purposes. His sales were away ahead of last year, which shows that the florist business is an essential industry and absolutely necessary to cheer up the people in these troublesome times. Mr. Wienhoeber used street car advertising extensively for Mothers' day which brought splendid results.

The Bohannon Floral Co. filled an order for 15,000 roses and carnations for Mothers' day which were delivered to the Great Lakes naval training station. The order was the outcome of a donation of 1500 carnations at a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce when Billy Sunday was the guest of honor. Mr. Bohannon says that outside of this order his total sales for Mothers' day were double those of last year.

Schiller had a wonderful business at both the west and north side stores for Mothers' day, which cleaned up all the available stock on hand including a large number of plants. George Asmus, manager of the west side store, said that they had all the orders they could possibly handle and Herman Schiller in charge at the north side store cleaned out completely early Sunday morning.

P. W. Peterson and William Kelsner, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Chas. Sterling, of the Sterling Floral Co., Fred Smith, of Smith Bros., and Peter Herbach, of Labo the Florist, all of Joliet, attended the florists' club meeting last week to hear the discussion of the coal question which was a most interesting one and well worth the long trip.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department is featuring a magnificent line of Memorial day wreaths in quantity this year which promise to be in exceptionally heavy demand. The Mothers' day trade was exceedingly brisk at this establishment and no trouble was experienced in disposing of all the cut flowers it had to offer.

Percy Jones, Inc., had its share of the Mothers' day trade and is making a strong bid on the Memorial day business. Manager Van Gelder is optimistic in regard to the outlook for this occasion owing to the patriotic feeling that exists throughout the country.

One of the local wholesale houses received a shipment of 17,000 carnations last week from California which arrived in such poor condition that they were sold to a local department store to cover express charges amounting to about $102 including war tax.

Kennicott Bros. Co. will be strong on peonies for Memorial day again this year for all reports from their growers denote that the crops will be large and just right for this occasion. J. E. Pollworth of this house has been serving on the jury for two weeks.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. were well pleased with their Mothers' day trade which caused a grand clean up in all lines of stock. Harry Gardiner, who is in class 1 of the draft, was rejected on account of his weight when he tried to enlist in the navy this week.

The A. L. Randall Co. disposed of a large quantity of peonies for Mothers' day which sold like hot cakes and cleaned up almost as quickly as they were unpacked. Their supply of peonies for Memorial day will be a record breaker this year.

The E. C. Amling Co. will be on deck again this year with a large supply of peonies for Memorial day as well as all other seasonable stock. This house has been featuring a particularly fancy grade of Mrs. C. W. Ward carnations all this season.

H. E. Philpott received word this week from California that Mrs. Philpott, who has been there for several months for the benefit of her health, is in a very serious condition and that great fears are entertained for her recovery.

J. A. Budlong is offering a fine line of stock especially roses, which are in brisk demand this week. Lupines, anemones and other miscellaneous stock is on the bill of fare at this house.

H. N. Bruns, 3032 West Madison street, speaks in glowing terms of his Mothers' day business which was away beyond expectations and called for an exceptionally large supply of cut flowers.

Arthur Gourley, prominent lumber merchant and member of the original Foley Mfg. Co., died last week, age 75 years. He was born in Ireland and located in this city early in life.

Gus Collins, who has charge of the floral department at Kresge's 25 and 50 cent store, has opened a retail establishment at 76 West Washington street.

The White House Florist never experienced such a brisk business for Mothers' day as this year when a clean up in all lines was experienced.

Fred Dietsch, of A. Dietsch Co., is devoting his spare moments to his war garden while Mrs. Dietsch is actively engaged in Red Cross work.

Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., had the misfortune of spraining an ankle this week.

The Alpha Floral Co. did a tremendous Mothers' day business and sold out in everything early. Andrew Chronis says that the mail and telegraph demand was greater than that of any other holiday.

Bassett & Washburn lost considerable glass in their old range during the heavy storm last week. Mr. Washburn in speaking of the Mothers' day trade says that his house had all the business it could possibly handle and that the total sales for this occasion were surprisingly large.

Erne & Company enjoyed a splendid Mothers' day trade and cleaned up early in all lines. This house is looking forward to a brisk Memorial day demand will be strong on peonies again this year.

Peter Reinberg, president of the county board, made public, May 15, a letter from the treasury department in Washington, refusing permission to the county to issue $1,000,000 worth of road bonds in 1918. "It means we will have no new roads," he said. "The state, too, has refused us aid. We'll just be able to improve small stretches of road, with the $94,000 we have raised. Nothing can be done now with the proposed $400,000 improvement on the Milwaukee road."

A. Lange had all the Mothers' day orders that he could possibly take care of and the total sales for this occasion were away ahead of those of 1917 and greater than he had any reason to hope for notwithstanding that he made a strong bid for the business by advertising in the daily papers. He was obliged to spend almost all of his time in the wholesale market to obtain enough stock to fill the orders as they were booked.

Mangel had the Palmer order for the casket cover consisting of 500 orchids, which was a beautiful piece, and also several other large designs as well as the decoration which he turned over to the George Wittbold Co. While there were a large number of designs seen at the funeral the demand was nowhere near as large as the trade expected.

Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, was well pleased with the Mothers' day business and remarks that an unusually large supply of stock was disposed of in this market on this occasion. Trade on Sunday morning, May 12, was so brisk that everything was disposed of especially sweet peas which were in great demand.

The Grossberg-Tyler-Finnerman Co. has no complaint to make in regard to its first Mothers' day trade which was surprisingly good. This house is handling a fine line of stock.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports gladiolus and other spring bulbs going well and good demand for perennial and vegetable plants.

mands. Each year the untiring work of the publicity committees of the Society of American Florists and the efforts of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery are bringing increasing results and this year the Mothers' day business was better than ever before—better than St. Valentine's day—and it is believed that before long it will equal Easter. Flowering plants sold well, but the favorite was of course the carnation, and at the price asked, $3 per dozen for good stock, there were ready sales, smaller flowers being offered for $2. Ward, Matchless and Supreme were the perfect varieties and there was no complaint as to prices. Roses did not have a heavy call, although the supply was large. A smaller crop next year will serve better. Sweet peas moved readily at prices varying from 50 cents to $1.50 per bunch. Few complaints were made as to inflated prices in general. There seemed to be a realization that with increased cost of production, labor, and other items of expense, higher prices were a necessity. The demand started rather late on Saturday, and several storekeepers, fearful of a dull day cut the price but by Saturday night were out looking for more stock.

May 1 found little change in the locations of the retail shops. All seem to remain at the old addresses with no increase in rents.

CARNATIONS FLOOD MARKET.

The past Mothers' day will long be remembered by the trade in this city, first on account of the great supply of carnations, which owing to weather conditions, was about five times larger than was looked for. Then the request sent out by Miss Jarvis, that patriotism and mother love would be combined this year, in the purchase of Thrift Stamps, instead of flowers, so that at all official celebrations, as churches, Sunday schools, lodges, etc., there were comparatively few flowers used. The day will also not soon be forgotten by the gentlemen who brought over about 100,000 carnations from New York, and threw them on an already overloaded market. This is the year that such speculation failed. They made no money for themselves, and broke the local market as well. Early prices on white carnations were quoted 8 to 10 cents, with the pick of the best Matchless even higher. On Saturday p. m., very fair white sold as low as $10 per thousand, with the new fresh stock just in $20 to $25 per thousand or any part of this quantity. The street men must have found prices satisfactory, as they lined market street from Tenth to Broad with great stocks at every vantage point. There has hardly at any season been more carnations offered than was to be seen on last Saturday afternoon and evening at these sidewalk stands. Reds and pinks found no market at all, one of the wholesalers saying, "We couldn't give them away." Fortunately the large wholesale houses found a good out-of-town demand, earlier in the week for southern points for Confederate Memorial day, May 10, which took quite a lot of the early surplus. The Friday shipments were large, in fact, greater than last year. There appears to be fully as much demand as in 1917, but the great quantity of flowers on the market and the warm weather made the business very unsatisfactory.

WITH THE WHOLESALE.

John Westcott has had troubles galore the past winter, but of which, however, he has had very little to say. On February 2, a building adjacent to his boiler house, belonging to another business, caught fire, which spreading, burned out the interior of this shed, which was a rather large building. The city fire department put out the fire and also filled the boiler cellar with water, which again put out the fires. Before this could be bailed out and the fires started, several houses went below freezing, killing a lot of rubbers and arecas. As if this was not enough, about six weeks later, a violent wind storm blew down a large sash house, 30x150 feet, which it is hardly likely will be erected again. The remaining houses are all full of bedding stock, which is used mostly in the cemetery trade which is a specialty here. Propagating coleus and alenantheras in flats of sand and on a manure bottom heat in frames outside, was interesting and very successful. The young stock, when potted, makes a rapid growth plunged in a

The Leo Niessen Co. reports about 20 per cent increase over last year, but there were so many flowers of all kinds in the market, that this did not help as it ordinarily would. They sent out very nearly 200 boxes by parcels post on Friday—all flowers for Mothers' day. Considering the handicaps of the enormous quantity of flowers to be moved, the hot weather, and the Thrift Stamps substitution of Miss Jarvis, Mr. Niessen feels quite satisfied.

"It was hard work getting rid of the great amount of stock thrown on the market, but we fared as well as any of them," reported Eugene Bernheimer. A number of store keepers thought the buying of Thrift Stamps, as advised by Miss Jarvis, hurt their trade.

The recent order of the fuel administration is becoming every day more realistic, and being brought home to other men in the trade besides growers. C. U. Liggit, who handles quantities of young plants of roses, carnations, and other florists' stock, as well as seeds, bulbs, etc., has had nearly $1,000 worth of orders canceled since this edict went into effect. Mr. Liggit is out this business, and the grower of the stock loses the revenue, which would be of such help at this time.

Manager Miller, of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange, managed to struggle out, but said he had to put on full power to do so. The principal demand was for white carnations and white roses, colored flowers being at a discount.

Edward Reid found too many flowers and a lighter local demand. There was a good shipping trade, but the over supply, in addition to the speculators' stock from other markets, made prices far below normal.

The Jos. Heacock Co. was well satisfied with the demand, selling out their entire stock of roses at satisfactory prices.

Des Moines, Ia.

NOTES.

A check for $408.61, which represents the proceeds of the flower show held in this city, November 8-11, 1917, under the auspices of the Iowa Society of Florists, has been turned over to the local chapter of the American Red Cross. Included in the amount was also the sum of $112 which was paid to the Advertising Club of Des Moines for publicity, and which that body in turn directed be tendered to the Red Cross. Those who had the exhibition in charge have just cause to be proud of the splendid showing made in their initial effort and the good work accomplished in a most worthy cause.

At the store of the J. S. Wilson Floral Co. the Mothers' day demand was exceptionally good, the sales showing an increase of 50 per cent over last year. White and red carnations had the call, and when the supply of the latter was exhausted, pink came in for ready movement, and then roses.

INCREASED SUPPLY AND SLOW MARKET.

It will be remembered, by those who have read Dickens, that one of his famous characters, Mark Tapley, gave up a good job because it was too "jolly." "Skittles, cricket, quoits, nine-pins, comic songs, choruses, company around the chimney corner every winter's evening—any man could be jolly at the Dragon. There's no credit in that," said Mark, so he was looking around for a gloomy business in which it would be some credit to be jolly. In justice to the memory of Mr. Tapley, it may be stated that he did find something particularly gloomy, but his jolly disposition, under the most trying conditions, carried him through with flying colors. Just now, we need Mark Tapley in the florist business, for under present and prospective conditions there will be some credit in being cheerful. Now is the time to be an optimist and hope for the best. On the other hand, it would be folly to indulge in false hopes or great expectations. It may well be hoped that the outlook is not as dark as the foregoing indicates, but there is little justification for the hope. All that can be done is to try and make the best possible arrangements. Business was slow in the wholesale district during the past week. The weather was fair and much warmer, which brought in an increased supply of stock, much of it, in roses and carnations, in poor condition. Special American Beauties went as low as $10 to $20 per 100 and were hard to move at that. There is always some movement in fresh tea roses, but the surplus was sacrificed or lost. About the same may be said of carnations, excepting that the surplus and loss was greater. On account of prospective Mothers' day business, there was some movement in white carnations May 10-11, but $5 per 100 was about the highest price realized and the best did not stay long at that. By the afternoon of May 11, fairly good whites were selling for $2 and $3 per 100 and the ice boxes were full of pinks that could not be sold. Orchids are practically in a glut, good Cattleya Mossias going as low as 20 cents per flower and small stock for 10 cents. The cold frame lily of the valley that is on the market is better for funeral work than the short greenhouse stock. The best of the latter stock brings $5 and $6 per 100, but the short and inferior grades are practically unsalable. The lily surplus left over from Easter is pretty well cut out and less stock is arriving. The best wholesales at $5 and $6 per 100 flowers. Good sweet peas are scarce, but there is a surplus of short stock, much of it being almost worthless. An immense quantity of both purple and white lilac continues to arrive. Much of it, and also quantities of short roses and stale carnations are being peddled from push carts and on the street corners. Arrivals of southern peonies are increasing.

May 13.—As the majority of the retail stores were well sold out yesterday, there is considerable buying this morning, but everything is going cheap. The supply of southern peonies is increasing, but much of the stock is unsatisfactory, as the petals shake off. The wholesalers made an exception on Mothers' day and kept open, trying to clean up on carnations, but were only partly successful, many going at $1 and $2 per 100. One wholesaler long in the business said it was the first Mothers' day that he had ever seen carnations sold from push-carts. Reports from Brooklyn, Jersey City and Newark, N. J., indicate that the retailers did all they expected to do. It was the surplus that put the wholesale district "in bad."

COAL WARNING ISSUED.

The trade is confronted by a serious situation and it must be met with courage and possible sacrifice. It will be recalled that about this time last year, the growers were deceived by reports—probably well meant, but mistaken—that coal would be cheaper and more plentiful in August. We all know the result. The fuel administration is now pursuing a directly opposite course. In addition to the 50 per cent cut in the supply to growers, urgent warnings of a shortage are being sounded. L. A. Snead, assistant to Fuel Administrator Garfield, came to this city May 9 to find out what is being done to handle the coal supply for the coming winter. He issued a general warning to the public that there positively will be a coal shortage by fall. He estimated that the rapid increase of war industry operations has reduced the public's supply 25 per cent, and that this will be increased to 30 or 35 per cent in a few months.

"There is no way we can get around a shortage," Mr. Snead said. "The mines are working only four days a week because they cannot get cars. The railroads are so busy with war shipments that they cannot release many more cars. We are doing our best. New cars are being built. Others are being shifted to the mines from the west and our recent coal shipments have shown an encouraging improvement. The public must be warned to take cognizance of this situation. Where the mines are working four days a week the war plants are working seven days a week with extra shifts. The coal output will have to go to them in larger quantities. The duty of the public is to order its coal for the winter right away. The 50 cent reduction until September ought to be an inducement. Those who delay will probably regret it. We do not guarantee the prompt delivery of coal ordered now. This is impossible, but orders will be filled in order, and the summer can be spent stocking up. "We will take care that coal prices are not exorbitant when the shortage comes, but it is up to everybody to take the hint and order now."

NOTES.

The following editorial comment on the observance of Mothers' day is from the Evening Telegram: "We regret the determination, as a war economy measure, to abandon the wearing of the white carnation as a tribute. There is a disposition to run the economy business into the ground in small things." The above is to the point. There seem to be busybodies who are running economy into the ground in small things, because they lack the spiritual vision to see large things. We do not know who was responsible for the press notices that appeared saying that the wearing of a white carnation would this year be abandoned, but it must have been a narrow mind.

Quite a number of retailers have been heard from relating to their Mothers' day business. They agree that business was as good as last year; with some it was better. A feature of this year's business was that many buyers did not insist on white carnations, but took other colors. There was also considerable business in bunches of mixed flowers, and on Saturday numerous sales of plants. One advantage of the retailers was that they bought stock much cheaper this year than last.

On May 8 the Colonial Florist (Costos Sakelos), Broadway and 157th street, bought 17,000 roses and a quantity of other stock, which he put up in neat boxes and distributed among the hospitals of the city. For this generous act he has received many kind letters of thanks. For Mothers' day he sold 20,000 carnations, all colors included, and much other stock. He has five stores.

M. C. Gallagher, who is now in the United States navy, called on his former employers, David Clarke's Sons, May 11. Each of the Clarke brothers has a son in the army, and Harry Howell, another former employe, is in the merchant marine.

At the store of Malandre Brothers, Broadway and 72d street, it was said that their business had been good, though their sales of carnations were not particularly heavy.

The Drakos Co., Broadway, opposite Columbia University, stated that they had excellent business and sold many carnations.

The Bartels Brothers, 417 Tremont avenue, Bronx borough, stated that they had excellent business.

A. F. F.

Kansas City.

MOTHERS' DAY BUSINESS GRATIFYING.

The Mothers' day demand was beyond all expectations, resulting in a complete sellout of plants by Saturday, and by Sunday noon the cut stock supply was reduced to a point where scarcely a single carnation was visible. Roses went especially well. The former demand for flowers of only one or two varieties for this occasion is evidently a thing of the past, and there was a noticeable call for dozen lots, with preference for high quality. Corsage bouquets played quite a part and many sweet peas were used for this purpose. Lily of the valley also went fairly well. On the average, business was reported about 50 per cent better than in former years.

NOTES.

H. Kusik & Co. report many sales in 100 and 1,000 lots, where such quantities were never called for before. This firm carried the largest stock of carnations and roses in its history for Mothers' day. Sweet peas, lilies and peonies were also plentiful.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports an unusually brisk sale for Mothers' day for everything in the line of cut flowers and plants. They made a special feature of their cemetery wreath, and on this they had a surprising run.

Anything that looked like a rose or carnation was in big demand at the W. J. Barnes establishment. Pot plants were sold out by Saturday noon and deliveries could not be promised later than that evening.

A. Newell had an unusual rush, and deliveries ran into late hours Sunday afternoon. Corsages and funeral work were also factors.

Charles Thomas, of the Rosery, is more than pleased with his Mothers' day sales. He says it was "some business."

Bob McGrail reports a complete sell-out. Could have disposed of more had the stock been available.

CHICAGO NEW YORK

T. J. Noll & Co. had a heavy week of shipping trade. They had a large stock, but ran short early.

A. F. Barbe had a wonderful business in plants and was rushed with orders for bouquets.

Beiderman & Son report a heavy run on funeral work. They had a complete cleanup on cut stock, and could have sold more.

E. J. B.

Louisville, Ky.

At the last meeting of the florists' society, Lewis Plares gave an interesting talk on growing lettuce, bringing out the fact that this crop is profitable to the plant grower, as it can be grown in the winter and followed by bedding stock for spring sales.

Herman Kleinstarink has taken a position with a steel company at Youngstown, O., and has tendered his resignation as treasurer of the Kentucky Society of Florists. His father, H. Kleinstarink, has been appointed to fill the unexpired term.

The Jacob Schulz Co. has installed a new front at its store which gives increased space for window display. A fine arrangement of orchids recently attracted a great deal of attention to this establishment.

C. C. Clark, formerly with F. H. Lemon & Co., Richmond, Ind., is now with the F. Walker Co. in the capacity of foreman at the greenhouses at New Albany.

The New Nanz & Neuner Co. was recently fined $49 and costs following a hearing on an alleged violation of the woman's labor law.

Robert Pallion, for 18 years with the F. Walker Co., has opened a store on West Chestnut street near 18th street.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, has sold his entire stock of shrubbery to the Jacob Schulz Co.

There appears to be a shortage of geraniums and other plants in this vicinity.
H. G. W.

Detroit.

MOTHERS' DAY GENERALLY SATISFACTORY.

This city enjoyed the most successful Mothers' day business in its history, and this, too, in spite of the fact that the weather was anything but conducive to extensive shopping. Saturday was cloudy, cool and windy, and much apprehension was felt on this account early in the day, but as the hours passed, the trade continued to increase. Sunday was a disappointment, because it rained incessantly, and many think the business on this day would have been perhaps four times greater had favorable weather aided us. Some advertising was done throughout the week in the daily papers, and the posters and stickers were used most generally by all the florists, so that when the day arrived, it is fair to presume that nearly every one had in mind the duty of doing honor to mother by the gift and purchase of flowers of some kind. Carnations were in limited supply, and all of course sold out completely and at a higher price than a year ago. Roses were in good supply and good quality and not excessively higher in price. A quantity of snapdragons was on the market, but moved rather slowly. Flowering plants were in great demand and all were sold out completely, even the humble geranium with a flower found its way into some homes. Boston ferns, too, sold well, as did some baby ramblers and hybrid roses that were available. Prices on the whole ruled rather lower on all items than those prevailing a year ago, and the results of the day seem highly satisfactory to all.

N. S.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—The florists of this city used co-operative advertisements four columns wide by nine inches deep in the local papers featuring Mothers' day with very good results.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

THE United States treasury department is refunding money reducing the duty paid on tulips at $1.00 per 1000 to 50 cents per 1000 under the heading "other bulbs."

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are in the same condition as last week but sprouting fast. The new crop rows are showing in the field and the wheel hoes have started "scrubbing."

WE understand that thus far the war trade board has placed no restriction on the importation of soya and edible beans, rape seed and flower and vegetable seeds from Japan.

TOLEDO, O.—March clover, cash, was steady, May 13, at $18.25, closing at the same price as on May 11. Timothy was 2½ cents lower for September; old, quoted at $3.77, new $3.80, September $4.47, October $4.15, December $4.15.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The state council of defense, food products committee, has established a booth at the establishment of J. Bolgiano & Son, where pledges are accepted for the production of food to help to win the war. An attractive button designates the signers as "Soldiers of the Soil."

THE convention of the American Seed Trade Association, which will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, will be marked by interesting deliberations on the many problems affecting the trade, due to wartime conditions. Keep the date well in mind and make your plans now to be in attendance.

FOLLOWING a conference with the seed administrator for Illinois, May 8, the seed stocks committee of the department of agriculture took over for government use 10,000 bushels of seed corn. The department will observe closely the results of planting in the Illinois localities in which the seed will be distributed.

ROTTERDAM, HOLLAND.—Arrangements with Germany for guaranteeing safety of ships to and from United States to carry grain for Holland having been completed, the cargo steamers Zyl-dyk, Hector and Delfland probably will sail soon for America, in exchange for steamers Hollandia, Java and Stella, bound here.

It is stated that some speculators in seed stocks picked up at high prices are getting cold feet and are trying to get out from under. This is to be expected, but has no bearing on the intrinsic value of seeds, which will surely continue to advance for several years, on account of labor and the high price of grains, beans, etc.

CINCINNATI, O.—The J. Chas. McCullough Seed Co. reports that the demand is keeping up longer than usual this season, and due to much cold weather in April, good May business is anticipated. On grass seed the market if anything is somewhat easier. There is a liberal supply of onion sets and prices have declined considerably during the past few weeks.

Government Seeds.

The New York State College of Agriculture says it is not wise to depend on seeds furnished by the government since the seeds are presumably of little known varieties to be planted for experimental purpose. Thus they may be of a kind not desirable for the home garden. Further, the amount of seed in each package is small. The college believes, therefore, that the home gardener will do well to purchase from a reliable seed house.

California Seed Crops.

L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, in a communication of May 10, states that, due to hot weather and lack of moisture, crops are backward, and that irrigation is being done where possible. Lettuce, radish and salsify will be very short, however. Beet, carrot and a good share of the onion crop, which is planted on the reclaimed land in the vicinity of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, will probably pull through unless there is excessive heat as was the case last year. The acreage of these crops this year is large, however, and with anywhere near a normal crop there should be a fair supply. Radish, it is believed, will show the greatest shortage and parsnip will also be on the scarce list. Spinach is looking well to date and the same is true of sweet peas.

Under present conditions, it is difficult to get anyone to grow seed, due to the labor situation, the preference being given to grain and other crops that can be handled to a greater extent by machinery. Workers are scarce and demand high wages, the Japs at present getting $3.50 to $4 per day, and at harvest time will doubtless ask for $5 or more.

New York Seed Trade.

There was a great drive in plants in the seed trade district during the past week, and also considerable business in seeds, though as the latter orders began to come in very early this year the heaviest part of that business is over. At all the stores plants have been featured; vegetables, geranium, pansy and other flowering plants, small shrubs, etc., have all met with ready sales.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Robt. W. MacNiff, 52 Vesey street, by these creditors: Watson Manufacturing Company, $575; Charles H. Laue, $67; W. Peter Duryee & Co., $8. The bankruptcy is attributed to inability to get his goods from Holland in time for the fall sales. Liabilities are stated to be $40,000 and assets $15,000.

Peter Henderson & Co. have hit on a good idea by placing in one of their store windows a large placard entitled "Seasonable Hints for May," telling briefly what gardeners should attend to. They will doubtless follow it up with hints for the remaining months of the growing season.

At Vaughan's Seed Store we have noticed exceptionally fine stocks of vegetable plants, which were selling fast. There was also a brisk trade in seeds and garden accessories at this establishment.

John Wilk, 155 West 33d street, is right near the Pennsylvania terminal and has a good chance to "catch 'em comin' and goin'." He is ably assisted by Mrs. Wilk, and they report business good.

The shop at 140 East 34th street, known as "Herrmann's Seed Store," is owned and conducted by Alex. Gofferje. He is now particularly strong on plants and has a good business.

Marshall H. Duryea, vice-president and general manager of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., of this city and Hoboken, N. J., says that the spring rush is over but that they have had excellent business.

Henry Nungesser, formerly well known in the seed trade of this city, but now retired, has been spending two months at Atlantic City. He loves the "briny deep."

It is rumored that a well-known Philadelphia seed firm will soon open a store in this city.

Holland's Trade in Plants and Bulbs.

Bulb producers were impeded in making foreign sales in 1917, as England, Germany and Austria closed their frontiers to the entry of bulbs, and transportation connections with Russia and the United States were most uncertain, according to Commerce Reports. The Scandinavian countries bought only under the condition that enough coal should be provided by the exporter to keep the bulbs warm in transit. This condition was very difficult to meet, on account of the great lack of fuel in Holland. As a whole, the business of the year was not poor, considering the markets that were open. The export trade to Scandinavia continued, but Germany and Austria, after long negotiations, could be induced to admit only a small proportion of the bulbs purchased in normal times. Shipments to the United States were still possible, but the total amount exported was far below that of normal times. Bulbs and plants invoiced for the United States at all consulates for the year amounted to $1,975,593, as compared with $2,891,172 in 1916. The culture of hyacinths did not pay for the costs incurred. At the end of the shipping season large amounts of bulbs of all kinds remained, which could not be shipped. The increased cost of manure and fertilizers, as well as raw materials, was not recompensed by a proportional advance in prices. The government discouraged bulb production by favoring the use of the lowlands for the production of grain and food products. The acreage planted to bulbs in 1917 was less than formerly. The Dutch government began to regulate the exportation of bulbs in September, and permits had to be obtained for all exports. At one time since the war began bulbs were used for fodder for cattle and other abnormal purposes. Co-operative drying houses were established in 1917, so that producers could reap the profit of their labors.

Florists' Business Booming.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., returning from a tour of his firm's customers in the principal cities of the middle west, reports that business was never so good as at the present time, notwithstanding steadily advancing prices in all his lines, and that the retail florists are busy everywhere.

POTATO acreage in lower Florida has increased 70 per cent, St. John's county, with 6,000 acres now leading.

THE Iowa State Horticultural Society, Wesley Greene, secretary, Des Moines, has issued a bulletin, entitled "Onion Production in Iowa."

HASTINGS, MICH.—John C. Kitcham, master of the state grange, reports that 5,000,000 bushels of potatoes are still unmarketed in this state and must be moved and used before July 1 or be wasted.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 14.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $2.50 to $3.00; celery, crate, $4.50 to $5.00; leaf lettuce, per box, 17½ to 20 cents; radishes, per box, $1.75 to $2.00; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $2.50 to $3.00.

New York, May 13.—Celery, per crate, $1.50 to $4.00; cucumbers, 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen; mushrooms, 40 cents to $1.60 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 12 to 18 cents; lettuce, per strap, $1.50 to $2.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $2.00.

Bean Production.

The edible bean crop of the United States was in 1917 the largest in the country's history, both in acreage and production. In order to supplement data heretofore published, which have referred only to important producing states, a special inquiry was made to determine acreage and production in all states wherein these were material. Extraordinary increases over the acreages of previous years were shown in most of the main producing states, as well as in states where beans have been heretofore grown only to a slight extent. Heavy abandonment decreased the harvested acreage in New York and limited the increase in Michigan.

Sweet Potatoes.

Where sweet potatoes are regularly grown as a crop their culture is as well understood as the culture of the common Irish potato in the north. We have had the opportunity to talk with many southerners on sweets, and they seem to be well posted; in fact, they are all quite enthusiastic about this crop, taking special pride in providing an ample supply. But further north conditions are different. We know of a district where 30 miles either north or south mark the dividing line between the two kinds of potatoes grown—30 miles one way the sweet is never seen in the garden, while the other way the sweet has a long lead over the Irish potato. Soil conditions control this abrupt change more than climatic conditions—the sweet potato district beginning with the hilly section and with sandstone soils, or in the opposite direction the culture of sweets is not attempted, owing to level, heavy soils and limestone foundation. We have in this general statement the secret of success or failure—success on worn, rather poor soil, especially on side hills where such are sandy, and failure in the cooler, heavy, flat soils, especially so if rich limestone areas. We ourselves have failed and succeeded according to the above rules. We have grown sweet potato vines like moonvines, with "never a tuber," and also have we had the scant, poor growth rewarded by a generous crop of excellent "sweets." Therefore, in northern sections, we must choose a warm location, a sandy soil, rather poor, and ridge up the soil to increase its heat and decrease its moisture. To this end it is best to sharply ridge the soil before planting and set the sprouts on top of such ridges. Space should be 3-foot rows by 12 to 15 inches in the row. The plants are produced by bedding the potatoes in some light material, say sawdust, old manure or sandy humus, in a warm greenhouse or hotbed. The tubers are placed about 4 inches apart from each other and simply covered 3 inches deep by the bedding material. Temperature must be high, above 70° for best results. The sprouts are simply pulled when wanted, and more will follow in almost endless succession. If not ready to plant when sprouts are up, they can be sheared off or pulled and heeled in, temporarily. It is generally believed that what is known in northern markets as "Jersey sweets" is the best variety to plant for the cooler sections of the country. We have seen an excellent crop in Minnesota; therefore, more depends upon the soil and exposure than upon either latitude or longitude. Given a warm, sandy soil on a hillside, we can grow good sweet potatoes away in the north. For the warmer sections of our country, the crop is of great importance, as the sweet potato succeeds exactly where the Irish potato fails. We have been informed by many growers that it is necessary to keep the vines from rooting at the joints by frequent lifting, but on this point we are not an authority, never having taken enough interest in the crop to determine this claim.

MARKETMAN.

Rhubrab Leaves Poison.

The United States department of agriculture has issued a warning against eating rhubarb leaves, due to the fact that the leaves contain a high content of oxalic acid, dangerous to the diner unless he be in perfect health. If the leaves are eaten, the ribs and stems should be removed, only tender leaves used, and these should be parboiled or blanched before being cooked.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.
Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President;
J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., Vice-
President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress
St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel.
Forty-third annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 26-28, 1918.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—P. J. Lynch is a candidate for clerk of the supreme court.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—The San Diego Floral Society held a successful rose show in Balboa Park, May 4-5.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Wm. B. Schneider, for many years connected with the park systems in this city and New York, died suddenly May 1.

STAMFORD, CONN.—The mid-summer show of the Stamford Horticultural Society will be held July 3. A fall show will also be held in October.

LONDON, ONT.—F. Dawson, formerly connected with Queen Victoria park, Niagara Falls, has taken the position of superintendent of parks in this city.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The Elm City Nursery Company Woodmont Nurseries, Inc., report, that notwithstanding anticipations to the contrary, they are enjoying unusually good business, and with a shortage of help the spring season has been a strenuous one.

MEMBERS of the American Association of Nurserymen should bear well in mind the annual convention at Chicago, June 26-28, at which there should be a record attendance in view of the many problems confronting the trade as the result of present conditions.

THE condition of the commercial peach crop for May, as reported by the United States department of agriculture, was 57.2, as compared with final condition of 73.2 in 1917. The estimated crop for the same date is 22,398 bushels, the final in 1917 being 29,042 bushels.

MACON, GA.—R. C. Berckmans, who retired from the nursery business with the dissolution of the P. J. Berckmans Co., announcement of which was made in our issue of March 30, page 562, is now president of the Georgia Vithumus Co. of this city, the product being a new form of fertilization said to be very effective for all standard field and truck crops.

"Home Grounds."

"Home Grounds—Their Planning and Planting" is the title of an attractive booklet of 50 pages, with numerous illustrations, being issued by the Elm City Nurseries Company Woodmont Nurseries, Inc., New Haven, Conn., the text prepared by Professor L. H. Bailey for the American Association of Nurserymen. Included in the contents is much of interest concerning the basic ideas in landscaping for both large and small areas, the aim in planting the landscape garden, the feeling for plants to which the plant lover responds, the planting in particular, blossoms and colors, the fruit garden and the vegetable garden and the planting and caretaking, included in the latter section being suggestions for the preparation of the land, the lawn, pruning, fall planting, shade trees and general care.

Winter's Effects in Arnold Arboretum.

Most of the taxads which have been grown successfully in the arboretum have suffered from the cold of the winter. All the forms of the Japanese Taxus cuspidata, however, are now as green and fresh as they were in October. As the years pass the confidence in the value of this plant increases and it has never been as great as it is this spring. Among all the plants which Japan has contributed to the gardens of the eastern United States no other is so generally valuable. Fortunately American nurserymen are at last beginning to realize that this yew has some commercial value, and it will soon be within the reach of everyone who has a garden or wants to plant the best possible evergreen hedge for New England. The form of this yew (var. chinensis) introduced by Wilson from western China is less hardy than the Japanese plant. In a collection of young plants of the Chinese form, in as protected a position as could be found in the arboretum, some are slightly injured and others are dead. It is not probable that this fine tree, therefore, will ever become established in Massachusetts. On all the forms of the European yew (Taxus baccata) there are dead leaves and dead or injured branches. All the plants of T. baccata erecta have been killed, and there are a few dead branches even on T. baccata repandens, the plant with widespread, semiprostrate stems which has lived in this climate for several years without injury and has been considered here the hardiest and most desirable of all the forms of the European yew for New England. Plants of the Canadian yew (T. canadensis), the so-called ground hemlock of northern woods, planted in the shade or in full exposure to the sun, have been badly disfigured as the tips of most of the branches and all the upper leaves have been killed. The leaves on upper branches of the Japanese Torreya mucifera are dry and beginning to turn brown, but the buds appear to be uninjured and the plants may recover. It has not suffered here before and for the last two or three years has been producing fruit in the arboretum. The California torreyi (T. californica), which has been nursed along in a sheltered position for years and has suffered more or less every winter, appears to have at last entirely succumbed. Young plants in a sheltered position of the Japanese Cephalotaxus drupacea are little injured but the handsomer C. Fortunei from western China has suffered and it is doubtful if this fine tree will live through many years in this climate. —Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 9, 1918.

"The Apple Annual."

"The Apple Annual," a report of the proceedings and discussions at the Fruit Growers' Conference, together with a report of the Washington state grade and pack conference, held at Spokane, Wash., November 19-24, 1917, in conjunction with the national apple show, has been issued, its 34 pages containing much of interest. Included in the contents are many excellent articles prepared by well-known authorities, among the subjects being orchard costs and economies, the labor problem, intercropping, apple sizes, pruning for size, by products, present needs and possibilities of evaporation, packing house equipment, business practice, federal standardization of grades, pest control, etc. The publication, which is the only official record of the proceedings of the fruit growers' conference, may be had from the Chamber of Commerce, Spokane, Wash., the price being 35 cents per copy, postpaid.

BROOKLAND, D. C.—The annual rose show of the Brookland Horticultural Society will be held in the Lord Memorial hall, May 22. Dr. J. B. Parker is president of the society.

HEATING and COOLING are two branches of engineering on which we specialize for the greenhouse trade.

Over thirty years have been devoted by us to the construction and designing of boilers and refrigerating apparatus.

During this period we have furnished and installed heating and cooling systems for the most successful greenhouse men in this country.

Tubeless Boiler

KROESCHELL Boilers are making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists who have used other makes are constantly giving the KROESCHELL the highest praise.

13,468,320 sq. ft. of glass was equipped with KROESCHELL Boilers during the past five years.

Water Tube Steam Boiler

When in need of refrigeration investigate the Kroeschell System—its high efficiency and low cost of operation place the Kroeschell System of Refrigeration in the foremost rank for greenhouse use.

Our system of Refrigeration and Cooling is easily installed—perfect control of temperature and absolute safety insured—no ammonia used for this system.

Plants and Flowers as Wedding Presents.

Flowers are always associated with the wedding. The first attention of the suitor is expressed with flowers; as the ardor increases, there is nothing too good, no plant or flower too expensive to carry the message of his love and affection. Then comes the wedding with its more or less elaborate display at the church and home, for which plants and flowers have always been the appropriate setting. This use of flowers, however, is personal—it is a part of the necessary arrangements provided by the principals in honor of their invited guests.

A much larger field, however, has its opportunity in the firmly established custom of sending presents to the bride and groom, gifts bearing love and best wishes, the nature of which are either ornamental or useful, all practical and helpful in the new home. Jewelry and department stores are constantly catering to this demand, featuring their stock in display advertisements, particularly during October, at Easter and for the June weddings. Why should not the florist make the most of this opportunity? Plants and flowers are the most appropriate of gifts for such occasions. A handsome vase filled with roses or other flowers is much admired at the time, after which the vase remains a useful and valued ornament.

FLORAL BRIC-A-BRAC.

There has of late years been introduced many varied forms of floral bric-a-brac in vases and shallow bowls with perforated inserts to hold the flowers. These are of Japanese origin, but many very elaborate and beautiful pieces have been manufactured in this country, and when arranged with flowers, make most appropriate wedding gifts. Japanese vases of bamboo make beautiful house ornaments, and are doubly attractive when filled with flowers.

The bride will take great delight in plants, palms, ferns, etc., in jardinières and pedestals that will help so much in the furnishing and decoration of the new home. Nothing will be more appreciated than gifts of this character. Kentias, arecas, bushy aspidistras, Pandanus Veitchii, Dracena Massangeana, Cibotium Schiedeii, Ficus elastica or pandurata and various types of the Boston fern are all most decorative and useful house plants. An appropriate basket pot cover, or a jardiniere with suitable pedestal, is a great addition and choice specimens should always be displayed in such accessories.

ANNIVERSARY PERIODS.

Wedding anniversaries from the first annual occurrence are productive of much good to the florist. For the wooden wedding, all kinds of wooden kitchen utensils are sent filled with flowers. Two large spoons tied with flowers and ribbon are appropriate. The tin wedding follows in due time, when all kinds of metal receptacles are sent filled with plants and flowers. Baskets of plants and flowers, with tin ware tied to the handle, are decorative. The tenth anniversary brings out the glass ware, when cut glass vases of flowers and similar fern dishes are most appropriate. The silver anniversary is always a joyous, and often a most elaborate occasion, when plants and flowers figure prominently on the gift table. Silvered baskets, filled with choice plants or cut flowers, are most suitable. A silvered chiffon or ribbon gives a timely finish. Silver fern dishes are much in demand for such functions. House plants in silvered basket covers are certain to be appreciated.

When after many years the golden wedding is celebrated, the plants should all be encased in gilt covers. Everything should have a golden tinge, the color of the autumn of life. In their season, yellow chrysanthemums, calceolarias, polyanthus, pans of yellow pansies, yellow daisies, in well flowered specimens, etc., are all acceptable. Vases and gilt baskets of yellow roses, yellow or orange chrysanthemums, tied with golden ribbon will be sure to stand out among the other gifts.

Publicity is a great factor. That plants and flowers are the most appropriate of all wedding gifts, must be kept at all times to the front, and with particular emphasis in the months of October, April and June, when the air is filled with the melody of the wedding march.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The voicing of sympathy, with flowers, for funerals, is a custom that appears to be increasing. This is thought to be due, in a measure, to the prosperity of the middle classes, who on account of the great war impetus, are earning much more money than ever before. Everything possible should be done to cater to this the most profitable branch of the business. While sprays and wreaths are first in importance, there is also a demand for other standard forms, such as the broken column, anchor, cross, scroll, heart, etc. For larger pieces, all of these are made with stands, or separate stands to which any size can be quickly attached. A good line of these should always be on hand and a sample of each kept mossed up for quick service. The man who caters to any line of work will soon become known as an expert, with an ever increasing trade in his specialty.

Customers who call for funeral flowers, particularly those sending to bereaved friends, are likely purchasers of other things for their own homes; a plant or two for the porch, some geraniums for the flower beds, perhaps a window box or a vase or tub of growing plants.

A line of baskets, marked, "Special for Commencements," will bring to mind a coming event in which they are interested. "Ask for our special box of cut flowers,—a bit of cheer for hospital or sick room" is a placard which calls to mind a sick friend to whom they would like to send a few flowers.

Preparations should be complete for Memorial day. The window, with its patriotic atmosphere in feature and national colors, must be kept bright and attractive so as to impress on the public the importance of the day.

Ground plans of all the cemeteries in your locality are a great help and assistance in the delivery service. These are generally gladly furnished by the companies. Orders that are filled to be delivered to certain graves and lots at times like Christmas, Easter, Memorial day and anniversaries of birth or death, are much more quickly located by means of these plotted and numbered sections. A grave once located should be marked on the plan so that new messengers can deliver without difficulty. Trouble and expense are avoided by minute directions for all cemetery orders, as frequently a difference in the initial is all that distinguishes the Smiths' or Jones' from one another.

Over $34,000 is being spent by the publicity committee of the S. A. F. to help you in your business. Have you contributed to further this movement? There are about 18,000 firms of florists and nurserymen in this country. If only an average of $5 a year was contributed, the fund would be almost twice the amount the committee have planned to spend. Join the $10 a year men. "Show your good will, with a ten dollar bill." Send it today to Secretary John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York City.

The Summer Window.

It is essential that the show windows should present at all times an attractive, trade winning appearance. Even in the hot days of summer, when business is at its lowest ebb, the display kept bright and interesting enough to attract attention, will certainly pay for itself.

For early June, a beautiful and artistic window, may with the aid of a light lattice work, be made with roses in cut sprays, the stems stuck into tubes of water, which are concealed by the foliage.

There should always be a salable feature or two, such as a bird's nest fern, a medium sized palm, a dracaena or a good Scottii fern, these to be featured as porch plants, and each to be priced conspicuously. There is no guessing as to the value when a plant bears the price. It is a silent salesman.

Low narrow troughs or boxes, filled with lycopodium or tradescantia, are quite effective on the floor of the window next the glass. If these are kept watered and trimmed they will remain in good condition a long time.

The rockery, pool and fountain, is a summer form of decoration that is quite often seen. A waterfall and wheel operated by this power, keeps changing signs and other pieces of light construction in motion.

The greenhouses and grounds of the nursery, laid out on a small scale in the window, are sure to prove interesting. This is not hard to do; long, narrow, pieces of glass, one to each side of a house, with stripes of paint or paper to represent the bars, make very life like greenhouses. The grounds are terraced with sphagnum moss laid over boxes or pots and covered with sheet moss. Walks are made with fine pebbles. Foliage beds are filled with cuttings of coleus and alternanthera, and beds of color with geranium flowers stuck in boxes of sand which are easily replenished.

A lily pond with gold fish is a regular summer tenant in some windows. In all windows where running water is used, there should be a zinc or galvanized iron pan to fit the bottom of the window. This should have, in addition to waste pipes, a safety overflow or much damage may result.

Gladioli make a very showy window. These should be arranged in shallow bowls with the aid of the English flower block. The openings in these are large enough to hold the stems, together with the foliage. The stems can also be placed at almost any angle desired.

Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, Pa., have a long and rather narrow window, about 3x16 feet, which is noted for its beautiful decorations. A hit was made last year in July when the entire space was fitted up as a veranda or porch. The lattice work was covered with vines and hanging baskets hung in the arches. Grass rugs and mats decorated the floor, while a wicker table held a large bowl of flowers. Porch plants and vases of flowers were also prominent. On a wicker chair lay a closed parasol, a lady's garden hat and a magazine.

The fancy leaved caladiums from the miniature araryites to the taller growing sorts are with their beautifully variegated foliage, sure to make a showy window.

For a change, one or two medium sized cibotiums make a graceful showing. Some florists keep these in their windows the year around. As an addition, to give color to this display, a showy arrangement of fresh flowers on a large bronze wreath will be sure to find many admirers.

A large, well made, magnolia wreath, double, that is the same on both sides, with a cluster of small cycas leaves at the full part, is when gilded, a very conspicuous window piece. If kept clean, it can be brought out and used a number of times.

The outside appearance of the front of the store should always be the best. The boxes on the cornice over the window should be all that boxes ought to be all the time. They should never look as if they wanted renewing. A space cut in the pavement, under and close to the window, filled with boxwood makes an attractive setting. The more attention paid to the ornamentation of the front of the store, the greater will be the return. It is positively the best investment in the way of advertising it is possible to make. No other kinds of shops attempt such displays, so that this being the only beauty spot in the block, is rendered doubly conspicuous.

New Business.

One of the ways to get new business is to go after it. Many are satisfied to wait for customers to come to them; they are well established, carry a good stock, are up-to-date with their business methods and give service that is satisfactory. While they are fairly busy all the time, there are many periods, however, when, without increasing their fixed charges, they could do much more should the opportunity offer.

In every flower shop there should be a "new business" department. The man or firm who opens a new establishment of necessity keeps this idea before them all the time. Every sale means a new customer. All their knowledge and business training is taxed to the utmost to make their store the most inviting, the most advantageous of its kind, in which to purchase plants and flowers. An old established business is across the street, a little farther up or just around the corner. The locality would seem to have been served. The new firm, however, is out for business, and by their well decorated front and attractive window displays they appeal to buyers of flowers. There is no question but theirs is a flower shop, one of the kind that attracts the passerby, who stops to take a look, and is favorably impressed. He may have occasion later to speak of the shop to others, or if in need of flowers gives it a trial. A new broom sweeps clean, and a new shop draws customers, not solely because it is new, but because it is attractive, made so by the enthusiasm of the new firm. Nothing is too much trouble. The customers do not have to stand around to be waited on; they are seen as soon as they enter the store and given every attention. Their names are sought so that the literature of the store may be sent them. They are given a flower to wear as they depart and cheerfully invited to come again. There is no question but this bright, willing, always trying to please manner, coupled with good business methods, wins customers and is the greatest asset a store can have.

INCREASING THE VOLUME.

The province of the "new business" department, in either the new or the old established store, is to increase the volume of trade, to revive the old and bring in new customers. How this can best be done should receive most careful thought and consideration. Many stores seem somehow to specialize in certain lines. With some, decorations are a feature. They are florists like the rest of the craft, but somehow have drifted into this decorative work and lose their hold on much that used to interest them. If their new business department had been always on the job, they would have held on to the old trade as well as gained the new.

New business can be gained by closely following up the old. Good book accounts will begin to dwindle. There is no apparent cause, but Mr. Smith or Mrs. Brown are not seen in the store as often as formerly. Another good customer has stopped buying altogether. It is the business of this department to look up these former sources of revenue and in a careful, diplomatic way find out if any dissatisfaction exists. This should be done as soon as possible and before an attachment is made elsewhere. Disgruntled customers are very disastrous; they must be reclaimed at all hazards.

New business will keep account of all anniversary events. Every day is somebody's birthday; many are men of prominence, whose office on these natal days is a bower of flowers. There are also several anniversaries of the wedding, which are worth keeping track of. Many clubs and societies have annual dinners, balls and other entertainments on fixed dates that should be kept on the list. In memory of those who have passed away, loving friends and relatives have flowers taken to the cemetery at Christmas, Easter, and often for anniversaries of birth and death. Much of this business can be controlled by careful attention.

CREATING NEW BUSINESS.

The store windows of the retail shops in all lines of trade will be the better for a touch of the florists' art. A good bright salesman, with photos or sample plants, will convince a shop-keeper who never thought of doing it, that a choice plant, alternated with a basket of plants and flowers, or a vase of flowers, will make his window more attractive, and that a weekly service of this kind will be well worth the price.

Regular orders of cut flowers delivered once or twice a week, generally at the request of customers, are regarded by many dealers as unsatisfactory, mainly on account of the low price, and the difficulty of maintaining the standard when stock is scarce. There is room for such a service in every flower loving community. To be successful, it must be built up on a well thought out system that makes provisions for every emergency. Many flower lovers would entertain and try out such a proposition if properly put before them.

Every store needs new business. It is this that keeps things moving. The gaining of several new accounts each week is the kind of incentive that leads to greater achievement and continued success. Start a new business department and back it up with efficiency.

Memorial Day Window Decoration.

The Central Floral Co., 132 North State street, Chicago, is featuring a patriotic window display for Memorial day that is right up to the minute and is attracting much favorable attention from both the trade and the general public. A grave decorated with blossoming myrtle and a neat tombstone on which rests a beautiful wreath of boxwood, raspberry colored sweet peas and Darwin tulips plays a most important part not to mention an old veteran dressed in his uniform of army blue with his left arm shot off carrying a card bearing an inscription and encouraging the mothers "not to weep for those whom a nation honors" while another near-by has the wording, "They are never dead when you think of them." The old soldier is teaching a young lad dressed in a sailor's uniform holding a wreath of pansies and an American flag the habit of decorating graves for Memorial day. A concrete urn filled with vines and geraniums completes the cemetery lot scene, while near by on the grass lie a sprinkling can and small sickle and overhead against a background of sky-blue canvas a flock of birds are seen flying in the sky all of which adds to the natural aspect. This firm had beautiful window displays for St. Valentine's day and Mothers' day, which caused much comment, but its Memorial day window now seen at this store, one of the most beautiful in the city, is by far the best.

Publicity at Louisville for Mothers' Day.

The trade at Louisville, Ky., in full-page advertisements in the local papers, attractively illustrated, with the slogan "Say It With Flowers," co-operated in producing splendid business for Mothers' day this year, as on previous occasions. Included in the firms appearing in the advertisement were August R. Baumer, the New Nanz & Neuner Co., E. G. Reimers & Son Co., Fred Haupt Co., Simon Pontrich, Jacob Schulz Co., Marret & Miller, M. D. Reimers, C. B. Thompson & Co., S. E. Thompson, the F. Walker Co., and the Wm. Walker Co.

Memorial Day.

How sleep the brave who sink to rest
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallow'd mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honor comes, a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
And Freedom shall a while repair
To dwell a weeping hermit there!

WILLIAM COLLINS.

Memorial day, first observed in memory of the brave men who gave up their lives during the Civil war, 1860-1865, has in later years been generally observed as a day to pay affectionate tribute to the memory of all dead. This year, there are stronger reasons than ever before for a nationwide observance. President Wilson has issued a proclamation in which he terms it "A day already freighted with sacred and stimulating memories."

At Gettysburg, Arlington and many other national cemeteries, there will be on May 30, as there has been on many preceding anniversaries, appropriate services and decorations over the graves of our fallen heroes. Now we are in another great war—the greatest war—and while we peacefully observe the day in our own land we will think of those new made graves in France—beautiful France that was—where fathers and sons, brothers, schoolmates and companions have laid down their lives for home and country.

Although some of the southern states do not observe Memorial day, it is understood that the proclamation applies to all the states alike.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

"Whereas, The Congress of the United States, on the second day of April last, passed the following resolution:—

"Resolved, By the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), that, it being a duty peculiarly incumbent in a time of war humbly and devoutly to acknowledge our dependence on Almighty God: and to implore His aid and protection, the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, respectfully requested to recommend a day of public humiliation, prayer and fasting, to be observed by the people of the United States with religious solemnity and the offering of fervent supplications to Almighty God for the safety and welfare of our cause, His blessings on our arms, and a speedy restoration of an honorable and lasting peace to the nations of the earth."

"And, whereas, It has always been the reverent habit of the people of the United States to turn in humble appeal to Almighty God for His guidance in the affairs of their common life:

"Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim Thursday, the 30th day of May, a day already freighted with sacred and stimulating memories, a day of public humiliation, prayer and fasting, and do exhort my fellow citizens of all faiths and creeds to assemble on that day in their several places of worship and there, as well as in their homes, to pray Almighty God that He may forgive our sins and shortcomings as a people and purify our hearts to see and love the truth, to accept and defend all things that are just and right, and to purpose only those righteous acts and judgments which are in conformity with His will; beseeching Him that He will give victory to our armies as they fight for freedom, wisdom to those who take counsel on our behalf in these days of dark struggle and perplexity, and steadfastness to our people to make sacrifice to the utmost in support of what is just and true, bringing us at last the peace in which men's hearts can be at rest because it is founded upon mercy, justice and good will.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done in the District of Columbia this 11th day of May, in the year of Our Lord 1918, and of the independence of the United States the 124d.

PLANT NOTES.

Small Ferns.

The fern spores that were sown in late winter should now be in condition to transplant into flats. It will be difficult to separate the plants yet into individual specimens, but little clumps can be lifted with a toothpick and planted in flats about an inch apart. The flats or boxes should not be deep; about an inch and a half of soil is sufficient. The soil should be composed of two parts of live loam and one part leaf mold, with a generous sprinkling of sand, and sifted through a fine sieve. The flats should be placed in a moist house that is well shaded, and the walks kept well wet down all through the hot weather. If a nice, warm, moist temperature is maintained the plants themselves will not require much watering, only light sprinklings, and they will very rapidly root into the new soil and send forth their fronds. If the grower has not grown his own ferns, it is a good time now to place an order for them with the fern specialists, for they can be purchased at very low prices and they are very easily grown on, and where there are many fern dishes to be filled in the fall the difference in cost of the young plants lifted from the flats in midsummer and those purchased out of small pots in the fall is considerable; plants that will cost $3 and $4 a hundred at that time can now be obtained for one-third of that amount, and a thousand or more of this small stock does not take up much space and will be disposed of before the bench room is needed in the winter.

Cinerarias.

The sowing of cinerarias is better done in June than later. Many postpone this until July, but during the extremely hot days of that month it is often difficult to obtain good germination, and the seed pans or boxes will have to be watched carefully or they will become dry and the young seedlings burn off. The soil should be well shaded until the young seedlings show themselves, when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as the plants have one or two well defined leaves they should be potted in small pots and given a nice, dry, position near the glass, which should be shaded, but care should be taken that the young stock does not get drawn. Always bear in mind that the one thing in growing cinerarias to be on the watch for is the aphid. These insects quickly infest these plants and rapidly suck the life out of them. Constant fumigation will keep them in check, but if not attended to regularly it will be time and money thrown away to attempt their culture. Cineraria hybrida is the variety most grown, and these are obtainable in some elegant strains with large, high-colored flowers. The Cineraria stellata is a much larger and more rapid growing plant which is very showy, but it is not so well adapted for house culture when in flower.

Winter-Flowering Geraniums.

With all growers having a greenhouse and doing a retail business there is in the fall a good demand for pot geraniums for house culture. Plants lifted from the open ground and potted in the fall are not very satisfactory, for the plants recover from the later transplanting slowly and go out of bloom and often do not flower again until spring. It is better to grow plants for this purpose in pots through the summer, and these, with good culture, will bloom all winter long if in a sunny position. Cuttings taken at this time will make nice stock for this purpose, or small plants left over after the spring sales can be used. The plants should be potted firmly, so that they will make a short, stocky growth, and kept well pinched back throughout the summer, that as many branches may be procured as is possible. All buds should be picked off as soon as formed, allowing no blooms until the plants are firmly established in blooming pots, in which they should be planted the last of August. A 6-inch pot makes the best size for house culture, and the plant can be easily grown so that it will fill this size nicely. A frame outside is the most convenient and best place for growing them through the summer.

Ardiasias.

One of the most popular berried plants for Christmas is the ardisia, but it is not grown as generally as it should be, the production being left to a few plant growers, for it is of very easy culture, the only drawback being that it is of very slow growth. The seeds of the old plants are now thoroughly ripened and should be sown at this time. They germinate slowly, and should be sown about an inch apart, in rows the same distance apart, and they can be left in the seed box until early summer and potted in 2½ or 3 inch pots and grown in a warm, lightly shaded location. They should be potted in good fibrous loam and kept in a moist, close house, that all the growth possible may be obtained at this time, for the plant naturally checks in winter. In early spring these young plants will flower and produce a crop of berries for the next winter. The plants that have been grown for three years or more have generally passed the ornamental stage, for they lose their leaves and have a "leggy" appearance. When they reach this stage the tops can be rooted and fine plants obtained. This can best be done at this time of the year by cutting into the stem and wrapping the cut with wet moss firmly tied around. Keep the plants in a warm, close atmosphere and the moss continually damp, and in four or five weeks new roots will grow in the moss, when the tops can be cut off and potted, still keeping the plant in the same temperature until new growths start. This operation will not in any way interfere with the plants blooming, for they frequently set an abundance of buds while the top is making new roots. The brown scale is the greatest enemy of ardisias, even in the young stage, and they must be removed at once when found, for they sap the growth of the plant. The older plants should be frequently sponged with a strong nicotine solution.

Larkspur.

Larkspur, or "poison weed," is treated of in a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture, in which it is pointed out that many losses are suffered each year by western ranchmen by reason of the stock eating the weed. There are two groups of these larkspurs on the ranges—the tall and the low varieties. The low larkspurs prefer the hills and rather dry ground, while the tall kinds grow in the canyons and gulches. Among the tall species are Delphinium barbeye and D. cucullatum. The tall larkspur is easily distinguished after it blossoms, but in the early stages is often confused with the geranium and aconite. Of the low larkspurs, D. Nelsoni is a type. It grows in considerable abundance in Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah. The root is short and tuberous and the plant never exceeds a foot in height. The blossoms are a violet-blue. They appear, arranged in a loose raceme, in May.

Primulas.

The young primulas that were sown early should now be in 3-inch pots and be given as cool and airy a location as possible. To get the best growth on these plants, they should never be subjected to great heat, for the species are naturally a cool growing plant on the edges of the woodland, in their native state. Outside in a frame with a lath covering is the best place that they can be grown, the pots sunk in the soil even with the rim. In potting these plants they should be placed in the soil deep enough for them to stand firmly; they will not stand deep potting, but many growers do not pot them deeply enough, and they frequently get turned over sideways during watering. They must be watered carefully, and preferably with a can with a fine rose. The later sowings will have to be carried on in the houses until they are large enough to be placed outside. They will have to be shaded, but do not shade them heavily enough to cause them to get drawn.

Peonies.

The work on these plants is not by any means finished when the blooms are cut, for they must be taken care of, to insure a good crop for another year. Where the plants are grown in rows the constant traveling has packed the soil down hard, and the ground should be given a good cultivation in order to lighten it up. The weeds should be kept down all summer and not allowed to rob the soil of its richness. If the plants were severely cut in harvesting the bloom, so that there is not much foliage left on them, it is well to spread a mulch of strawy manure on the surface. This is often the case with the officinalis varieties, which do not make the heavy growth of the later varieties, and, as it is natural for the roots of the peonies to have the shade of the heavy foliage of the plants during the summer, the cutting of the stems and foliage of these varieties robs the roots of this, and a mulch that will protect the ground from the hot summer sun is very beneficial and will also reduce the labor of weeding. Any old blooms left on the plant should be cut and thrown away. Plants that have become broken down by high winds or heavy rains should be tied up in shape.

Solanums.

These little Christmas plants should not be allowed to stand around in the hot greenhouses, badly pot bound and drying up every day, for they will grow hard, and it cannot be expected to obtain a good plant under these conditions. They will stand lots of abuse and do fairly well, and that is the reason.

probably, that they are so often neglected during the busy days. But it is much better to plant them out in the field than to carry them along in this condition. They can easily be handled in this manner, lifting them early in the fall. They will need to be kept pinched back into shape—any strong leading shoots should be cut back when they are soft. They can be planted fairly close together, and will need frequent cultivation. If there is no suitable outside location where they can be planted out, they can be plunged in a frame and potted up as it becomes necessary, but outside treatment of some kind is far preferable to the greenhouse, which is too warm, unless shaded, and they make better growth and bloom more freely in the bright sunlight.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The week just closed has been a busy one for the promotion bureau of the campaign, due very largely to the influence which our slogan "Say it with Flowers" is exerting everywhere. It is pleasing to note that when a sentiment is to be promulgated, which it is desired shall have public recognition, the thought of flowers as a medium of expression naturally arises. This was the case when the Italy-America flower day, May 24, was projected. When the question as to how certain propaganda, reflecting upon America as to her relations with Italy, one of her allies, could be controverted, it was quickly determined that it could best be done with flowers, and the services of our bureau were at once sought, with a view to enlisting the aid of our florists in the collection of flowers for distribution by a number of organizations engaged in work incident to the great war. Hence the notice issued by the secretary through the trade papers last week. It should be borne in mind that the florists were not asked to donate any flowers, but simply to take care of any which might be sent on to them for the proposed distribution. This service not only would bring florists into personal contact with many people seeking, but, in the nature of things, should result in large sales to many who would be induced to contribute flowers.

Following this movement came another, in which the bureau was again called upon to assist, and which is explained in the following letter sent out by the secretary to all florists in the neighborhoods where wounded soldiers are likely to be interned in hospitals, or where branches of the organization have the work of visiting hospitals in charge. Florists in all sections are urged to accept this announcement, as a suggestion that where they can co-operate with any of the branches of the league in the work they will do so. The season for outdoor flowers is with us, and there should be available a quantity of material which will serve the admirable purpose of the hospital visitors, without making serious inroads upon the resources of anyone. Such assistance will greatly help toward the attainment of the main object of our campaign, as embodied in our slogan "Say it with Flowers."

Dear Sir:

Here is a project which, if you will support it, is calculated to impress permanently our slogan "Say it with Flowers" on the public mind throughout the country, and, as well, will give publicity to your own business.

The National League for Woman's Service, which works with and through the American Red Cross and kindred organizations, has undertaken to visit all hospitals in which are wounded and sick soldiers, for the express purpose of presenting each of our boys incapacitated in our service with a flower or flowers. Here in New York such distribution is now being effected on a large scale, and it is found that above all things the poor fellows crave flowers—offerings in the way of delicacies seem of secondary importance.

The New York Florists' Club is supporting the movement to the fullest extent, and the Society of American Florists is urging its members and the trade generally to help the local branches of the league in cities and towns where the soldiers are in hospitals, by donating any surplus flowers which may be available for this especial purpose.

MEMORIAL DAY WREATH.

Magnolia with Immortelles, Flags and Tricolor Ribbon.

The gratitude of the league for this anticipated co-operation on the part of the florists is shown in the fact that the organization has adopted the slogan of our publicity campaign "Say it with Flowers," as its slogan for this work, and our promotion bureau is providing slogan signs for posting in all the chapter houses of the different organizations, for display on all motor cars and vehicles engaged in the work, and in various other ways. Probably 20,000 or more of these signs will thus go into public use, displayed and actively featured by the very best people in the country.

You are asked to do this "little bit," and in doing it you will help to gain publicity for flowers such as would ordinarily have seemed impossible of achievement. The chairman of your district branch will, doubtless, call upon you.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

To those florists who have not yet seen the advisability of making response to the appeal for contributions to the campaign fund, it may be said that never was their support more needed than at the present time. Beyond question, the publicity committee has proved that its efforts have resulted in a stimulation of trade which, to say the least, has been extraordinary. The thought of what might have been the state of things without it is depressing, but there is the future to look to, and the campaign must not be allowed to halt. Some of our florists, too, are forgetting that a subscription does not end with the undertaking to make it. Forgetfulness is anything but a virtue in an undertaking like this, for the promotion bureau must depend upon the funds actually provided, and is obliged to contract far ahead for many of its direct service aids, all of which are furnished at actual cost.

The secretary is at this date starting on an eastern tour in the interests of the campaign, one of the many itineraries arranged so that he can come in to personal contact with trade interests in sections where they are large and individually numerous. Clubs and societies who would like to have the secretary present at one or other of their meetings should get into communication with him, as he is desirous of making his trips as far reaching as possible.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.
DIRECTOR BREITMEYER'S LETTER.
Detroit, Mich., May 17, 1918.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

It must be apparent to all florists, whether retail or growers, that in these times of uncertainty and lack of desire to do the usual purchasing of flowers, that a special effort must be made by the merchant to keep his merchandise constantly before the eyes of the public. Splendid results have been gained by the national publicity committee in the advertising that has been done during the past few months, and which has no doubt been of tremendous help to the selling of flowers. In order that our committee can carry on this work as planned, we must realize that the cost runs up into dollars, and someone must contribute to this end.

I am moved to write this letter, and to call your attention to your subscription, and especially the attention of those who have made small appropriations, to the end that they will subscribe more liberally. It is important that we, as business men, support the committee who give their time and money for the benefit of all the trade. I know that when careful thought is given, many of us will see the advisability of increasing our national publicity fund contribution.

St. Valentine's day and Mothers' day sales, which in most localities were double the amount of previous years, prove conclusively that advertising is essential to the life of trade. I, for one, appreciate the opportunity afforded the florist in being able to get some one who has given a thought and has brought results that have been beyond expectation, and I hope that everyone who reads this letter will go over their pledge and immediately increase it.

PHILIP BREITMEYER.

Publicity, Modern Business Weapon.

Now that Mothers' day is over, do you feel enthusiastic over the possibilities of your volume of business? How much better did your sales total than last year's Mothers' day? Did you take advantage of our publicity bureau and also use your local papers to put your message across?

If you did, the results prove it already. If not, did you lie down and let George do it for you? It hardly seems possible in these days of strife, not to have taken the modern weapon of business success, called publicity, and put into bold type your message of flowers for Mothers' day and reap what is yours for the effort. Let those of you who are satisfied with the results of Mothers' day advertising, and the business therefrom, make mention to those who have not as yet taken on the stride, and get into the campaign with all the energy left in you so that you all may receive the benefits.

We are just $15,000 short of our fund. Will you be among those who are liberal and progressive, or will you be in the slacker-let-the-other-fellow-do-it-class? We think everyone will want to be a part of this, our first big movement to do things. Send your proportion now to John Young, secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York, and show your loyalty to the best business on earth. We are all a part of it, but we want you to help, and help now. Will you do it?

HENRY PENN,
Chairman, National Pub. Campaign.

American Dahlia Society.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

An important meeting of the executive committee of the American Dahlia Society was held at the Grand Hotel, New York, May 16, at which President R. Vincent, Jr., James Duthie, P. W. Popp, I. S. Hendrickson, F. R. Austin and George L. Stillman were present. Previous to the meeting, the committee entertained at lunch Wm. A. Eagleson, secretary to the board of managers of the American Institute of the City of New York, where the Sep-

To Our Customers

In order that several thousand Cleveland soldiers at Camp Sherman may have a white or red carnation for Mothers' Day (Sunday, May 12)

We are Giving Our Entire Allotment to the Soldiers

We are gladly making this patriotic gift through the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., who will see that the several thousand flowers we contribute are distributed as far as they will go among Cleveland boys at Camp Sherman.

No Carnations to Sell

Carnations are scarce this year. It is impossible for us to obtain more than a few thousand and as we are giving the soldiers all we can get, we hope that our customers will accept other flowers than carnations for Mothers' Day. We believe that everyone will be willing to make this small sacrifice under the circumstances.

tember show will be held, and who reported to what extent plans had already been carried for this show. Prospects are exceedingly bright, and with the co-operation of those who intend to offer special premiums, and the growers of exhibition varieties, the 1918 show promises to be a worthy successor to those of previous years.

Treasurer Austin reported that the available funds now exceed $800. P. W. Popp announced that Mrs. Chapman, of Westerly, R. I., had offered a prize of $100 for a basket or hamper of Dahlia Newport Wonder. The offer of the Dahlia Society of California to award its gold medal at the fall show in New York was accepted with thanks.

A letter from Jos. J. Lane, a member of the executive committee, was read; in which he announced his temporary retirement from office, and from his regular occupation, preparatory to going into military service this month. It was voted to keep his name and the names of all other members of the society who were in their country's service on the active list for the period of their enlistment, remitting their dues.

A number of communications were read, among them the following: From Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, offering a silver cup for exhibit of dahlias at the fall show; from W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., offer of similar prizes to those of last year; from Wm. A. Eagleson, American Institute, information as to the progress of plans for the show; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, check for $10 for premiums; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., promising to make suggestions of interest to the society; Peter Henderson & Co., New York, subscription of $10 for premiums; J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass., $10; Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, silver and bronze medals; Henry Penn, Boston, $5 for Boston show.

On motion of I. S. Hendrickson, seconded by P. W. Popp, it was voted to issue the Bulletin on the first of September and again on the first of November, and the secretary was instructed to investigate the desirability of publishing an issue every other month during 1919.

The secretary was instructed to send a list of the special premiums received to date to members of the executive committee for consideration and final allotment.

A letter from Mr. Rathgeber was read, and President Vincent explained his award of a silver medal at the New Haven show last fall for a special exhibit and the committee voted to uphold his action.

The following judges were selected to act at the September show in New York: George H. Hale, Oyster Bay, L. I.; Prof. Geo. Fraser, Storrs, Conn.; James C. Clark, Riverton, N. J.

It was voted to offer a special prize at the fall show for best unnamed tested seedling dahlia to be shown in one vase on long stems, subject to the rules of the society, and if deemed worthy the winner to be called Dahlia J. Harrison Dick, in honor of our late secretary. No restriction is to be made as to the number of entries in this class by one exhibitor.

It was voted to submit to the annual meeting an amendment to the by-laws whereby all members paying current dues up to that time shall have their memberships extended until the first of January, 1919, and that thereafter the annual dues shall run from January 1 to December 31 of the same year. Dues paid between September 1 and December 31, 1918, shall be considered under this amendment as for the year 1919.

John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., offered $10 as special premium for the fall show.

F. R. Austin reported that he had purchased an additional $50 bond of the Third Liberty Loan, and his action was duly upheld and the purchase of one more $50 bond was authorized, making $200 that the society has invested in these bonds.

The meeting then adjourned.

J. R. LEWIS, Sec'y.

NEW ULM, MINN.—Theodore Citzow, of Frazee, Minn., is negotiating for the purchase of the Dill & Son range.

RACINE, WIS.—The enforcement of the recent fuel conservation order may make it necessary for the Mound cemetery greenhouses to close during the winter.

"No Carnations to Sell."

As noted in last week's issue, page 864, the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, O., solved the carnation problem for Mothers' day by a clever method, as shown in the advertisement of the firm reproduced herewith. The florists of that city are wide-awake and have featured this occasion until the sales are almost, if not fully, equal to those of Easter. There has been a big demand for white carnations, although their sale is not encouraged and high prices have been inevitable, with consequent dissatisfaction on the part of customers.

The advertisement, which occupied a space three columns wide by nine inches deep, approximately one-sixth of a newspaper page, the reading matter displayed to splendid advantage with liberal use of surrounding white space, was followed by others which featured $2 and $3 boxes of flowers. The firm did a splendid business, receiving many complimentary endorsements of their thoughtful gift of carnations to the soldiers. The company also operates another store under another name in the shopping center of the city, in which flowers are sold at popular prices. Here they offered quantities of carnations, which were sold to numerous customers in small lots at good prices.

Labor Problem in Greenhouses.

In your issue of April 27, page 720, S. L. Harper gives, in detail, from observations gathered in various localities, the advantages of woman labor in greenhouses. There is no question but that they are quite the equal of men in all except the heavy work that is done about greenhouses. In making and boxing cuttings and seedlings, potting up young stock, wrapping plants for shipping, disbudding carnations, cutting and grading roses, and all such work as requires nimble fingers, we fully believe the average woman to be better than the average man. A market gardener who handled considerable parsley, which was bunched by a woman, found three men whom he put at this work one day in her absence could not turn out as much as she did in the same time.

W. H. Elliott, of Boston, Mass., in speaking of labor troubles, claims that he finds women much quicker at grading and packing roses than men, and useful in other greenhouse work. All the roses of the Florex Gardens, at North Wales, Pa., are graded and packed by women, who have been found most efficient.

The Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., has a number of young women working, taking the place of men who have gone to government contract work. In making cuttings, wrapping plants, potting, assisting in picking out orders, etc., they have been found exceedingly helpful and reliable.

H. A. Dreer, Inc., at Riverton, has employed for years a number of young women in their fern range in handling the seedling ferns. When transplanted from the seed pans to the flats, the plants are very small, but the girls do this work quickly; in fact, much more so than when done by men.

No grower of plants should hesitate one minute to engage woman help, which, when broken in, will be found very dependable.

Mr. Harper cannot, however, have had much store experience. He might count on the fingers of one hand the women who have conducted retail stores and failed, but he would have to have arms as the centipede has legs, with a hand on each of them, to find fingers enough to register the successful ones. I will venture to say that there is not a city of any size in this country in which there is not at least one successful woman florist, and in a number there are several. In many retail growing establishments, the daughters of the proprietors, as they grow up, become proficient saleswomen and arrange bouquets and funeral work with the best of the men. Very many men engaged in the business, particularly where the dwelling house or home is on the premises or, in the crowded city, is over the store, have their wives and daughters to thank for their success.

It is a mistake to think that women prefer men or boys, rather than women, to wait upon them. A bright young woman, who has taste and artistic ability, is a splendid asset to any store. Women build up a clientele of customers in the store, who prefer and wait for them just the same as the men clerks. There are a number of cases where, when the head of the house has been suddenly taken away, and his affairs have been found to be in very bad shape, the widow, without resources other than the business, has, by her energy and business ability, paid off the debts and worked up a successful trade.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held at Lake Forest, Ill., May 3, President Thos. Head occupying the chair. After a short discussion, the members voted to hold a summer exhibition of flowers and vegetables about the third week in July.

The monthly essay, "Horticulture as a Profession," by John Donald, sent by the National Association of Gardeners, was read and the members accorded the writer a hearty vote of thanks for the very interesting paper.

The monthly exhibits were awarded the following points by Messrs. Fischer, F. Kuehne and E. Benson: Collection of vegetables, 95 points to J. H. Francis; Standard hydrangea, 80 points to A. Neilson; nephrolepis, 80 points to C. Wilson; vase of antirrhinum, 70 points to C. Clarke.

E. Bollinger spoke on "War Gardens," asking for the co-operation of the members of the society to make these gardens a success. Several new members were enrolled, and a very successful meeting was brought to a close at 10 p. m.

LEROY, ILL.—L. L. Fry, well known florist and one of this city's most respected residents, died May 13, following an illness of several weeks, at the age of 56 years.

OBITUARY.Maurice Hendberg.

Maurice Hendberg, the oldest, and to older citizens, the best known retail florist of Hoboken, N. J., died at his home, 415 Washington street, that city, May 17, aged 76 years. Though he turned the active management and buying over to his son, William M. Hendberg, a number of years ago, he continued in good health and kept the books up to within two weeks of his death. Notwithstanding his advanced age, he had never had occasion to wear a pair of spectacles or eye glasses.

Maurice Hendberg was born in Sweden, and came to this country in 1861. He immediately entered the Union army and fought in many battles under General Phil Kearny. He served in Company E, 2nd and 15th New Jersey regiments, which sustained so many losses that they were merged into one regiment. He was a modest and retiring man, and like many other good soldiers, was disinclined to talk much of his war record, but from comrades in arms it has been learned that he was a brave soldier. After the war he settled in Hoboken, and in 1881 established a retail business. His store soon became noted for fair dealing and fine work, a reputation that it has retained through all the years. Old time customers and friends, who had removed to New York, and to much longer distances, would go or send back to "Hendberg the Florist," when joy or grief entered their homes. He was a member of E. G. Brown Post, No. 44, G. A. R., and one time its chaplain, and for many years had been a familiar figure in its Memorial day parades. His last public appearance was in the Third Liberty Loan parade, when he rode in the carriage reserved for veterans of the Civil War. He was a member of Fraternity Lodge No. 112, Odd Fellows, Mt. Sinai Encampment, a director of the Columbia Trust Company of Hoboken, and a member of the Hoboken Swimming Club, members of which formerly rose at 4 A. M. for their morning swim.

He is survived by his son, William M., previously mentioned, two daughters, Mrs. Johanna Baker and Miss Eva Hendberg, and two grandchildren, William and Hilma Hendberg.

Funeral services were held at the family home on the evening of May 19, Rev. Dr. H. T. Beatty, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Hoboken, which the family attends, officiating. Mr. Hendberg's request that his remains should be cremated will be complied with.

A. F. F.

Mrs. James Taplin.

Mrs. James Taplin, widow of James Taplin, well known in horticulture, and one of the most noted gardeners to come to the United States from England, passed away at her home in Maywood, N. J., May 10, at the age of 90 years, having survived her husband nearly 25 years. Surviving are four children, Wm. H. Taplin, Riverton, N. J.; James S. Taplin, of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Mrs. Emily Louise Taplin Royle and Miss Susan Mary Taplin of Maywood. She had lived to see six generations of her family.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—C. H. Bookedis has disposed of his interest in the Claypool Flower Shop and will leave shortly for Chicago.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—W. L. Cukerski has succeeded to the Hanna & Smith flower store and will conduct it under the name of Grand Rapids Floral Co.

EASTER next year falls on April 20, three weeks later than in 1918.

DON'T waste greenhouse space, fuel, water and care on unprofitable plants.

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The phenomenal attendance at the recent New York flower show, in spite of wartime conditions, and a realization of the good accomplished by flowers are said to have created a favorable impression for the industry as regards the importance of seeds and bulbs among some of the new government officials.

Coal Conference at Washington.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, has arranged for the appearance of a delegation of florists before the fuel administration at Washington, D. C., May 27, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., for a hearing upon the various phases of the fuel conservation order. This will be an opportunity for any florist who is in doubt upon any point in regard to his course of action under the order, to arrive at a definite understanding. All florists wishing to join the delegation, are invited to meet at Mr. Gude's office, 1214 F street, N. W., Washington, at 9:30 A. M. on that day, and proceed in a body to the offices of the fuel administration.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

GARDEN INSPECTION DATE ADVANCED

On account of the advanced condition of the roses and a coincident meeting of the trade at the capital, the time for holding the meeting of the American Rose Society and the opening of the Washington rose garden at Arlington has been changed from June 3 to May 27. All visitors are requested to meet at the office of Gude Bros. Co., 1214 F. street, N. W., Washington, D. C., at 11 A. M., for the opening and inspection of the national rose test garden, in charge of the department of agriculture, at the Arlington Farms, directly across the Potomac. It is proposed that all visitors arrange to lunch together, probably at the New Ebbitt House.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that as no objection has been filed against the registration of Nephrolepis Anthony Wayne, by Lanternier, Florist, Fort Wayne, Ind., same becomes complete.

AERO MAIL CARRIES S. A. F. GREETINGS.

The following letters were exchanged between the Washington representative of the society, Wm. F. Gude, and the secretary by way of the first mail of the new aero-service of the United States postal service:

Washington, D. C., May 15, 1918.

John Young Sec. S. A. F.,
1170 Broadway, New York.

Just a word of greeting from the Washington representative with the hope that this communication will reach you by the first delivery via air route, which is emblematic of the progressiveness of our great country, signifying speed, activity and force. And as our organization is national in character may we gather inspiration from this new achievement, and may we encourage "Uncle Sam" by pushing our business and profession to the front for the betterment of mankind, and particularly for the citizens of the United States of America.

With best wishes and kindest regards, I am,

WM. F. GUDE.

New York, May 15, 1918.

Wm. F. Gude,
Washington, D. C.:
Appreciating the value of the new aeroplane mail service between New York and Washington this day inaugurated, I take the opportunity to tender to you by the first aero mail my congratulations on the establishment of a service which must necessarily be of benefit to florists, both as regards the exchange of official communications, and the providing of a means for quick delivery of flowers in three of our greatest cities. It is my hope and expectation that this service will evolve into one of incalculable benefit for American commerce.

With kindest regards, believe me,
JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

How to Succeed.

It is an old saying that "a man gets all that is coming to him in this world." If he sets his heart on any particular achievement, and will concentrate and work with intelligence and perseverance, he is pretty sure to win out. It is seldom indeed that anything worth while is accomplished without hard work. Successful men are often pointed out as being lucky, everything seeming to come their way. If the truth were known, however, the results achieved were the culmination of well laid plans, due to foresight and knowledge, gained by close attention to business.

The florist who wants to build up a good business must work to that end with the best that is in him. He must be always on the job—alert, active, ready for the many opportunities that are always presenting themselves to the man on the lookout. The inviting shop creates business, so make and keep the store always at its best, filled with seasonable and select stock. Retail florists, prominent today in every large community, have attained their positions by just such methods.

"Concentrate on the essentials," should be the slogan. Determine the essentials in your particular case, and let no side issues swerve you from working them out.

Thompson Carnation Co.

In accordance with notice filed by John T. Clyne, trustee for the bankrupt J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., the greenhouses, all equipment, dwellings, office furniture and fixtures, and all personal assets of the company will be sold at public auction on the premises at 1:30 p. m., June 1, for cash to the highest bidder, the sale to be made subject to the approval of the court. As the establishment has been appraised at $23,516 and the liabilities amount to something more than $18,000, not including costs of bankruptcy, it is hoped that enough will be realized from the sale to take care of practically all of the indebtedness.

Licenses for Small Shipments Revoked.

The War Trade Board authorizes the following:

The general license heretofore issued covering the importation of all commodities under $100 value is hereby revoked as to all articles on restricted lists or any supplements thereto as to shipments made after May 10, 1918. The general license covering the importation of all commodities under $100 value is still effective as to the importation of commodities not on restricted lists or any supplements thereto.

Bribery in Commerce.

A communication urging the enactment of a sufficient law striking at commercial bribery has been sent to both branches of Congress by the federal trade commission.

WAR CONDITIONS

Of Supply and Demand

While there is no doubt the demand for spring bedding and other decorative plants and bulbs will be materially curtailed by the war garden movement, we believe this condition will be fully counterbalanced by the prosperity in the south and the effects of the coal shortage on the greenhouse men of the west, north and east, placing in the market for stock a large number of new buyers not familiar with the sources of supply.

Most of these buyers can be reached at small cost by advertising in The American Florist, and we feel that it will be greatly to your advantage to start this campaign with an advertisement in our columns.

Make Your Spring Drive NOW.

St. Louis, Mo.

DEMAND SLACKENS; SUPPLY INCREASES.

The market during the past week slowed up somewhat with a slight increase in supply of stock. A few days of hot weather also had a tendency to deteriorate stock, particularly sweet peas and carnations. Both were plentiful, and considering the quality moved very well. Roses show poor color, but otherwise are of good quality and plentiful. American Beauties have no call. Long stock is sold at bargain prices to unload the market. They have lost their prestige with the coming of Russell and the uncertain supply. Gladioli are coming better and of extra good quality. Lilies and lily of the valley just about supply the demand. Outdoor stock of all kinds is coming in good supply. Peonies will be a glut in a few days, with a continuance of warm weather. Greens of all kinds equal the demand.

NOTES.

The florists' club held its May meeting at the wholesale house of Wm. C. Smith last Thursday. The meeting was poorly attended, few of the growers being able to get away during the planting season. In the absence of President Bourdet, Past-President Fillmore occupied the chair. Matters coming up for discussion were the coming S. A. F. convention, and the coal problem confronting the florists the coming winter. All the growers present stated they were arranging their business to meet the fuel order, confining their coal consumption to 50 per cent of the usual supply.

Wm. J. Wright, on Florissant avenue, has opened up a new store. Everything looks spick and span with new fixtures and new stock, and he has one of the prettiest stores on the north side. Mr. Wright has been in business on the north end for three years and has made a splendid success of it.

All the plantmen report a big trade. For a while things were at a standstill on account of the weather, but now they are moving double quick. The cry all over is, "If we only had more help."

W. A. Rowe's party May 18 was a big success. A couple of hundred friends of Mr. Rowe in the trade had a good time on him. Incidentally, they celebrated Frank Windler's birthday.

The florists' publicity committee is getting ready for their campaign to increase sales for Memorial day. They should be credited with some of the success of the Mothers' day business.

The opening of the new offices and banking rooms of the Mercantile Trust Co. provided great quantities of work for the retailer the past week. This was a little flower show in itself.

The retail florists' association meeting has been postponed to May 26.

HEAVY SUPPLY AND PRICES FALL.

Almost all growers are cutting heavily on roses and carnations. The result is the market has received so much stock that prices have suffered considerably. Quite a difference from a week ago. There is very little business of any kind, and stock has piled up so that the wholesale houses cannot move it all. It is the first real glut since the fall of 1917. Roses are sold at ridiculously low figures, and the fakirs have a harvest. The same is true of carnations, sweet peas, yellow daisies and American Beauties. Sweet peas will soon be off the market, as they will not ship this warm weather. Some peonies are seen but have little call. The local crop will be in just right for Memorial day. If they are on the market, there will be very little call for other flowers, as the people would rather buy them than anything else, for they last longer. There are a lot of vegetable plants being sold by the florists this year. Bedding stock of all kinds is very scarce and in heavy demand.

NOTES.

H. L. Thompson, of Rochester, Pa., donated his store and over 2,000 flowers for a Red Cross benefit, May 18. The ladies of the city unit sold all the flowers on hand and realized over $75 from their sale.

The Zieger Co. had some very elaborate decorations in the lobby of the Grand Opera House during past two weeks, using fine plants and quantities of cut flowers.

BUSINESS IS FAIR.

Summer weather during the past two weeks has made some changes in the quality and quantity of stock in this market. Sweet peas are abundant and fair in quality, consequently there is a glut in this item. Roses are plentiful and there is a fair supply of carnations of good quality which are moving at low figures. Darwin tulips are perfect as to flower, color and stem, favored by the weather they require. Business is fair but nothing unusual.

NOTES.

The success of the florists' section in the Liberty Loan campaign has been a matter of pardonable pride and now the Red Cross committee, captained by Robert Scott, is continuing the good work. It is needless to say that the florists will again exceed their quota. All of the downtown shops have a basket for money and huge vases of flowers with signs reading, "Take a flower and drop a coin for the Red Cross," placed outside the stores, and they attract many contributions.

Those in charge of the greenhouses are very busy with cemetery vases for Memorial day, after which will come the veranda boxes and garden work which will continue until July 1. Many of the gardens that were turned over to vegetables last year will in part be reserved for flowers, especially where gardening did not prove a success.

The above named society held an exhibition in the Museum building, Bronx park, May 11-12. The best features was an exhibit of flowering shrubs and trees by T. A. Havemeyer, Glen Head, N. Y., first prize and an exhibit of many vases of tulips by P. W. Popp, gardener to Mrs. H. Darlington, Mamaronek, N. Y., which took first prize and a silver medal. The most noteworthy features of the Havemeyer exhibit were particularly fine varieties of lilac. Of the purple, we noticed the following: Mme. Morel, Negro, Duc de Massa, President Viger, and Gilbert; of white, Vestale. For 12 vases of orchids, six species, James Stuart, gardener to Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaronek, N. Y., took first prize. Mrs. F. W. Chapin, Flushing, N. Y., won a first prize for tulips; James Lenane, Pelham Park, N. Y., for shrubs and trees, second; A. J. Paul, Palisade Park, N. J., special mention for iris. A. F. F.

MEMORIAL DAY OUTLOOK GOOD.

Trade the past week has been brisk. Stock of all kinds is still plentiful, and the demand equal to the supply. Roses are coming in very fast, and there have been some very heavy cuts of carnations in this market the past few days. Stock now looks well for Memorial day, and from the present outlook it should be in good demand. While there will be plenty of almost everything, geraniums may be a little scarce.

NOTES.

After an existence of nearly 25 years, the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island has decided to disband, owing to lack of interest.

Joseph Koppleman is cutting some excellent roses and they clean out every day.

Harry Oakley, has opened a store on Mathewson street, and is doing well.

Eugene Appleton, of Broadway, has sold out his business.

H. C. Neubrand was in town the past week. H. A. T.

SUPPLY BIG AND MOVEMENT LIMITED.

The market is practically glutted with stock, the result of heavy receipts which an even fair demand fails to move. It is believed that the Memorial day offerings will be sufficient for all needs. Roses are very plentiful and the same may be said of carnations. Peonies are also coming in strong and there is a fair supply of sweet peas. Easter lilies are more plentiful than for several weeks past and callas and rubrums are offered in fair quantities. Excellent snapdragons may also be had. Other offerings include cape jasmines, orchids, cornflowers and pansies.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger has been receiving shipments of excellent carnations, particularly his new red, Radium.

C. E. Critchell is experiencing an unusually brisk call for wire hanging baskets and green sheet moss.

L. H. Kyrk is finding a ready sale of his offerings of cornflowers from Geo. Klothe's establishment.

ONE of the best investments the people of the United States have made is the generous support given the American Red Cross in the last twelve months. Poor old suffering Europe today knows us as a great-hearted nation because of the magnificent work accomplished by our Red Cross over there. And for that, they will never forget us. Soon again we shall be asked by the organization for another $100,000,000 that this labor may be continued. We must see that the measure is filled to overflowing. —Just one more little individual sacrifice for the cause of humanity.

PLANT SALES VERY BRISK.

The plant trade is booming and everyone who has stock to sell—amateur and professional—is doing a good business. Prices are excellent and the purchaser finds that plants have advanced from 20 to 50 per cent, but then he is obliged to have them and so the trade goes on. The demand in cut flowers, too, is brisk and trade has been very good. Roses are coming in nicely and carnations are still doing well, while lilies, lily of the valley and all kinds of odds and ends, like sweet peas, gaillardias, snapdragons, digitalis, canterbury bells and peonies now nearing a grand finale, meet with ready sale. Such plants as the pot hydrangeas are very plentiful, beautiful and much in demand. The commencement season is now on in full force, and school entertainments, both public and private, and college functions are of daily occurrence, and make a fine trade for everybody, for no little musical affair with limited pupils is so poor that flowers must not be had for every performance. Corsage bouquets for these affairs, too, are very popular. A very attractive corsage at one of the florists yet simple, was made of Sweetheart roses and orchids. The price was $5. The commencements, too, bring many decoration orders for which the blooming hydrangeas come in nicely. The public school, with its one hundred and fifty or two hundred graduates, usually has a class flower, and every girl is expected to have a dozen or more roses, while the boys are satisfied with one single bud. The custom of presenting flowers over the footlights has been done away with, but dozens of baskets are still sent and bring a good profit to the dealer. As Memorial day this year is to be given unusual prominence, there will be many flowers used in the decorations of the cemeteries, though the day is to be one of fasting and prayer. There is a very large national cemetery here and also a Confederate cemetery and the Memorial day for both will be on the same day, which has not been customary heretofore.

NOTES.

Mothers' day proved to be a happy surprise to the floral world and was a close resemblance to Christmas day, in the demand and the variety of flowers sold. Not only were the red and white carnations in evidence, but all kinds of flowers and plants were sold. The latter, in fact, was very much in demand and there was a pretty and abundant supply on hand to meet the call. Hydrangeas and pot lilies were easily the favorites. The day was more generally observed than ever before, and attention was more largely called to it beforehand, so that the spirit of the day more fully possessed every one. In this city it was more noticeable from the fact that only on Saturday morning a bereaved mother was called upon to lay away one of her sons who was killed at Fort Worth, Tex., by the explosion of a gun at that place, which news has just been flashed over the country. The universal sympathy for motherhood and the sacrifice she is called upon to make at this time boosted the day into one of memorable prominence. Display advertisements in the daily papers, special leaders concerning the day, and the president's and governor's proclamation have all served to bring out another day full of beautiful sentiment. Funeral work continues good, and there is a daily clean up of nearly all kinds of flowers. The supply has been excellent and some novelties have been noted, particularly canterbury bells and digitalis, both pot grown and cut flowers. Lily of the valley seems to be plentiful and roses are coming in much better. Sweet peas are blooming profusely, even private gardens having them in abundance, and peonies are still in profuse flower. Memorial day does not create much stir among the florists. Nature provides all the flowers that are used or necessary on the outside. Most of the early spring blossoms, jonquils, hyacinths, snowballs, lilacs, syringas, spiræas, weigelas and peonies have bloomed and gone. The spring blooming roses have also had their day and will be entirely gone by May 30. There is some little trade, however, that comes to the florists in the shape of United States flags made of immortelles and the red and white roses; also, red and white carnations are much in evidence.

The consternation caused by the order to conserve coal, and to allow only 50 per cent of the supply, has caused all the florists to buy in their winter's supply now when it can be hauled and they can get their full supply and most of the growers have already put in their coal. The banks have been very liberal advancing the money, where it was not convenient to pay on delivery.

There are no social functions but the boys and the girls, where there are any boys left, manage to get a good time out of life, and as Joys advertisement says, they "Say it with Flowers," and the florist is the beneficiary.

STOCK IS PLENTIFUL.

Stock is plentiful at this writing and is obtainable in large lots at very reasonable prices. Business has been rather quiet owing to the extremely warm weather but is gradually showing signs of improvement and a decided change for the better may be expected before the week is over. Roses are in large supply in all the varieties grown for this market particularly Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia, Sunburst, Milady, Richmond, Champ Weiland, Mrs. Aaron Ward, American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell. Mrs. George Shawyer, Hadley, Double White Killarney, Stanley, Tipperary, Francis Scott Key, Montrose, Fireflame, and Columbia are included in the shipments not to mention the miniature varieties, Elgar, Baby Doll, Cecile Brunner and Nesbit. Carnations are not bringing very high prices and are being sold in quantity at bargain quotations. Lilies and callas are good property and are none too plentiful. Lily of the valley is moving well considering the present market conditions and there is seldom a surplus. Sweet peas are very plentiful but move satisfactorily considering the large quantity of other stock offered. Orchids, gardenias, cape jasmines, daisies, calendulas, lilac, tulips, jonquils, snapdragons, daffodils, pansies, stocks, freesias, narcissi and other miscellaneous stock is to be had in large supply. Peonies are arriving in large quantities and will be in heavy supply for Memorial day. The peonies seen in this market this week are exceptionally fine and this item will be a big factor for several weeks to come. tinues warm but the receipts will not be any too large. Gladioli, local indoor stock, are quite plentiful and are selling well. Greens with the exception of smilax and adiantum are in good supply but ferns are likely to advance to near the $5 mark before the Memorial day trade is over. It is hard to size up the supply for Memorial day at this writing but if the demand is at all good this year stock in some lines will be exceptionally scarce. The Wholesale Cut Flower Association held several meetings the past week in regard to the Red Cross campaign which is now under way and is handled by practically the same people in the trade who so successfully carried on the recent Liberty Bond campaign in division 19. Every man woman and child in the florist business should subscribe as much as he or she can to this worthy cause through the trade as quickly as possible for the drive is nearly over and every dollar is needed. N. J. Wietor is in charge of the wholesale florists' and growers' campaign and urgently requests that everyone subscribe as soon as possible so get busy and do your bit. There is no organization more entitled to your support than the American Red Cross Society and the writer will venture to say that when the final returns are in it will be found that the trade has again gone over the top notwithstanding that the war has affected their line of business considerably.

The Bohannon Floral Co. will donate its store and stock to the use of the Red Cross on Friday, May 24. Red Cross workers will have charge of the store and the gross receipts from all the flowers they sell will go to the Red Cross war fund.

The retail seedsmen are all working to capacity, the demand for vegetable and other spring plants strong.

A. Lange has a handsome Red Cross emblem of red and white carnations in his window this week.

A. E. Turner and R. E. Dodge, of Mosinee, Wis., called on the trade here this week.

The new crop Michigan cut ferns is two weeks earlier than usual this year.

J. A. Budlong is showing a good supply of fancy iris and lupines.

The George Wittbold Co. has lost a number of valuable men at its Edgebrook greenhouses the past few weeks through the draft, including a cyclamen grower whom Louis Wittbold is finding it difficult to replace. Other greenhouse establishments are experiencing the same trouble, which means that the help problem is becoming as serious, if not more so, than the coal question.

Lester Cook, with the A. L. Randall Co., has enlisted in the navy. George Haase and Max Schilz, also with this firm, will join the national army this week. Mr. Schilz was called sooner than he expected, consequently he did not have time to say good-bye to all of his customers so he has asked the writer to do so through the columns of THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

Zech & Mann are handling a good supply of spring blooming sweet peas and Darwin tulips, in addition to a complete line of all other seasonable stock. Allie Zech received word this week that Jack Byers, one of Zech & Mann's employees, who is now with the colors, has embarked and is on his way to somewhere "over there."

Poehlmann Bros. Co's. supply department is having a brisk call for made-up wreaths for Memorial day as well as accessories for weddings and commencements. Phil Weinberg of the cut flower department has been drafted and expects to be called for service this week.

August Barnett, with Erne & Company, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his brother-in-law, J. Kwidzinski, whose death occurred at Camp Upton, N. Y., last week from injuries sustained in a railroad wreck.

H. E. Philpott was called to Victoria, B. C., this week by the serious illness of Mrs. Philpott, who reached there recently from California where she had been for several months for the benefit of her health.

Peter Reinberg is having a good call for Mrs. Chas. Russell and Champ Weiland roses which he is cutting in large supply in addition to all the other leading varieties.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting heavily in roses in all the varieties that they grow not to mention carnations of which Belle Washburn is the best seller.

Erne & Company are featuring a large quantity of miniature gladioli which are moving well considering the large quantity of stock offered in this market.

A. Lange, well-known East Madison street florist, has added another star in his service flag in honor of Herbert Schneider, who has enlisted in the navy.

Percy Jones, Inc., reports business as good considering the general market conditions with the prospects unusually bright for Memorial day.

Tom Hunt, younger brother of Ed. Hunt who enlisted in the navy recently, is now with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

Mangel, the Palmer House florist, had the order for the casket cover consisting of roses and orchids for the Kohlsaat funeral.

Harry Gardiner, of A. T. Pyfer & Co., who is in class 1-A of the draft, expects to be called to the colors in the near future.

E. J. Delaney with the Fleischman Floral Co. will leave for Camp Grant this week with the drafted men from his district.

The Bismarck hotel where the florists' club holds its monthly meetings is no more—it has become the Hotel Randolph.

O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., is suffering from blood poisoning as a result of a scratch from a rose thorn.

William Kaspar, brother of George Kaspar of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., who is with the colors, is home on a furlough.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are handling a fine grade of peonies which will be in large supply with them for Memorial day.

William Spandikow, grower for Frank Schramm at Crystal Lake, visited friends here this week.

Walter Niel, brother of Vincent Niel of the American Bulb Co., is with the regulars at Waco, Tex.

John Brodbeck, son of Phil Brodbeck, Evanston, is with the national army at Rockford.

John Alles, son of Gus Alles of Wieter Bros., has been drafted for military service.

Mrs. A. L. Vaughan is recovering from an operation at the West Suburban hospital.

Sigmund Misciewicz now with the colors has arrived safely in France.

Visitors: John Fuhlbrugge, of the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O.; C. H. Bookedis, Indianapolis, Ind.

Wholesale Cut Flowers and Supplies 30 E. Randolph St., CHICAGO, ILL.

St. Paul, Minn.

MOTHERS' DAY CLEANS UP EVERYTHING.

Conditions during the past week found the retailers just as busy as before Mothers' day, which completely cleared this market. The writer has been in the Twin Cities the past 10 years, but never on any holiday has the supply of cut flowers been exhausted as it was for this occasion. Not a single flower did the retailers have to sell Sunday and naturally it required several days to get the stock of flowers up to the usual supply, the growers having cut close. Toward the last of the week, stock of all kinds was brought into this market in large quantities and at the present writing the supply is heavier than the demand, but no doubt as Memorial day approaches there will be a tightening up. The condition of stock is good and Darwin tulips are coming in rapidly and fill in well for sick room flowers. Funeral work is exceptionally heavy and general business has showed no decrease. Stores handling seeds and garden accessories report business good. Growers of bedding stock are now starting their season's work, and from present indications, there will be no over supply of bedding plants. The prices of all kinds have been advanced to meet the present increased cost of production.

NOTES.

Holm & Olson have recently added to their force, James Sonden, for a number of years in charge of the J. J. Le Boriis greenhouses at Duluth, Minn. Mr. Sonden, before going to Duluth, had been in the Twin Cities for the past 20 years. He has succeeded Wm. Tricker as superintendent of the greenhouses. Carl Johnson, formerly in charge of Power's flower department, Minneapolis, is also with Holm & Olson in the shipping department.

Fred Topel reports his business has doubled the past year and his place has the aspect of an extremely busy store. Wm. Topel, formerly of L. S. Donaldson Co., Minneapolis, is at present helping his brother, Fred, through the spring rush.

Some of the stores have put in displays for the Red Cross drive this week. Among them is Holm & Olson with one window devoted entirely to the Red Cross.

J. Christensen is cutting some fine Ophelias, and is well satisfied with results obtained this season.

LIGHT SUPPLY AND GOOD PRICES.

Due to the great demand up to the last minute for Mothers' day, most growers cut their stock very tight, consequently the receipts the forepart of the week were so light that all stock still brought good prices. Numerous orders for funeral work, including a large share for Dr. Louis F. Frank, a local physician of national reputation, who was buried May 13, took care of all that came in. On Thursday, the weather again became extremely warm, and with it the increased cut of all lines. Strange to say, the demand slackened up, also with the result that prices took a decided drop. From present indications, there will be an ample supply for the Memorial day business unless very unfavorable weather conditions prevail in the mean time.

NOTES.

Henry J. Benz, a Milwaukee boy, who got his start in the flower business at the Holton & Hunkel Co's. wholesale rooms a few years ago, but of late in business for himself under the name of Rehl & Benz at Racine, Wis., expects to join the colors the latter part of this month. Julius Newbeck, for many years with the M. A. McKenney Co., as designer and decorator, will look after Henry's affairs during his absence. He was good natured and made many friends among the younger set.

Fred Bliese, proprietor of the Waukesha Floral Co., who was a visitor last week, said that they expected business for Mothers' day to come up to that of the past Easter, but to their great surprise it was far better, and that is going some for the Easter trade was the best ever.

The rain and hail storm which passed over our city, May 19, according to reports did damage to the amount of $400 to Fred Kaiser's greenhouses on the south side. Apparently the most hail fell on the south side, the storm traveling from southwest to northeast.

Mrs. Ella V. Kitzerow, who opened a flower store at 38th and Lisbon avenue under the name of Miss Ella Voelze in the spring of 1915, sold all the stock and fixtures and discontinued business, May 18.

The A. T. Kellner Co., who had the decoration and the arranging of the flowers at the home of the late Dr. Frank, comment on the numerous large and artistic sprays and designs.

The Edlefsen-Leideger Co. had the family order for the Dr. Frank funeral, which consisted of a casket cover of greens, orchids and lily of the valley.

NOTES.

This thriving city of between 50,000 and 60,000 inhabitants, which has as its main support the immense smelters of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co., boasts of a number of good florists' establishments, several with attractive downtown stores in connection with well conducted ranges. Among these may be mentioned G. Fleischer and the Bolt Floral Co. The former establishment, now in existence 25 years, is the oldest and largest in the city, covering an entire block. Mr. Fleischer is very successful with roses and carnations, especially since his son, Waldemar, who has spent considerable time in large growing establishments in the east, took charge of the greenhouses. The Bolt Floral Co. also has an extensive range on North Grand avenue.

George Bolt, Sr., has for many years enjoyed the reputation of a successful business man in this community, and, while his activities in the florists' sphere date from more recent years, his establishment has shown a healthy growth. His specialties are sweet peas and antirrhinums. In South Pueblo, the well kept range of Oscar Tweed, as well as that of J. Wallace, on the East Pueblo plains, both do an excellent business.

Two well kept estates, namely, those of M. D. Thatcher, in charge of Charles Mann, and of J. A. Thatcher, with Jacob Pistorius as gardener, are at all times well stocked, the plants showing careful culture, while at the city's greenhouses, which have been in charge of George Lane for 15 years, the extensive park system's requirements are well looked after.

The local craft are banded together in the Park and Greenhouse Employees' Union, No. 15,654, having for its object the mutual help of its members, together with social features that make it an interesting organization.

BUSINESS UNUSUALLY GOOD.

Mothers' day surely holds its place as one of the four heavy days of the year, crowding Easter very closely, and still room to grow. The carnation idea is still in the minds of many, and of course this flower had the most calls, with an unfilled demand for red and pink, and nearly enough white to go 'round, except that hundred lot orders were turned down in most cases to help out the counter trade. Roses moved well, shorts selling for 10 cents each. Better stock up to fancy grades brought from $1.50 to $5.00 per dozen. American Beauties $6.00 to $12.00 per dozen. The first peonies and cape jessamines arrived just in time, and were soon lost among their friends. Plant sales were good, ranging from the 20-cent geranium up to the well finished hydrangea. Made-up plant baskets sold well in the moderately priced grade—$5 and less. Many of these, filled with geraniums, vinca, and other spring stock, were "sent to mother" with the idea of practical adaptability for planting into her porch box, etc. "Father" and the kiddies made many such deals, and father may find his way into the flower shop again, now that flowers are become a family matter. The volume of business was probably 20 per cent heavier than for Mothers' day last year, with stock in general in almost adequate supply, or at least in quantity equal to the capacity of the store forces. The month of April showed a good volume of business, and, without Easter, will total about as great as April of last year, which included that big day.

NOTES.

W. H. Culp & Co. closed their doors Saturday p. m. for an hour and a half to enable the force to straighten up stock and clear the decks for further action. The waiting crowd nearly blocked the sidewalk.

Frank Mueller, chief mogul in the order department for Charles P. Mueller, says Mothers' day reached almost the limit of endurance and capacity. Their carnations were in fine crop.

C. A. Rose, the dean of the craft in Wichita, was ready to cry "enough" on Sunday morning.

W. M. Reid, of the A. L. Randall Company, Chicago, was a visitor May 13.

F. Kuechenmeister cleaned up nicely on a heavy cut of white carnations.

WHOLESALE BUSY.

Business was extremely quiet during the past week, which allowed the storekeepers to prepare for the Memorial day rush and save a few sleepless nights. Flowers have been reasonable in price, but manage to clean up each day, so there is no surplus on the market. The wholesale houses are the busiest of all stores, working night and day, trying to keep ahead of the holiday orders. Primulas and Francis King and America gladioli are arriving in abundance and selling at $1.50 and $2 a dozen. Indoor sweet peas are about at their end, and what are arriving are short stemmed and poor. Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride gladioli are arriving in large numbers and selling at 50 cents a dozen. Larkspurs, columbines and swainsonas are selling well, and the growers have a hard time filling wants. Spanish iris is on the wane, and it will be several weeks before the outdoor stock will be ready.

NOTES.

William Nicholson is having very good success this season with Primulinus hybrid gladioli, columbines, feverfews, Spencer sweet peas, gypsophilas and carnations. He also manages to find time to play a game or two of golf each day. He is the proud owner of several trophies won during the past two years.

The New England Supply Company is having one of its best years, and the whole force is working night and day filling orders for Memorial day. This young firm has been progressing very rapidly, and two members of the firm are in Class 1A, which will surely demoralize the working force.

Paul Richwagon, of Needham, still continues to cut his new Snapdragon Virginia with good success. He also is the proud father of three husky sons who are serving the country; two are at Camp Upton and one at Camp Devens.

Penn, The Florist, who is a member of the Pilgrim Publicity Association, purchased $1,000 worth of War Saving Stamps through that organization, May 8.

Welch Bros. Co. reports business good, and is greatly pleased with the way orders are arriving for the holiday trade.

At Silverman's Flower Store business has been very good, and the outlook for Memorial day is satisfactory.

Thos. F. Galvin's two stores report a good business and anticipate a large holiday trade.

GENEROUS SUPPLY AVAILABLE.

Business has been good and the outlook for Memorial day business is the best ever, as local peonies will be available. All other outdoor stock is very much ahead of former years. Lilac is in and practically done for already. Snowballs, too, are in fine shape. The market is supplied with a great variety of all seasonable flowers, both indoor and outdoor stock being plentiful and in good form. Outdoor lily of the valley has killed the sale of the better grade. There are plenty of carnations, snapdragons, tulips, roses, sweet peas, and calandulas, and prices have dropped to a much lower level than last week. Street fakirs are again busy, nearly all the wholesalers having an oversupply of some kind of stock. Funeral work is the main avenue of disposal.

NOTES.

Albert and Geo. Wilhelmy, known as "Wilhelmy's," 3824 Lorain avenue, have dissolved partnership, both going into businesses of their own. Albert opened a new store on Clark avenue and West 25th street while George stayed at the old stand.

Geo. Schaub, of Smith & Feters Co., and Bob Rupp, of C. B. Wilhelmy's force, will enter the national forces this week. Mr. Rupp goes to the navy at Newport News.

George W. Smith, of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, left for Denver, Colo., May 20, and will return about the middle of June.

DEMAND SLOW BUT IMPROVING.

Business the past week has been seasonable, not much demand for the first few days, but winding up with a really good sale for all good stock. There are plenty of roses, but they are beginning to show the effects of the long winter campaign, which together with the hot spring days, bleaches out the color and takes away the substance. The fringed American Beauty is seen and in the special classes. This will soon have to give way to the eastern stock. There have been quantities of carnations, the surplus of which in the clean up of Friday and Saturday, went to the street men for 5 and 10 cents a bunch. Sweet peas are now between crops, the last of those in the houses being short stemmed, soft and hardly salable the second day. Growers who can contrive to have a crop in at this time, would find a ready market at good prices for their product. Lily of the valley is over for the season. There is a good supply of cattleyas, which are in good demand. Easter lilies are none too plentiful, selling up close every day. There is plenty of outside shrubbery. The first local peonies were cut May 15, a week to 10 days earlier than usual. If it were not for the cold storage facilities, it is doubtful if there would be any of this popular flower for Memorial day, but the market will be so full that it is now feared that returns will be far from satisfactory. Considerable Maryland grown stock has arrived the past week, and has not sold any too well.

SALTING CARNATIONS.

Of course it will not make any difference how much is said in protest against the holding of stock at a holiday season for high prices. It will go on just the same. There were a great many complaints about the white carnation stock of the past Mothers' day, which will interfere sadly with estimated returns. It is a great pity that damages cannot also be assessed on the growers guilty of this practice, which does so much to discredit the retail florist and his flowers.

LABOR DIFFICULTIES.

Enlistments and the draft, together with the great demand for men and women from the various industries that have large government contracts in and about this city, are making such an inroad on skilled and handy employees, that the situation is becoming serious. The Aladdin like wages offered are certainly alluring; $35 to $45 per week is quite common for unskilled labor. With a little mechanical knowledge, $50 and $60, with overtime running the amount up at times to $80 per week is not at all unusual. Fred Bender, for 25 years an employe of Robert Crawford, Joseph ("Joe"), the very capable chauffeur of the H. A. Dreer store truck, Alfred D. Hoag, an artist of the H. H. Battles force, and Wm. Mahler, from Charles Grakelow's—all left the past week for shipbuilding plants. Mr. Hoag makes the seventeenth employe of Mr. Battles who has gone in the army or for other war service since the struggle began.

large stock of roses are handled without much difficulty. A very good demand is found for Scottii ferns in six to eight-inch pots. They are putting all the money they are allowed to in diamonds, black diamonds, and will soon have their quota housed away.

The craft from out of town are here looking up peonies for Memorial day. B. S. Slinn, Albert Futterman, and A. Polykranas, of New York, were recent visitors looking the market over. Chas. E. Meehan spent the week end at his summer home in Ocean City, which will be opened up in a couple of weeks.

It is thought that quite a large delegation of the trade will go to Washington to be present at the hearing on the bulb embargo, the effort to get a greater allowance of coal for the small florist, and also attend the meeting of the American Rose Society and opening of the Arlington rose gardens.

Leo Niessen reported far too many flowers for the demand. Peonies, carnations, roses and gladioli were seen in quantity. He hoped for cool weather next week, when from advance inquiries and orders, a great business is expected.

Edward Reid spent several days the past week looking up his Pennsylvania trade, by aid of his trusty Packard. Carnations, choice roses and sweet peas were large items in this stock. Choice Kaiserin roses are also a feature.

"A fair week," was the good word of the Berger Bros. A great many peonies are expected next week, with probably low prices. Very good Maryland roses, carnations and Maryland peonies are features.

A slow week with a good windup, was the condition as Manager Miller of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange saw it. A large stock of roses and sweet peas were headliners.

"We managed to get through somehow, but it is hard work with so much stock about," said Eugene Bernheimer. Ophelia roses were a feature of his Saturday stock.

MARKET IN UNSETTLED CONDITION.

Business continued in a rather unsettled condition in the wholesale district during the past week. The Mothers' day surplus left the carnation market in a particularly bad condition, and Sam, the pushcart man, rose to the opportunity, secured an automobile, and hauled away loads of them. Of course, it is not agreeable to the proprietor of a retail store, who pays high rent and taxes, to have an automobile load of flowers peddled out within a block of his place of business, but this is a free city—particularly for fakirs—we sometimes think. On Saturday morning, May 18, there was considerable activity in the wholesale district in stocking up for Sunday. A great Red Cross parade in the afternoon made it dull for the retailers, particularly on Fifth and Madison avenues. However, the grand spectacle more than repaid for any inconvenience it may have caused. President Wilson was in the city and marched at the head of the parade from Sixty-sixth to Twenty-fifth street, arousing great enthusiasm. In the Red Cross drive of this week, the florists, from present indications will "go over the top." Relating to the arrival of stock, American Beauty roses continue plentiful, the best specials going at $25 per 100, but a large amount of fairly good stock was sold at from $12 to $15. In tea roses, a considerable amount of stock arrives in poor condition, which necessarily goes cheap, but good specials of Ophelia and roses of that class bring $8 and sometimes $10 per 100. In orchids, an excellent quality of C. gigas is now on the market, and the best have sold as high as 75 cents per flower, but the ruling price is now 50 cents. The inferior varieties have been going as low as 10 and 15 cents per flower. Peonies are now real factors of the market, though the best stock is not yet arriving. Red is selling as low as 50 cents per dozen, wholesale, but good stock of pink and white brings $1. In various minor stocks, there is an abundant supply which sells cheap.

May 20.—Business continues slow and nearly every stock is cheap. Good tea roses are holding firm, with an upward tendency for very special stock, but poor stock, of which there are quantities on the market, goes cheap.

NOTES.

Go to work or go to jail! Stripped of legal verbiage, that is the order that confronts the loafers—both rich and poor of this state; for the law, which has been made effective by the signature of the governor, provides a penalty of $100 fine or three months in jail, or both, for men convicted as idlers. Sheriffs Knott of New York county, Griffin of Kings, (Brooklyn) and Donnelly of Bronx county; also, Police Commissioner Enright, will joyfully take in hand the work of rounding up the tango lizards—a modern order of reptiles somewhat resembling the human family—and the great army of loafers who prey on the public, or their relatives.

President Vincent, of the American Dahlia Society, was in this city May 15-16, looking quite husky. The purpose of his visit was to attend the meeting of the society, held at the Hotel Grand, May 16. The society will hold an exhibition of dahlias in connection with the American Institute of this city, September 24-26; also in New Haven, with the Horticultural Society September 11-12 and in Boston, in connection with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, September 14-15. Preliminary schedules will soon be printed and distributed. George L. Stillman, of Westerly, R. I., vice-president of the society, was also in attendance.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the above society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., May 8, there being the largest attendance of the season. Arthur Smith, of Glen Cove, was elected an active member and nine petitions were received. After the business session there was a tulip show and a fine display of flowers and vegetables was also staged. John F. Johnston, J. W. Everitt and Robert Marshall acted as judges and the awards were as follows: Twenty-four pansies, Thos. Twigg, first; vase of bulbous flowers, Frank Petroccia, first; also, cultural certificate for bunch of asparagus, a like honor being also awarded to Jos. Mastraoni. Ed. Harris captured first honors for a collection of Darwis tulips, six varieties, three blooms of each, while Thomas Twigg was first for six red and six pink. James McDonald was first with a collection of Cottage tulips, three varieties, three of each and 12 mixed. A very interesting essay was read by Sam. J. Trepass on "Horticulture as a Profession," written by John Donald, of Massachusetts, and a vote of thanks was ordered sent to the author. M. C. Ebel was present and spoke a few words regarding the activities of the National Association of Gardeners. A short discussion followed, after which Mr. Ebel was given a vote of thanks. The next meeting will be held June 12 and will be known as "Rose night."

Henry Weissman, proprietor of the House of Flowers, Main and Bridge streets, has just completed extensive improvements which make his store one of the finest in this state. He leased the adjoining store, and taking out the partition, his shop is now twice as large as formerly. With a new front, two large plate glass show windows were put in. The interior has been handsomely decorated and refurnished. He reports an excellent season, and is now doing a good business in all plants suitable for outdoor planting. In designing and decorating, he is a first class artist.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

May 16 was designated by the programme committee as "Fuel Night" and about three-fourths of the members responded by attending the meeting. Remarks were made by a number of the members, with the consensus of opinion that there was nothing to be done except to comply with the law and make the best of the situation. Some advocated the planting of chrysanthemums, and then either allowing the houses to lie idle until spring or planting them to some crop that would require little or no heat. After considerable discussion, this was pronounced as a doubtful proposition, as the likelihood was that so many would be doing this all over the country that the market for chrysanthemums would be swamped. One grower said that he had, at considerable expense, equipped his place to burn screenings and that he could not run his range excepting as a 100 per cent proposition without serious loss to his plant, which represents a big outlay of money. He did not think it a just ruling, when he had his coal in the bins and on the road that would run his place, to be allowed to burn only 50 per cent of it. Another large establishment replied to this, saying that they had found the past winter that running houses at a lowered temperature was not as serious a proposition as most people were inclined to think; that they had better carnations with a temperature of 40° the past winter than in many previous years at a temperature of 50° to 55°, the crop being a little short on production, but now making up for that end of it. They intended following the law to the letter and would plant part of the place to crops that would at least live with a temperature just high enough to prevent actual damage to the structural work of the houses by frost. The fuel saved here would be used for part of the establishment that could not be run excepting to full capacity, and in this manner they proposed to fully meet the situation without loss to the range and hoped, by careful management, to keep from any large loss in returns.

Several of the smaller growers decided not to attempt to run their places until conditions change, and it was suggested that we send a communication to Washington asking for a reconsideration, but after some discussion it was thought better to leave this in the hands of the Society of American Florists and its committee.

The feature of the programme for the next meeting is our friend, Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., with an illustrated lecture on Scotland, and arrangements are being made to have Donald Frazier, a noted Scotch singer, render a number of selections along with this lecture.

Chas. B. Herr and J. Wade Galey, of Strasburg; Ralph Hess, of Gap; Walter Denlinger, of Vintage, and Ira Landis, of Paradise, were appointed a committee to make arrangements for a picnic to take the place of the July meeting of the club at the home of B. Frank Barr, who invited us last meeting and at whose place a picnic was held several years ago. This committee will act in conjunction with the ladies' auxiliary, and we are anticipating some picnic.

Albert M. Herr, the secretary, reported having attended the meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club to get a line on parcel post shipments, and gave a short talk on the information there received.

A few of the ladies met previous to the meeting and started an auxiliary to the club, which will be completed soon, and when this is done Lancaster will be more than on the map—it will monopolize the whole geography.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Rochester, N. Y.

FAIR CALL FOLLOWS MOTHERS' DAY.

Following the Mothers' day demand which was all that could be expected, and if anything better than last year, business during the past week has only been fair, although the shops were busy on Friday, and Saturday with funeral work, and the sale of bedding plants and seedlings was also quite a factor. Large quantities of bulbous stock such as daffodils, tulips, poeticus, narcissi, etc., still hang on and are a drug on the market. Roses are overabundant and the same is true of carnations. Snapdragons, larkspurs, calendulas, etc., are of good quality. Pansies, daisies, cornflowers, outdoor lily of the valley, myosotis and sweet peas are much in demand. Calla lilies are overabundant. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are both scarce and hard to obtain.

NOTES.

The lilac display in Highland park, May 19, attracted large crowds, the collection being representative of numerous sections of the United States, as well as Great Britain and France together with numerous other shrubs and trees. Ellwanger & Barry, of this city, presented a display of nearly 100 varieties which were planted on the slopes of the park. The first display was held in 1896, and since that time hundreds of visitors from western New York have made pilgrimages on this occasion each year. There are now included in the collection over 310 varieties, said to be the largest of its kind in the world.

Kussman & Hilderbrandt have opened a retail store at East Main and Franklin streets. They have a fine line of bedding and vegetable plants and flower and vegetable seeds, and will soon handle a line of cut flowers.

In a collision that wrecked the auto of the J. B. Keller Sons and a large touring car, James Whitmore was killed and two others injured. The driver of the touring car, David Gillespie, is held for manslaughter.

The florists' association held a meeting May 13, at which the advisability of discontinuing the organization, due to lack of interest, was discussed. It was decided, however, to continue with increased vigor.

H. E. Wilson has been very busy during the past week with outdoor planting.

George B. Hart had one of the greatest Mothers' day trades in his history.

H. P. Neun and George Boucher both report good Mothers' day sales.

Chester Ament is marketing good pansies.

CLEVELAND, O.—A meeting for the purpose of reorganizing the Avenue Flower Shoppe, successor to the Schoen Floral Co., was held May 15. The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

POP CORN seed of good germination is practically unobtainable.

THE Henry Field Seed Co., Shendoah, Ia., is running a side line of flags.

ARNOLD RINGIER, Chicago, is at his desk again after a protracted attack of shingles.

A STRIKE of union teamsters at Chicago held up the seed trade for a day or two last week.

EARLY reports indicate that favorable weather is bringing corn forward with quite good field germination.

GEO. W. KERR, with W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., expects to start on a California trip this week.

MT. PLEASANT, MICH.—Harris Bros. Seed Company is reported to have placed their affairs in the hands of their creditors.

RETAIL counter trade is holding up fairly well, although it is understood that May business to date is behind that of last year.

DOYLESTOWN, PA.—Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, has been appointed justice of the peace by the governor.

THE Wholesale Seedsmen's League met in New York, May 16, routine business only being taken up. No schedule of prices could be suggested.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N. Y., has been prevented by pressure of business from making his usual California trip, but expects to leave about June 1.

MRS. GOODWIN, wife of A. H. Goodwin, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, arrived in this country recently from France and was met by Mr. Goodwin.

VISITED NEW YORK: Chas. H. Breck of Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, Boston, Mass.; A. T. Ferrell, of A. T. Ferrell & Co., Saginaw, Mich.; S. F. Leonard, of S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., and wife, Mr. Brown enroute to his western seed fields; J. Courtine, representing A. & L. Bremond, Ollioules, France.

PRESIDENT C. C. MASSIE, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., says he has not had a single day's vacation in eight years and is planning to spend a large part of the summer in California with his family.

THE stir in the print paper market keeps catalogue firms and allied tradesmen active nowadays. J. Horace McFarland, the horticultural printer of Harrisburg, Pa., and W. F. Therikildson, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., both made a trip to the Wisconsin paper mills this week to arrange for their supplies a year or more in advance.

American Seed Trade Association.

The thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association will be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 18-20. The opening session will be called to order at 10:00 o'clock a. m., the following programme having been announced: "Seed Reporting," by W. A. Wheeler, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.; "Persistent Varietal Character in Garden Vegetables," by Dr. W. W. Tracy, United States department of agriculture; Addresses by Osborn Monnett, member of the fuel conservation committee for Illinois; James A. Davis, speakers' bureau, national war savings committee of Cook county, Chicago; and R. A. Oakley, United States department of agriculture; "Community Building in War Times," by A. K. Lovrien, Agricultural Publishers' Association, Chicago.

Notice is given that an amendment to the by-laws has been filed with the secretary, permitting a change in the dues and initiation fees.

Upon order of the executive committee, the official badge this year will bear the name of the wearer instead of only the number of the firm he represents. To make this plan a success, each firm having membership in the association is urgently requested to send the name of its accredited representative not later than June 13 to Secretary A. C. Kendall, 2010 Ontario street, Cleveland, O., in order that as many badges as possible may be inscribed before the convention opens.

Hotel rates are announced as follows: Single room, with bath, $2 per day and upward; double, with bath, $3 per day and upward.

French Bulbs.

Jacques Courtine, representing Bremond Freres, Ollioules, France, who recently arrived in this country, reports the railroads still congested at the time he left the south of France, but hopes conditions will be improved when he returns which will permit bulbs to be shipped to Marseilles in the usual manner, otherwise they will have to be transported from Toulon by boat, as gasoline for motor trucks is hard to obtain. A month ago it was impossible for jobbers to obtain their usual supply of lumber for cases, also nails and strapping, owing to the inability to secure cars to carry them from the places of production to the consumers.

The crop of French bulbs seems to be normal as regards Paper White narcissus, while Roman hyacinths are decreasing in quantity every year. There were good rains in April and May, which were very beneficial. The French growers, however, do not realize what the conditions are on this side. Their information is very limited, and they appreciate only that everything is advancing in price and labor is scarce. Wine is selling at good prices, and unless the grower receives a satisfactory figure for his bulbs he will let them remain in the ground and care for his grapes.

If someone well informed tries to explain existing conditions in America, what the growers here have to contend with, such as the shortage of coal, high wages, transportation difficulties and reduced orders as the result of poor sales, the French peasant will call this nonsense, and only a way to get his bulbs at a lower price. Mr. Courtine expects, therefore, the bulb business will be reduced about 50 per cent, compared to previous years, and he fears, should the war continue in 1919, it will be entirely suspended.

The hope is expressed that with the aid of the American forces, which is greatly appreciated, just as the services rendered by the American Red Cross have been lauded, that the war will soon be won, and that this cooperation will revive and intensify the brotherly feeling in both nations.

Agricultural Act Adds Eleven Million.

The new agricultural bill reported to Congress, May 6, carries an appropriation of $11,712,283, and in addition makes available as a revolving fund during the war the $2,500,000 appropriated by the food production act for the purchase and sale of seeds to farmers for cash at cost, as well as the $4,000,000 for the same purpose appropriated by the urgency deficiency act of 1918. Included in the provisions of the bill are the following sums for the purposes indicated for 12 months:

For the prevention, control and eradication of insects and plant diseases injurious to agriculture, and the conservation and utilization of plant products, $811,300.

For co-operative agricultural extension work with the state agricultural colleges, $6,100,000.

For extending and enlarging the market news service, preventing waste of food in storage, in transit or held for sale, giving advice concerning the market movement, and inspecting and certifying perishable agricultural products, $1,685,528.

For special work in crop estimating, extending the bureau of chemistry, en-

Canned Goods Dating Advocated.

Consul Fred C. Slater reports from Sarnia, Ontario, that the principle of putting the date of canning on canned goods has been agitated in Canada of late. The public is looking for remedies to frustrate the hoarding of food. It is supposed that if the date appears on each can it will prove an incentive to dispose of them within a reasonable time.

Truck Crops Condition.

From schedule returns made to the United States department of agriculture by regular correspondents the following condition of truck crops is reported May 1: Cabbage, 61; lettuce, 82; early Irish potatoes, 76; tomatoes, 78; asparagus, 100; snap beans, 74; cucumbers, 70; green peas, 79; green peppers, 75; watermelons, 76; cantaloupes, 71; strawberries, 76.

Vegetable Markets.

According to reports of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, carlot shipments of vegetables for the period May 14-20, showed a tendency toward reduced volume in the leading lines. Shipments of old potatoes and onions are drawing to an end, and while new stock has been improving gradually, prices remain lower than last year's unusually high levels. In northern potato shipping sections, the situation is dull, though firm. New southern potatoes, chiefly Floridas, recovered to a range of $3.25-$4.25 per barrel for jobbing sales in northern markets. South Carolina Cobblers ranged $3-$3.75 f. o. b. shipping points. Shipments last year at this time were generally heavier. At Texas shipping points, the onion market weakened 10 to 15 cents. Sales in northern consuming markets also ranged weaker. The northern cabbage market improved greatly in tone with less evidence of an oversupply. For best stock prices ranged from $1.25-$1.75 per crate. Florida tomatoes advanced in shipping sections and were active at $4 per 6-basket carrier. In northern markets the range was $3-$5, offerings including considerable overripe stock. The demand was generally good.

Vegetables in Bermuda.

The acting director of agriculture, after saying that exact information regarding the probable yields of vegetables during the current season was impossible to obtain, made the following statement:

"Up to and including the shipments on February 3, green vegetables to the amount of 3,000 crates have been shipped this season. During the like period of last year 41,839 crates were shipped. It is estimated that in March and April there will be available for shipment from 44,000 to 48,000 crates of vegetables. In the corresponding months of 1916 (the figures for 1917 are not just now available) the exports of vegetables amounted to 111,530 crates. The small crop of this season is due almost entirely to inadequate shipping facilities. If better transportation accommodation is provided before the close of the season the quantity exported will be larger than the present estimates for March and April, but the exports cannot be other than the smallest during recent years."

The principal vegetable crops of Bermuda are beets, carrots, kale, lettuce and parsley. The acreage planted to these crops was considerably smaller this season than last, for the reason that at planting time great uncertainty existed as to whether there would be adequate steamship facilities for the transportation of the crops to New York. The present state of the crops is good, and with suitable weather, the vegetables ought to reach the market in good condition.

Peas—Average, all sizes, No. 2, substandard, 15 cents; average, all sizes, No. 2, standard, 22 cents; average, all sizes, No. 2, fancy, 31 cents. Tomatoes—No. 2, standard, 18 cents; No. 2½, standard, 22 cents; No. 3, standard, 27 cents; No. 3, fancy, 31 cents; No. 10, standard, 90 cents; No. 10, fancy, $1.

Mechanical Potato Planting in Scotland.

According to a recent issue of the Glasgow (Scotland) Herald, the Highland and Agricultural Society made successful trials of mechanical potato planting on a farm near Edinburgh. The serious shortage of labor, and coming as they did at the start of the potato planting season, the trials were received with special interest. Further information regarding the machines used in the trial will be given on application to the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, D. C.

"FUMIGATION of Citrus Trees" is the title of Farmers' Bulletin 923, recently issued by the United States department of agriculture.

Early-Flowering Hawthorns.

The earliest hawthorn this year to bloom was Crataegus nigra from western Europe. This is a handsome tree with pale bark and deeply lobed leaves. The flowers have 20 stamens with anthers faintly tinged with pink and are arranged in compact clusters; they are followed by handsome black shining fruits which give greater value to this tree than the flowers which are less beautiful than those of many American hawthorns. There is a large plant of Crataegus nigra in the old hawthorn collection at the end of the willow collection. Several American hawthorns of the mollis group, distinguished by their large flowers, large leaves and large scarlet fruit, have been in bloom during the past week. The most conspicuous have been C. Arnoldiana, C. mollis, C. arkansana and C. submollis. These trees have never flowered more profusely. C. Arnoldiana, which was first found growing wild in the arboretum, has been especially handsome. The fruit of this tree begins to ripen late in August or early in September and this makes C. Arnoldiana valuable also for the decoration of the summer garden. The largest plants of this tree in the arboretum are on the left-hand side of the road near the Centre street entrance. There are a number of good trees in the old crataegus collection and on the Valley road in front of the white oaks. Large plants of the other early-flowering mollis species can be seen at the South street entrance. In the crataegus collection on the eastern slope of Peter's hill many plants are already in bloom and for the next six weeks it will be possible to see in the arboretum hawthorn flowers of many native and foreign species.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 16, 1918.

Nurserymen's Market Development.

Early in January, a few nurserymen decided to make a canvass of the trade to ascertain how many firms would give financial support to a campaign, national in its scope and educational in character, to develop the market for nursery products and encourage their more general and generous use. A committee was drafted to correspond with the trade for the purpose of ascertaining the sentiment toward such a movement. The response has been prompt and generous, as indicated by the list of subscribers already secured.

The committee has limited itself to a bare statement of the general proposition; they have not tried to present any plan or to work out any details in advance, recognizing that a cut-and-dried, hand-me-down plan of campaign would be without any merit. It should be the privilege of all the subscribers to such a fund to help prepare their campaign or to pass upon it. And it is further recognized that the plan must follow a careful study of the needs of the subscribers, their identity, their location, and their equipment with relation to the entire field. Obviously, the plan cannot be made until it is determined whom it is for. A tailor might as well attempt to cut out a suit of clothes for a man he had never seen, and with whose size and shape he was unacquainted; nor would any publicity man or merchandising expert of any standing attempt to map out a plan for clients unknown.

The problem of the nurserymen is not so simple as that of the florists, who use large displays in advertising for immediate results. The work of the nurserymen must necessarily be along the lines of educational publicity or propaganda, cumulative in effect and without expectation of immediate results. For example, it is not hoped that the nurserymen's campaign can be started inside of a year at best, and conditions other than present ones must be carefully considered. The nurserymen may be said to be looking ahead some years.

DEMAND AND SUPPLY BOTH LIGHT.

There has been a big scarcity in cut flowers all last week, due to the tremendous demand on Mothers' day. The call has been light, so there was no great loss, especially during the forepart of the week. Funeral work, however, was quite heavy the latter part, including a number of casket blankets, and other large funeral pieces. The bedding plant season is in full swing, and the call is very heavy this year. Vegetable plants are going very well. All florists are preparing for Memorial day, and from the present outlook, there will be plenty of flowers with which to meet the call. Peonies will be in good supply, and greenhouse flowers will be quite plentiful.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. recently made a donation of 2,000 roses to the Red Cross, where they were sold in the Red Cross gift shop. This firm also donated thousands of roses during the Red Cross drive, through which the Red Cross plans to make $1,000. Mrs. Ruth Flick Blossom, of the Flick Floral Co. was one of the workers in the Red Cross drive. This firm had several casket blankets last week, and a large amount of other funeral work.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting some exquisite cattleyas in the gigas and Mossiae varieties. Their cut of roses is also very good. Bedding plants are about completely sold out here.

The Freese Floral Co. is having a very active sale of vegetable and bedding plants. Peonies in the pink and red varieties, the first of the season, are being shown here.

A. J. Lanternier is showing some fine sweet peas in quantity, also snapdragons and narcissi. Funeral work has been heavy here. H. K.

pointed, consisting of F. R. Pierson, Wallace Pierson, F. C. W. Brown, Irwin Bertermann, W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., and C. S. Honaker. President Totty and Secretary John Young, accompanied by William F. Gude, Washington representative of the society, headed the party, which at once proceeded to the Fuel Administration building, where, at 10 a. m., Fuel Commissioner Noyes received them and gave every attention to their requests. President Totty acted as chief spokesman, and his remarks were afterward supplemented by other members of the committee, and the situation was gone over very thoroughly and presented from every angle. The plight of the small grower was brought to the attention of the administration, which had the matter under consideration.

It was finally decided to have the committee draw up an amendment to the fuel order so that growers with 10,000 feet of glass, or less, would be allowed to purchase 40 tons of coal.
This was done, and the amendment reads as follows:

Rule 3 to be amended as follows:
"Excepting such florists whose average coal consumption during the past three years has not been in excess of 40 tons may use 100 per cent of such coal consumption. This order to apply to commercial florists only. This order shall not apply to the consumption of wood or peat which is available without railroad transportation, excepting that in such cases florists shall notify their respective state fuel administrators, by registered mail, that they are using such fuel."

Commissioner Noyes stated that he had no doubt the amendment would be made effective. The committee also obtained the concession that if wood, or fuel other than coal, could be obtained without railroad transportation growers would be allowed to burn this in addition to their 50 per cent allowance. They must, however, inform their local fuel administrators of such extra fuel. Mr. Noyes stated that it had been estimated that, due to war industries and extra shipping, it would require at least 2,000,000 tons more coal than was mined last year, and he urged all who had not secured their 50 per cent allotment to obtain it immediately. The New England states will be the most difficult to serve, and all in that section should leave no stone unturned to get their supply at once.
Many other industries, in addition to the florists, are affected, and all must adapt themselves to the conditions, conservation being necessary to speed up the production of ships, munitions and other war materials. The point is clear. We must win this war. If we do not, one's business will count for nothing.

The committee was satisfied that this was final; also that the man who attempted to burn more than the 50 per cent allowed would have cause to regret it while serving a prison term—after paying a heavy fine.

Plant Embargo Special Hearing.

WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 28.

The special hearing before the federal horticultural board in reference to the embargo on plants and nursery stock of all kinds, was held in the chapel of the Epiphany church, a splendid room for the purpose. The chairman, in opening the meeting, gave a short account of its purpose, mainly that of getting information from practical men whose business would be influenced by the action of the board in the matter. William F. Gude introduced John K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, Mass., who called attention to the fact that there were delegates in the room from more than 30 states. He referred to the work of the board, which he felt must protect the country, and even go beyond the letter of the law if necessary, but should be sure of its ground and see the actual necessity of so doing before shutting out the articles in question. He expressed the opinion that the board should send experts to Surrey, Eng., Boskoop, Holland, and to Belgium to study the conditions in those localities, which if found satisfactory would enable growers to produce azaleas, rhododendrons, boxwood and many other plants, that cannot be shipped except with balls of earth. "For the safeguarding of the country," he said, "we are with you, and will do all we can to help." With regard to apple stock and other fruit tree seedlings, these were not, it was said, grown much better in France than in the United States. Wm. Pitkin, Rochester, N. Y., spoke at length on this subject, and Dr. Fairchild of the department of agriculture described the danger of insects and disease from imported plants. A number of scientific experts from various experiment and forestry stations gave interesting and important information regarding insect pests, moths, blights and cankers of various kinds. Wallace R. Pierson spoke of the poor results obtained from American grown rose stocks, which were affected with crown gall to the extent of nearly 100 per cent, while the French stocks were practically free of this disease. J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., told of the length of time required to grow decorative plants, also bay trees, much of the latter stock handled being 20 years old.

At the adjournment of the meeting at 2 P. M., it was announced that all the information presented would be compiled and acted upon by officers of the department of agriculture, who would make the final rulings in the case, which as soon as completed, would be published.

Hearing on Oriental Bulb Embargo.

WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 28.

The hearing before the United States shipping board, to endeavor to secure a 50 per cent moderation in the embargo on bulbs from the Orient, was held in the board's building before J. W. Slocum. There were but five of the committee present, Wm. F. Gude, F. R. Pierson, C. B. Knickman, Wallace R. Pierson and Charles Schwake. Mr. Slocum outlined the great difficulty in getting sufficient ships for war service, Secretary Baker holding the board responsible for securing vessels for the transportation of men, war materials and food. Ships have also been furnished by Japan to transport wool and wheat from Australia. This had cut down their tonnage, so that all but the most essential items had to be eliminated, and that it could hardly be said that bulbs would help win the war. In France, the situation was somewhat different, as there was room available in returning vessels, which it was at times possible to devote to freight, provided it did not delay the sailings.

The matter of licenses, or permits, which issued on this side, require that the sailing time of the vessel and the size of the boxes or cases to be shipped be given, which at present it is impossible to determine, was also discussed. Wallace R. Pierson stated the case plainly, calling attention to the fact that foreign importers, being on the ground, had a great advantage over the American importers, who while willing to take their medicine, hated to drink out of the same cup with the others. He expressed the hope that the board would issue regulations in reference to importations that were equitable here and abroad and so plain that a child could understand them. The point made was new to Mr. Slocum, who said he would take the matter up at once.

Arlington Rose Garden Inspection.

The visit to the rose test garden at Arlington Farms was made May 27, the party being conveyed in automobiles, starting from the establishment of Gude Bros. Co., the ride on the government military road being a short but most enjoyable one. After an hour's delightful inspection of the many roses, the return trip was made, the route being along the Potomac river speedway, through Rock Creek park, and the beautiful grounds of the Soldiers' Home, thence into the city to the luncheon at the Ebbitt House. This was an enjoyable affair. Z. D. Blackstone, president of the florists' club, welcomed the visitors and introduced President Charles H. Totty of the Society of the American Florists, who outlined the result of the hearing before the fuel administration, adding that he felt sure the florists were 100 per cent loyal and would meet the government's requirements. Wm. F. Gude told of his efforts before the authorities in this matter, and as in other things of interest to the trade, he had at all times found the chiefs of departments big, able men, who had always met him more than half way in their efforts to be of assistance. He said that any attempt to evade the law would result disastrously, as examples would certainly be made of offenders. Dr. Corbett told of the enthusiasm for the rose, crested by the beautiful hybrids of Dr. Van Fleet, which were the bright spots of the garden, and also called attention to the immense cold storage plant in which the government is conducting experiments in retarding plant growth, the results of which would prove very useful to the trade. Wallace R. Pierson extended an invitation to visit the Hartford rose garden on a date between June 20 and 25, when the flowers in both the old section and the new addition would be at their best. Robert Pyle voiced the sentiment of the visitors in moving a vote of thanks for the splendid reception by the Washington florists, and this was passed with a will.

Climbing American Beauty.

The great majority of the roses, even of the more tender varieties, have withstood the extreme rigor of the past winter and were, with their great array of buds and flowers, at their best. With the exception of the later flowering ramblers of the Wichuriana type, the various sections were all at the height of their blooming. The ramblers, which are planted to arch the entire outside wide, grassy path of the garden, are decorative and most interesting. A mass of color that at once caught the eye were two large plants of Climbing American Beauty, which were exceptional in their wealth of flowers. This variety is certainly the best of its class. Countess M. H. Chotek is also a fine variety of this type, darker in color, but with heavier canes, and does not cover up so well. Bess Lovett is of this class—a bright, vivacious, deep pink, with perfectly formed flowers that at once attract attention. It is also a strong grower and very free. Ramblers of the Trier type were full or just past. The Trier is one of the best of its class, being a mass of flowers. Wartburg might be called a pink Trier, being so free. Rubin, a violet red, is very distinct. Other noticeable varieties were Flower of Fairfield, Oriole, Arberic Barbier, Gardenia, Zepherine Drouhin, Count Zeppelin, Tausendschon, Anna Maria, Climbing Clothilde Soupert, Climbing Hugh Dickson, and Goldfinch. Walsh's Wichuriana hybrids, Excelsa, Lady Gay, Coronation, Minnehaha, Wedding Bells, Evangeline, Mrs. M. H. Walsh, and others, were for the most part still in bud. American Pillar, very robust and full of great clusters of buds, was just opening, as was Longwood, a pink, which it closely resembles in flower and foliage. Dorothy Perkins, Crimson Rambler and others of this type were heavy with buds, but not open.

The baby ramblers are at home here, showing masses of bloom, Mrs. Cutbush being particularly fine; in fact, all in this section were at their best.

The hybrid tea section, while very interesting, is not as full or representative as it should be, so many of the varieties being killed in the winter of 1916-17. Last year's plants came through the past severe season very well and were full of bloom. White Killarney was very full of fine flowers, as was Bessie Brown, a fine white. La Tosca was very showy; also Ophelia, which was full of flowers, but lacked color. Wakefield, Christy Miller and many other favorites were doing their best.

The hybrid perpetuals could not be better. The plants are large, of compact form and covered with masses of fine flowers.

The rugosa hybrids have become too large for their beds, being a mass of interwoven foliage. With their great variety of coloring, they were full of interest to the visitor. The sweet briars, old garden favorites, are also outgrowing their quarters. This is a large collection.

From the pagoda on top of the mound a view of the entire garden is obtained, which presents a harlequin of color. The iron framework of the pagoda supports the rose, Dr. Van Fleet, which has grown vigorously, but was not open enough to be effective.

Professor F. L. Mulford is to be congratulated on the progress made here. Each year shows a substantial gain. A number of plants of new and old varieties have been set out this spring, and are making a good growth. Catalogues with the names of all the varieties in the garden, so tabulated and numbered that they can be found at once, are hung in each section, which is a great convenience to all visitors.

American Rose Society.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society was held in the office of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, May 10, 1918. A request was received from the Flower Show Association of the Main Line, Philadelphia, for one

Mr. McFarland suggested that the society should in the immediate future, prepare a rose catalogue which should include all roses in commerce and that the society should also send to its members, a manual of rose cultivation.

The following exchange of membership was voted: "That the American Rose Society extend to the International Garden Club, honorary member-

The secretary stated that at the present date there are 1,256 paid memberships and 56 life memberships, and the treasurer reported a balance on hand of $1,800.

silver and two bronze medals from the American Rose Society for their amateur rose show. The Flower Show Association of the Main Line has not affiliated with the American Rose Society for 1918. The following action was taken:

"Resolved, that in cases where there are not less than five annual members of the American Rose Society included in the membership of a local organization, the secretary may supply a set of one silver and two bronze medals for use at a rose show, provided that the judging at the show is conducted according to the rules of the American Rose Society, and provided also that $20 is paid in advance for such medals and for their engraving."

J. Horace McFarland presented a financial statement regarding the cost of the 1918 Annual. Taking into consideration the advanced cost of all material, together with the increased number of pages, the cost of the 1918 Annual compared very favorably with the cost of the previous editions. The committee voted to accept the bill of the J. Horace McFarland Company for the 1918 Annual and the treasurer was instructed to pay part of the account immediately, the remainder to be paid after the receipts for advertising have been received. The members of the committee expressed their appreciation of the splendid work Mr. McFarland has done for the society, both in editing the Annual and in advancing the scope of the work of the society, especially with amateur members. It was the general feeling that Mr. McFarland has been most liberal in donating his time for the work and it was voted that he be elected editor of the Annual for the next three years. Arrangements with the J. Horace McFarland Company for publishing the 1919 American Rose Annual were discussed, but in view of the absence of important members of the executive committee, it was decided to postpone definite action until the next meeting of the committee.

ships for the president, vice-president and editor in exchange for honorary memberships in the International Garden Club for the president and secretary of the American Rose Society and for the editor of the American Rose Annual."

It was suggested that there should be a definite campaign to get members for the American Rose Society, particularly among the nurserymen and florists and J. Horace McFarland was requested to present at the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Chicago, June 26-27, a paper on "A greater interest by the nurserymen and florists in the American Rose Society and the work that they are doing."

Soft Coal Output Increases.

The Fuel Administration, May 23, issued the following:

"The total production of bituminous coal for the week ended May 11, as reported by the United States geological survey, was 11,806,000 net tons, an average per day of 1,968,000 tons, compared with 11,554,000 tons for the week ended May 4 and a daily average for that week of 1,926,000 tons. The gain for the week of May 11 over the preceding week was 2.2 per cent. The production slightly exceeded that of the record week ended April 27.

"Throughout the week of May 4 the bituminous mines produced 75.6 per cent of their full-time output. Of the total loss 13.1 per cent was due to car shortage and 5.4 per cent to labor shortage. The loss reported from the far western fields on account of no market was less than 1 per cent.

"The most severe losses on account of car shortage are reported from the Somerset county district of Pennsylvania, where the percentage loss is given as 59.5 per cent; New River and Winding Gulf districts of West Virginia, 20.8 per cent; High Volatile fields of southern West Virginia, 16.2; Fairmont district of West Virginia, 34.5; Cumberland Piedmont, 24.8; northern and central Pennsylvania, 17.1; western Pennsylvania, 15.5; Hazard field, Kentucky, 22.1; northeastern Kentucky, 22.2; western Kentucky, 14.6; Illinois fields, 13.2; Indiana, 14.8.

"While the record for bituminous production shows a slight increase over the previous week, that for the anthracite fields shows a decrease of more than 5 per cent. During the week the shipments declined from 40,570 carloads for the week ended May 4 to 38,314 carloads for the week ended May 11."

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

In the Store.

With the warm weather setting in, and the doors open, stocks soon get dusty and will require constant watching to keep clean. Goods for certain seasons, such as red wreaths for Christmas, Valentine novelties, etc., should immediately after the occasion, if any are left, be put away carefully for next year. As the season wanes and the summer days come on, much of the choice basket and other wares should be wrapped or packed in cases or boxes, safe from dust and fly specks. Palms and ferns should be taken out frequently, at least once a week, and given a good hoseing. This takes off the dust and little colonies of red spiders which multiply rapidly in hot weather.

Keep the chute or rubbish bin cleaned out; refuse, flowers and other waste soon begin to heat and smell badly. It is very easy to let matters of this kind go too far. Waste paper and boxes should always be kept separate. A baling press for this material, while a matter of expense at first, will pay for itself in a year, in the sale of the material. If waste paper is allowed to go into the rubbish bin, it soon fills this up, and in being carted away, is an expense instead of a means of revenue.

Nice looking screen doors should now be erected. They have a cool look to them and keep out much of the dust and the flies. Doors that are well made and properly hung, will last for several years. Use the best metal netting.

The customers' card desk, or table, should receive daily attention; new blotting pads, new pens and clean stationery are much appreciated by those who have occasion to use them. A small vase or basket of flowers as an ornament is worth while.

In some stores, they change the furniture at this season; a rattan chair or two, a table, on which is a magazine or two, a porch or veranda box filled with plants, also pedestals with plants, give a summery atmosphere. The large stand for a palm or ferns, with a lamp shade for an electric light, overhead, is an efficient ornament, of which quite a number are being used for porch decoration.

Now is the time to plan the summer vacations. With the schedule prepared in advance, after a consultation with the various employees, these pleasure trips will come along automatically, the anticipation giving almost as much pleasure as the realization.

Beginning in July the custom in many shops is to let a portion of the force go alternately, or every other day, at four p. m. Those left in charge are sufficient to care for the light demands of the late afternoon, while the men relieved find this spare time very useful.

Mothers' Day Successfully Featured.

Elbert Hubbard said: "The way to have good neighbors is to be a good neighbor yourself." Everybody wants to do a good business, but some want it much more than others, judging from the efforts they put forth to invite or encourage new trade. To be able to say, "Business is fine," one must make their store a fine place for business. Bees will gather round the flowers that have honey, and customers will frequent the well stocked store, one which is inviting and always to the front with the first and best the market affords.

The live wires see the possibilities of Mothers' day, and do all they can to encourage the use of plants and flowers for this occasion. They do not stand around with a grouch and complain that "Mothers' day is no good any more; they are not going to pay $6 to $10 a hundred for white carnations that go to sleep before the day is over, and get in bad with their customers." When asked what they are doing to feature the day the reply is, "Nothing—what's the use? These extra flower days are no good, anyhow. Look at McKinley's day—it all went to nothing." Of course the business fire would not burn here; the chimney was not high enough to make it draw.

That featuring the day pays, one has only to look to the large communities of the middle west, where in such cities as Cleveland and Detroit florists feature the day in the papers, and are prepared with large stocks, both of blooming plants and cut flowers to supply the demand which they undoubtedly have built up by their progressive business methods.

A feature in Detroit this year was standard geraniums, with large crowns on a three foot stem. These were well clothed with foliage and carried from four to six good heads of bloom and a lot of buds. They were handled in some stores by the hundred pots. These were a very attractive novelty, and readily brought, with a touch of ribbon, from $4 to $5.00 each. Rambler roses were also good sellers, as well as other blooming and foliage stock. Cut flowers, also, were in great demand.

In Cleveland, the story was much the same. Plant racks or stages were put up, as at Easter, in all the stores.

Ramblers that had not made Easter, were brought in and sold well. It was a banner day in every respect.

Pittsburgh had its biggest Mothers' day. Randolph & McClements made a great hit with plant boxes. These are about 18 inches in length by four and five in width, painted in blue and other colors, and filled with small ferns and flowering begonias of the Vernon type, lantanas, etc. Artistic color effects were produced in the filling and touches of ribbon, that kept them moving almost faster than they could be arranged. Other stores were equally busy.

Now, right now, is the time to plan for next year's Mothers' day by publicity, boosting and encouraging the use of flowers through the newspapers, with educational matter followed by well worded advertising, all of which should be outlined now when the present experiences are fresh in mind.

The love of mother is no greater in Cleveland or Detroit than anywhere else in this great country, but the trade there have so featured the day, and associated the business with it, that to "Say it with Flowers" has become almost compulsory.

Funeral Flowers for Captain Resnati.

Funeral processions in honor of many notable men have, in the past, traversed Fifth avenue, New York, but in the funeral of Captain Resnati, late of the Royal Italian Flying Corps, who was killed at the Mineola, N. Y., aviation field, May 17, there were unusual—we might say spectacular features. When the remains reached the Pennsylvania station, New York, from Mineola, on the afternoon of May 21, the procession formed and moved up 32nd street to Fifth avenue, thence to St. Patrick's cathedral at 50th street, where the services were held. Two aviators, each in a giant machine, had flown from the Mineola field. As the procession was forming, like great eagles they soared in wide circles over the station, and as it moved toward the cathedral they, in turn, flew low above, occasionally dropping flowers.

Fourteen automobiles were required to convey the floral designs from the station, where by request of those in charge of the arrangements, they had all been sent. In addition, there were several fine wreaths carried by men on foot. It seemed as though the Italian societies of the city had vied with each other in the size and volume of floral tributes to their late compatriot. Practically all the blooms in commercial floriculture were represented in thousands. From boxes of loose flowers, sprays and pillows, up to wreaths and emblems 10 feet high, there was striking variety in form and color, with an appropriate blending of our own national colors and the red, white and green of Italy.

Through the Italian ambassador, the king of Italy sent a wreath. Among the societies represented, were the Sons of Italy, the Mazzini Society, the Guardia Colombo, the Italian Naval League and the Florence Association. A number of fine designs were sent by the men of our own flying fields.

PUTNAM, CONN.—C. S. Andem has discontinued the retail branch of his business and will specialize in carnations.

TORONTO, ONT.—Mothers' day business was exceptionally good, some of the stores reporting a heavier demand than at Easter.

Publicity Via Red Cross.

If the florists of the entire nation had carried out a programme of publicity in each city as the Lancaster County Florists' Association did on May 25 for the benefit of the second Red Cross war fund, a lot of the talk about flowers being non-essential would die. Mrs. Albert M. Herr conceived, and with the cooperation of the association, carried to execution the sale of donated flowers at various booths, placed at vantage points on the streets, the success being so great that our most sanguine expectations were exceeded.

The booths were decorated with Red Cross posters, and conspicuously displayed was the slogan, "Say It With Flowers." The amount of cash realized was over $700, which would have been much larger had our supply of flowers been adequate. Long before the demand was satisfied, the stock was exhausted, and repeated calls to headquarters had to be turned down.

This puts our industry—as far as Lancaster is concerned—squarely before the city authorities and officials conducting this great campaign of mercy, as no other method of advertising could do. Had each city in the United States carried to so successful an end a similar campaign, the flower industry would be so thoroughly in the limelight that the Society of American Florists committee could undoubtedly have the recently issued fuel order greatly modified at the conference of May 27.

There were other methods of raising money galore, though most of it was begging, pure and simple, while the Red Cross girls at our booths received five cents for a daisy or two sweet peas, 10 cents to 25 cents for a carnation, and 25 cents and up for roses.

florist's trade suffered somewhat. This was inevitable and was borne cheerfully, as what business they lost was in a manner their contribution to the Red Cross.

I would not wish to suggest that florists should not give cash to these campaigns, as we should give as much as it is possible for us to afford; but in addition to cash, any florist body whose members would each give a few hundred or thousand carnations, sweet peas, roses, or any small flower that will serve as a boutonniere, would be giving in a way that his dollars would be multiplied 10, or even an hundred fold. Nor should giving the flowers be the end of your efforts. That is only the beginning. There should be an efficient organization, willing and eager sales girls, runners to keep the supply equalized on the various booths, a study for the proper location for the booths, and the proper flowers for the different sections, etc. This we found very important as certain flowers as peonies, iris, etc., could not be sold in some sections nearly as well as in others. This plan of campaign, nation wide, would command the attention of all the big men and women of the entire country, and would—I firmly believe—put our industry on a basis of necessity and value as no other action or advertising could do.

If Lancaster, with 50,000 inhabitants, could raise $1,000 in this manner, and we would have gone over this had there been more stock on hand, the amount that could be raised throughout the entire country would be hundreds of thousands of dollars. Such an amount of money being raised by the unselfish efforts of this industry would likely bring much new business to the florists. Many workers for the same cause would see the value of flowers, others their beauty, and still others would buy flowers in a spirit of ARLINGTON ROSE TEST GARDEN.

The Baby Ramblers.

We did not notice any competition on the streets by other so-called non-essentials, such as confectioners offering to pin a bon bon on a man's coat, or the saloons offering to decorate him with a glass of beer, although the effects of the latter decorations were evident in the crowds. However, these and other industries were doing a fine business, but the Red Cross did not receive all the proceeds. The retail reciprocity for our unselfish efforts in helping a great cause.

And as a result, it is improbable that the fuel administration in the future will ask us to cut our business in two, or greatly restrict it to conform to the present ruling. We would be demonstrating the value of our profession to the nation in a manner that few, or no other industries could do.

New York Florists' Patriotism.

The New York Florists' Club is figuring prominently in war work, having taken Liberty Loan bonds to the amount of $10,000, and subscribed $2,000 to the American Red Cross. At its last meeting it donated an automobile for the service in France of the American Fund for French Wounded.

In addition, the club is co-operating with the National League for Women's Service in the distribution of flowers to the wounded and sick soldiers in the base hospitals in and around New York, and to those arriving at the port of New York. A committee of the club collects all the surplus flowers available from the daily flower market arrivals, cares for them properly, and puts them up in convenient packages for distribution by the ladies of the league, who have a number of motor cars at their disposal for this purpose. The slogan of the ladies having the work in hand is "Say It With Flowers," and this will appear on all the cars used in the service.

The work of the league is not confined to the neighborhood of New York, but is to go on wherever the organization has a branch or allied interests.

The Society of American Florists, through its secretary, John Young, has issued an appeal to florists at all points where there are military hospitals to donate all their spare flowers to the work.

The ladies of the league have discovered that sick soldiers greatly appreciate gifts of flowers. While there is no lack of other comforts in the hospitals, flowers until now have played no part among things calculated to give a home touch to the general surroundings.

HEAVY MEMORIAL DAY DEMAND.

Business, the past week, has been very quiet with the Red Cross drive on. The market accumulated a large surplus, and through the generosity of several of the large growers a flower day was held for the benefit of the Red Cross, on the Common. Messrs. Arnold, Evans, McAlpine, Hastings, and Sloane auctioned off flowers to the amount of $2,000. Carnations, the first of the week, sold as low as 75 cents a hundred, but Friday and Saturday took a jump to $3. Gardenias are about at their end, and the growers are planning to discontinue growing another year. Candytuft, feverfew, and stocks are arriving in good supply and a large number will be used for the holiday. Yellow marguerites are very plentiful and the best are $1 a hundred. Sweet peas are poor. Iris is fair with no demand. Roses are a drug on the market but will pick up for the holiday trade. Gladioli are arriving in large number and selling slowly. Snapdragon is about through. Easter lilies are abundant but find few buyers. Larkspur and columbine are scarce, and it would be good policy for the growers to plant some for another year, for the market cannot supply the demands.

NOTES.

Fred Pettit, salesman at Carbone's, is sporting a nice coat of tan. He spent two weeks at Cape Cod planting a garden, and his few spare moments were spent fishing, for which he holds a record.

This is one of the largest and most successful Memorial day businesses in history. Every store is rushed with heavy orders piling up and it will take many a hard day's work to fill the demands.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, is bringing to market baby gladioli such as The Bride, Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride which sell readily at 50 cents a dozen.

Wheeler & Co., orchid growers, have decided to close up four of their houses this winter. Therefore, they throw out all gardenia plants and some of their cattleyas.

Snyder Bros. are seen buying heavily each day and their large trade is receiving the finest selections of flowers in the market.

Welch Bros. Co. is having the busiest Memorial day trade and expect to go ahead of other years.

Elliott Filson, salesman for Pierce Bros., is back at the market after his auto accident.

STOCK FINEST IN YEARS.

It is seldom that this market is supplied with finer or better grown stock than is now coming in. The weather has been excellent for nearly all kinds of flowers, both under glass and outdoor stock. Roses of all kinds are in large supply. Russell is now at its best, and so is Ophelia. Radiance and Richmond are in heavy cut, but American Beauties are not over plentiful, owing to the limited planting of this old time favorite. Cecile Brunner was never in greater supply than now. The best quality of stock of this rose is from outdoors. Baby Doll is off crop at present. Among bulbous stocks, Spanish iris and gladioli are the leaders. Both of these popular flowers are being offered in various colors and of the very best quality. Quite a few peonies are coming along, especially white and pink, and are meeting with ready favor. There is still a heavy cut of giganteum, which is chiefly used for funeral work. Carnations are in large supply as is usual at this time of the year. Prices remain nominal. There has probably never been a greater selection of Spencer sweet peas to choose from than that which is now being received daily. The lavender and pink shades are the most popular, closely followed by such varieties as Barbara, Robert Sydenham and the President. The prices being received are very satisfactory. Gardenias are in large supply, and the demand is steady. Cattleyas are rather scarce and will probably be so for some time. Violets are now practically out of the market after the most successful season in years. Nearly all varieties of fruit blossoms and flowering shrubs are over also. The demand for Mothers' day was the most extensive ever experienced by the florists of this city. The attention of the public was called to this occasion by liberal advertising of most of the prominent retailers in the daily papers. The outlook for Memorial day is very encouraging, judging from the heavy amount of advance orders booked. There is a sufficient number of flowering plants on hand to supply all demands. Some grand calceolaria hybrids in pots are being shown and are meeting with ready sale. The green men have plenty of stock for all and say business is steady with the shipping call as usual.

NOTES.

Many scientists and horticulturists were present at the opening of the fourth annual wild flower show at the Hotel Vendome, San Jose, May 15. The show lasted three days and was a great success. Among the prominent speakers were Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa; Prof. L. H. Abrams, of the department of botany of Stanford University; Dr. P. E. Kennedy, of the department of botany of the University of California. The show was so arranged that it covered the flower and plant life of the whole state. The United States department of forestry made an extensive exhibit of cloth, twines and paper all made out of various kinds of plants. The government exhibit was under the direction of R. F. Hammatt and W. Maxfield of the department.

Some splendid Spencer sweet peas were shown at the last regular meeting of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society. President David V. Tuttle, who captured so many first honors at the 1917 show, exhibited many of the latest novelties, all in fine form. John M. Daly and John Aitken showed finely grown roses, as did David Bassett and David Patterson. The display at the June meeting promises to be very large and varied and will be awaited with much interest by lovers of this popular flower.

The Lynch Nursery Company, of Menlo Park, reports a heavy demand for all the newer chrysanthemum novelties. This firm, one of the largest growers in the west, has completed its plantings for the coming season. Among the newer sorts which are to have a commercial test outdoors are Nag-ir-roo, W. H. Waite, and October King. All this stock is grown under cheese cloth houses and is intended for eastern shipments.

Edwin Hoff, manager of the MacRorie-McLaren Co.'s store, on Powell street, tells us that his firm finds no difficulty in disposing of well grown stock of any description. The beautiful ericas and azaleas that this firm has on display are the product of the company's greenhouses at San Mateo. They have a very fine cut of gardenias and cattleyas, all of which find a ready market. The landscape department is still busy.

Jacques L. de Vilморin.

Eldest Son of the Late Maurice L. de Vilморin.

The Dahlia Association of California is preparing to make very extensive trials of all the newest and best dahlias at its trial grounds in San Rafael this coming season. The society proposes to hold its shows as usual, owing to the popular demand for these exhibitions. There seems to be no abatement in the popularity of this flower and the shows this coming season promise to be as fine, or better, than any preceding ones.

The sympathy of the trade goes out to Martin Poss, of San Mateo, past president of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, in the tragic death of his only daughter, Naomah. While crossing the street in front of her home, the child was struck and killed by an inter-urban electric car. A year ago little Naomah was adjudged the perfect child in a contest held in San Mateo. She was the only child of her parents.

Manager P. Vincent Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., is well satisfied with the amount of business done for Mothers' day. He says it is fast becoming one of the prominent days of the year in the florists' trade, and this year's sales show a heavy increase over those of 1917. He reports himself as well satisfied with trade conditions in general, and is planning for a banner Memorial day.

Henry Goertzhain, of the Redwood City Nursery, is sending in a very fine line of carnations to this market. His stock is always regarded as the best obtainable and commands the highest figures. He says trade is excellent at his new store on the state highway at Redwood City. He is already planting out his chrysanthemums for the coming season.

Charles Stathenback, the American Florist, has been displaying Lilium longiflorum largely the past week. He will have a large stock for Memorial day work. He is also receiving some extra fine Ophelia roses. He always carries a very large stock of flowers, plants and supplies of all kinds.

Charles Abraham, proprietor of the Western Nursery, paid a visit to the trade along the peninsula the past week. He says trade is good with him, his only difficulty being to secure experienced help. Mr. Abraham has one of the finest collections of plants in the west.

The monthly meeting of the California State Floral Society was held last Friday. The attendance was large and the final report of the spring floral show was presented. The society is in a very flourishing condition and rapidly gaining in membership.

The Shibley-Mann Co. reports having done a fine business for Mothers' day. They are receiving a very fine lot of outdoor grown Spencer sweet peas and report a steady sale for all good stock. Funeral work keeps up steadily with this firm.

William A. Leslie, who for the past year has been with Howard & Smith, of Los Angeles, is back in town for an indefinite stay. Mr. Leslie is well known to the trade for his fine work at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

George C. Roeding, president and manager of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno, is here to confer with the food administrator, as he is a member of the national board, having been appointed by President Wilson.

MARKET SUFFERS FROM OVERSUPPLY.

During the past week there have been more flowers on the market than at any corresponding period in the past four years. Business has been very slow, accounted for perhaps by the extremely warm weather. This, however, has been favorable to the plant growers who are pushing their outdoor work. Nearly all dealers are completely sold out of bedding stock. Peonies, roses, carnations and yellow daisies are flooding the market daily. The first named are about two weeks early this year, but from present indications there will be plenty to care for all Memorial day demand. There is so much stock on the market that prices will be low. On May 25, street merchants were on every corner offering flowers at low prices, but even this failed to keep the market clean. There may be a shortage before long, as American Beauties and carnations are on the down grade and will soon be over, which will be earlier than usual. There are very few wedding orders booked for June.

NOTES.

H. L. Thompson donated over 3,000 flowers for a Red Cross sale in New Brighton, May 25. The sale May 18 in his Rochester store netted the same organization over $360.

It is with deep regret that we report the death of Mrs. Katherine Jones, wife of Joseph M. Jones, who has been in business on Penn avenue for a number of years.

James Higgins, manager of the flower department of the Davis Enterprise Co., has arranged some very elaborate decorations in the Alvin theater.

G. P. Weaklen and the Arcadia Flower Store both had Red Cross sales last week and gave over $300 to the fund.

John McClements was one of the solicitors in the Red Cross campaign with good results.

OBITUARY.

Newton Henry Carpenter.

Newton Henry Carpenter, manager of the Art Institute and treasurer of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, died suddenly of heart failure at his home in Glen Ellyn, Ill., May 27, aged 65 years. Mr. Carpenter was well known to the trade in connection with the many flower shows of various organizations held at the Art Institute since the World's Fair in 1893. He was at all times the champion and friend of horticulture and floriculture, due no doubt in part to his association with Vaughan's Seed Store, where he was for a time employed in the early days of his Chicago career. Mr. Carpenter endeared himself to a host of friends in the trade by his kindly interest in their endeavors and the helping hand which never failed them in exhibition work.

Mr. Carpenter was born at Olmstead Falls, O., in 1853. He graduated from the West Point Military Academy and came to Chicago in 1876 as teacher of drawing in the Academy of Design, which after reorganization in 1881 became the Art Institute, and held the position of secretary for 35 years, the position of business manager being created for him in 1916. He was president of the American Association of Museums and of the Association of Art Museum Directors, treasurer of the American Federation of Arts, director of the Chicago Municipal Art League, and also of the Holiday House for Girls at Boulder, Colo. He is survived by a widow and daughter, his only son having died about 10 years ago.

Maurice L. de Vilmorin.

The Vilmorin family has again been sadly stricken. With Philippe's premature passing away still fresh in our memory, the sad news of the sudden death of his uncle, Maurice L. de Vilmorin, which occurred at his country seat, "Les Barres," where he went to enjoy a short rest, has reached us. He was 69 years of age. The day before he left Paris he appeared at the office of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., and seemed to be in his usual good health, although the death of his son-in-law, Captain De Lesse, which occurred a short time ago, from disease contracted at the front, had affected him to a great degree. On April 20, after having dined with his family, the deceased retired, as was his custom, to his library to attend to his correspondence. No one gave the matter any thought until several hours later, when, upon entering the room, his daughter found he had died from hemorrhage.

Maurice L. de Vilmorin, a brother of the late Henry de Vilmorin, until he retired two years ago, had been an active member of the seed firm which has borne his name about 40 years. Speaking several languages, he had traveled extensively, and visited the United States on two occasions, as commissioner to the International exposition at Philadelphia in 1876 and at the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893. Like his forefathers, he always took the keenest interest in everything pertaining to agriculture as well as horticulture. He was an authority on arboriculture, and his famous and unique collection of trees and shrubs, located near the state forestry school established by his grandfather at "Les Barres," and which contains the finest set of American oaks to be found in Europe, gave him many opportunities to contribute on dendrological questions to the French and foreign periodicals. Having friendly intercourse with most of the French missionaries in China, Japan and other distant countries, he introduced many interesting plants, a number of which are described in his illustrated "Fruticetum Vilmorinianum."

Well known to all tree lovers, and a personal friend of Professor Sargent of the Arnold Arboretum, Maurice L. de Vilmorin was a member of the Legion of Honor, past president of the Académie d'Agriculture, the leading agricultural society of France, including half a hundred of the most distinguished agriculturists of that country in its membership; also of the Botanical Society of France, and vice-president of the National Horticultural Society, the National Society of Acclimation, and of the Dendrological Society of France, among other honors. A man of high character, Mr. De Vilmorin commanded the respect of all who knew him. Unassuming to the last degree, he was always held in the highest esteem by his employes and everyone with whom he came in contact.

Mr. De Vilmorin is survived by two sons and three daughters. His eldest son, Jacques L. de Vilmorin, 35 years of age, now with the army, has been a member of the firm for 10 years, and is therefore familiar with all the routine work of the business. He has attended, of late years, to the selecting, breeding and crossing. Being in a position to avail himself of the observations and collections of his father, he will in future give particular attention to the scientific part of the business, following in the footsteps of his brilliant ancestors. His younger brother, who has not yet completed his studies, is an officer in the French army at the front.

Other members of the Vilmorin family who are in the army are so far in good health, and we hope they will remain so until the end of the terrible struggle.

Nicholas Armbrust.

Nicholas Armbrust, pioneer florist of Forest Park, a suburb of Chicago, and a highly respected citizen of that community, where he engaged in business more than 40 years ago, died at his home, May 23, at the age of 71 years. The deceased was born in Holstein, Germany, where he served his apprenticeship, and later worked in the Imperial Gardens. In 1866, he came to the United States, located almost immediately in Forest Park, started the business which grew to generous proportions, and became recognized as an expert in plant propagation. Surviving are two sons, George, a captain in the United States army, and Charles, his wife having died in 1893.

GOOD MEMORIAL DAY SUPPLY ASSURED.

With Memorial day at hand, the florists of this vicinity are looking for a big sale of flowers, and are stocking up in anticipation of this business. Many already have stocks of peonies on ice and others depend on getting the larger supply just before the big day. There was some apprehension, up to 10 days ago, lest the crop might not come on in time for this big event, for the spring was late and the weather remained cold, but the very hot weather that has prevailed for a week or more has brought things out nicely. The trade is looking for a much larger Memorial day business than on Mothers' day, which was a record-breaker. Carnations sold like the proverbial "hot cakes," and out-of-town shipping began several days before. One florist, by way of indicating the rush, said three balls of wrapping twine had been consumed in the shop by Friday night previous to the day itself.

NOTES.

Petersen Brothers have for some time used as a show window decoration a large and handsome American flag made of artificial straw flowers, with a handsome border of magnolia leaves. This has proved one of the most attractive window decorations ever used by a local florist and it constantly attracts the attention of passers-by, who stop to examine it and often enter the store.

Arnold the Florist closed the shop and plugged up the telephone by noon of Mothers' day, in order to get out the orders taken in the forenoon.

C. Rogers sold out before the day was over; in fact, it is said that practically every florist in the city cleaned up completely that day.

GOOD SUPPLY AT IMPROVED PRICES.

Business the past week has been good with an excellent outlook for Memorial day. Excellent geraniums are seen and prices received are better than in other years. Cut stock is plentiful and prices have improved. The sale of wax flowers and wreaths will be heavy this year as indicated by the displays that are being made, many of the stores making good showings. Department stores and fruit stands are boosting this class of work. The greenhouse men are busy planting urns and porch boxes, but the demand is not as brisk as in other years, as the public seems to be curtailing expenditures. There has been an exceptionally good sale of vegetable plants.

LONG BEACH, CALIF.—Ten thousand carnations were distributed to soldiers in the training camp here on Mothers' day.

WOODSTOCK, ONT.—A. H. Ewing, for several years secretary of the Canadian Horticultural Society, is now located in Los Angeles, Calif.

LANCASTER, PA.—Women for lighter work are being employed at the range of J. P. Seibold, and are said to be proving very satisfactory.

MONESSEN, PA.—Irwin's Flower Store is doing a splendid business in cut flowers, pot plants and funeral work. A recent improvement at this establishment is a new 12-foot refrigerator.

Germany Pressing Holland.

London, Eng.—Prohibition of sailings of all Dutch ships from Dutch ports, according to the Rotterdam correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, is connected with a new move by the German government to compel Holland to sign on Berlin's terms the long-pending economic agreement which Holland has declined to do owing to the onerous conditions imposed by Germany. The German government, accordingly, has refused a safe conduct to Dutch shipping through the safe zone and seized the steamship Megrez, which Holland chartered to carry a cargo of wood from Sweden. The seizing was a direct challenge to Holland and, it is added, the prohibition of further sailings is the sequel.

Babson on Credits.

"We do not anticipate any immediate widespread business depression accompanied by great commercial mortality. However, certain lines cannot hope to escape trouble indefinitely, and we believe that every client should begin to exercise keen discrimination when granting credits. As the war continues, there will be increasing handicaps imposed upon those industries which do not contribute directly or indirectly toward the war programme. Middlemen, especially, will be impeded by difficulty in getting merchandise. Many concerns will become disheartened by the increasing hardships and will abandon their business prematurely. This is the type of risk to watch most closely."

Food for Thought.

Just back from a fishing trip at Belgrade Lakes and instead of a big catch of fish, found a big batch of mail upon my return. Among the more interesting data were excerpts from publicity campaigns by the California Associated Raisin Company, Florida Citrus Exchange, California Fruit Growers Exchange, Hawaiian Pineapple Company, Ltd., California Walnut Growers Association, Mutual Service Corporation on the skookum apple campaign; and many others, all attesting to the wonderful results each of the members of these various associations are receiving in their national campaigns due to manner and dispatch which they are able to proceed with their national advertising.

Why our campaign should lack for want of funds is beyond my reasoning power, except that perhaps those who have not as yet contributed let it go by carelessly instead of having the knowledge that we are all reaping the indirect benefits accruing from the good the magazine advertising backed up by the local advertising done by the florists direct. All the above associations by their letters prove the inestimable value their respective campaigns have brought them.

Shall we continue to go on with our work, or must we limit our field? Will the florists who have always been progressive falter now, or shall we continue in our good work? It is up to you. Send your remittance now to John Young, secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York, so that this campaign which is only in its infancy may still prove its merit. There are too many of us who still have faith in our campaign to let it slump.

Glancing through our trade press, note the successful Mothers' day business everybody had. Did this just happen, or was it the constructive work of the florists generally, by making special plans and using printer's ink to recall and remind the public of the day?

Think it over. Will you do your share?

Chairman, Publicity Committee.

CORRECTION IN PRIZE LIST.

Referring to the list of awards offered in connection with the exhibition to be held under the auspices of the American Institute of the City of New York, September 24-26, announced in last week's issue, page 924, Secretary J. R. Lewis, desires to make a correction in the matter of the prize offered by Mrs. Chapman of Westerville, R. I., which is $10, instead of $100 as previously reported.

The executive committee is now engaged in preparing the special premium lists for both the New York and Boston exhibitions to be held in September and it is requested that friends of the society who intend to offer prizes for either of these shows notify the secretary at once, in order that proper classes may be arranged.

Sweet Pea Bulletin.

"The American Sweet Pea Bulletin and Schedule, 1918," the official organ of the American Sweet Pea Society, has been issued, included in its pages being the final and complete list of awards for the tenth annual exhibition, to be held at Wanamaker's Greek hall, Philadelphia, Pa., June 25-26, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. The exhibition has been divided into 42 classes, 26 being for private gardeners and amateurs, 11 for amateurs only and five open and miscellaneous.

The Bulletin is also noteworthy for a number of interesting papers, among them the following: "The Sweet Pea Industry in England," by J. S. Brunton, Burnley, Eng.; "Growing Sweet Peas in Tubs," by James Watt; "An Amateur's Experience," by William G. Taylor; "Stray Notes on Sweet Peas," by George W. Kerr, president of the American Sweet Pea Society; "Sweet Pea Notes from California," by Frank G. Cuthbertson, and a report on the Hutchins Memorial Cup fund. The financial report of the society for the year ending January 1, 1918, shows it to be in good condition. Further information regarding the Philadelphia exhibition may be had by writing to William Gray, secretary, Bellevue avenue, Newport, R. I.

Essentials in France.

The following from the The Spur would indicate that the authorities in France take a broader view than does our own war board of the essentials and non-essentials:

"It is interesting to note that W. K. Vanderbilt, who has long been a distinguished figure in French racing, has, despite restricted opportunities since the outbreak of hostilities, maintained his immense Haras du Fresnay breeding establishment unimpaired, and that today he has no less than 49 horses in training at St. Louis de Poissy. It should not be overlooked that a meeting of 26 days has already been arranged, in three divisions of spring, summer and autumn, at Chantilly; so racing in France will be carried on as usual under direct government authorization."

Spirit of 76.

An army officer from the south, recently in New York, told of an incident occurring in a southern recruiting station which resulted in many boys enlisting. One evening in the early stages of the war an elderly mountaineer came forward and stated that he wished to enlist in the army. He was asked his age. "I am 76," he said, "but I guess that don't matter, so long as I can carry a gun. And meals ain't much to me. I ain't had but one meal a day fer years. As a walker, I ain't bad, neither. I walked about 40 miles to get here to sign up." After the age limit had been explained to him, the patriot was induced to return to his farm in the mountains, with assurance that his truck farming was a work of service.—The Wall Street Journal Straws.

WAR CONDITIONS Of Supply and Demand

While there is no doubt the demand for spring bedding and other decorative plants and bulbs will be materially curtailed by the war garden movement, we believe this condition will be fully counterbalanced by the prosperity in the south and the effects of the coal shortage on the greenhouse men of the west, north and east, placing in the market for stock a large number of new buyers not familiar with the sources of supply.

Most of these buyers can be reached at small cost by advertising in The American Florist, and we feel that it will be greatly to your advantage to start this campaign with an advertisement in our columns.

GOOD MEMORIAL DAY DEMAND.

The Memorial day trade was fair this year, but the warm weather of the previous week affected stock in general to such an extent that the wholesaler in many instances refused to place it on shipping orders for fear that it would be refused when the customer received it. Good shipping stock was exceedingly scarce and cleaned up quickly at practically the advertised quotations. Roses, particularly, arrived in poor condition and some of them in such bad shape that they had to be dumped as soon as they were unpacked, which appeared as if they were pickled for a month, especially as far as some of the Mrs. Chas. Russell were concerned. Carnations were also of poor quality and what little good stock was available cleaned up early. Peonies had a heavy call and while some exceptionally fine stock was offered there was a large supply of inferior flowers to be seen which had to be thrown in the garbage barrel. Some of the peonies were affected by the warm weather in transit from the fields to the wholesale houses and had to be sold in job lots at bargain prices to the street fakirs or else thrown away. Several thousand were burned in one day last week to get them out of the way quickly after all the salable stock was selected. A few local grown peonies made their appearance the early part of this week and brought high prices compared to the storage stock. Lilies, gladioli, callas and daisies were in good demand and so were a few late Darwin tulips. Sweet peas were plentiful at low prices and the same holds true for all other miscellaneous stock not already mentioned. American Beauty roses in the fancier grades sold as high as $5 per dozen with very little stock obtainable. There probably never was a Memorial day when stock of inferior quality was so plentiful and high grade flowers so scarce as this year. The demand for fancy stock was exceedingly heavy, but it was impossible to fill anywhere near the orders, especially to out-of-town points. The buyer who received good stock for his or her Memorial day trade can consider themselves lucky at any price. The weather turned cooler the early part of this week, but too late to have any effect on the shipping trade, consequently the local buyers reaped the benefit. From the wholesaler's standpoint, the total sales for Memorial day, speaking of the market in general, will be considerably below those of 1917.

NOTES.

The flower show held at the Art Institute Thursday, May 23, for the benefit of the Red Cross war fund was a great success and over $1,400 was realized for the worthy cause. The wholesalers donated the stock and the retailers assisted the society ladies in charge of the sales. A. Lange, Fred Lautenschlager, Arthur Weatherwax, I. Rosnosky, James Morton, Harold Wolff and O. J. Friedman, assisted by several others in the trade, were the active workers and deserve much credit for the splendid results obtained.

Henry Esterlund, of the credit department of the A. L. Randall Co., was drafted for military service this week, and is now at Jefferson Barracks. Herman Bauske, of the supply department, expects to be called in the next draft, as he has received notice to be ready at any time. The Randall Co. has over 20 stars in its service flag.

Phil Weinberg, who is employed in the cut flower department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., will leave for Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, Mo., May 31 with the drafted men of his district. Frank J. Lukes, formerly with the E. C. Amling Co., writes that he has safely arrived overseas. He is with the colors and is serving in one of the engineering divisions.

Mrs. Frank Ayers underwent an operation at the Henrotin Memorial hospital May 28.

William Rausch, of the American Express Company, who worked under Leo Gannon in the wholesale cut flower market, left May 25 with the drafted men from his district for Macon, Ga. His many friends in the trade presented him with a gold wrist watch and $20 in cash as a token of appreciation for the splendid services rendered while in the employ of his concern.

Peter Reinberg has donated over 85,000 tomato plants to the National Council of Defense to be distributed free to all those having war gardens and who cannot afford to buy them. Poehlmann Bros. Co. and the A. F. Amling Co. also donated a large quantity for the same purpose, not to mention a long list of other growers who contributed to the worthy cause.

The Bohannon Floral Co. donated its store and stock to the use of the Red Cross, Friday, May 24, when workers from that society had charge and the gross receipts for the day amounting to one cent over $772 went to the Red Cross war fund. The Bohannon Co. bought and paid for all the stock that the Red Cross could sell and donated it all to that society.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department reports that the Memorial day call for made-up wreaths was greater than expected, the late demand being surprisingly brisk owing to the general cut flower market condition the end of last and the early part of this week, when good shipping stock was practically unobtainable.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report a good Memorial day trade with an exceptionally heavy out-of-town demand for stock. Eugene Paradise, brother of Miss Charlotte Paradise, cashier at this establishment, who is now with the colors, writes that he expects to embark for overseas' service in the near future.

The Central Floral Co., 132 North State street, donated 10 per cent of its gross sales, May 25, to the Red Cross war fund, for which the proprietors received a hearty vote of thanks. Red Cross workers acted as cashiers, and a nice sum was turned over to this worthy cause.

Fred Kraus, of the E. F. Winterson Co., left May 27 with the drafted men from his district for Macon, Ga. "Mickey" is well and favorably known to the members of the trade here, who wish him every success with the colors, and a safe and speedy return.

supply of peonies in addition to all other seasonable flowers, which played a big part in the Memorial day trade this year. Candytuft of fine quality is a leader at this house.

Miss Marguerite McNulty, with Peter Reinberg, reports that her brother, Archie, now with the colors, has arrived safely somewhere over there, and has since been promoted to a corporal. Zech & Mann are more than pleased with their Memorial day business, which exceeded all expectations. The shipping trade was very heavy and the local demand was surprisingly good.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. were strong on peonies for Memorial day and report a brisk demand for same in good shipping stock, which was none too plentiful compared to last year.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association had its share of the Memorial day trade this year, especially from out-of-town points, the shipping demand being extra good.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are particularly strong in peonies, including a good supply of home-grown stock which made its appearance at their store the latter part of last week.

Bassett & Washburn had a splendid cut of roses for Memorial day, considering the general run of stock offered in this market, and cleaned up nicely in this line.

Chas. A. Barker, former office employe of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, is now with the United States forces somewhere on the other side.

L. Hoeckner is back from a tour of the south with a carnival show and is helping out at Peter Reinberg's store this week.

The florists' club will meet at the Randolph hotel, formerly the Bismarck hotel, next Thursday, June 6, at 8 p. m.

Erne & Company are having a good call for miniature gladioli and peonies, which they are handling in quantity.

Luke Schrer, formerly with Kennicott Bros. Co., is now with the American forces somewhere in Europe.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. cut its first local peonies, May 25, which commanded very satisfactory prices.

Weiland & Risch are featuring a particularly fine grade of candytuft, which is finding ready buyers.

The Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co. has added a line of ribbon and chiffon.

Sam Seligman writes that he will be in this city in the near future.

BUSINESS THRIVING SINCE MOTHERS' DAY.

Florists' shops ever since Mothers' day have certainly not been affected by any wartime dullness, but rather they have been exceedingly busy with funeral work and spring planting, which is now in full swing. Mothers' day was a great event for all concerned, because favorable weather enabled growers here to send in an abundance of cut flowers. In fact, carnations were never so plentiful and of such uniformly excellent quality. They sold here for $1.50 per dozen. Business on the whole, according to leading florists, was about 25 per cent better than last year, and had it not been for an almost constant downpour on Sunday, would have broken all records.

SPRING PLANTING BETTER THAN EVER.

Florists with greenhouses in connection, of whom there are quite a few in this city, are working day and night taking care of their planting orders, both in beautifying homes, gardens and grounds and in preparing graves for Memorial day. The prices received for this kind of work have been raised and it is the universal experience that it is easy to get the advance. However, florists are still doing this kind of work at a price that is not very profitable, considering the work and the services rendered. The business transacted in seeds of all kinds has been remarkable.

FLORISTS HOLD COAL CONFERENCE.

In order to get a line on the exact meaning of the 50 per cent coal order, florists held a conference with the local fuel administration, during which it was found out that the order would be strictly enforced, but that if later on conditions improved, the allotment would be increased. However, judging from the outlook at present florists have little hope of this increase, and are making plans accordingly.

NOTES.

Max Spanner will probably discontinue his store at the corner of Summit and Madison at the end of June. The landlord has made a demand for such an increase in rent that Max feels that it will pay him to seek another location. He has been in business there for many years and has always enjoyed a fine patronage. He plans to rest for a few months before he opens up again in another location.

will conduct all their business at the greenhouses on Phillips avenue. The firm has been enjoying an increasing wholesale trade and plans in the future to concentrate on this end of the business.

Schramm Brothers used a 35-foot banner to boost sales on Mothers' day, which they stretched across their Cherry street front. It bore the slogan: "Today, 'Say It With Flowers'—it's Mothers' day." They also sent out a beautiful folder in colors to a large mailing list.

Metz & Bateman have been very busy with funeral work and have received some big F. T. D. orders. They recently made up a very large wreath which was very artistically designed and brought over $100 into the cash drawer.

The local war chest campaign is on this week, and the same florists who so energetically worked on the recent Liberty Loan drive, are giving their time to make this a success. This means quite a sacrifice at this busy time.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman's delivery car was damaged in a collision with a street car. John Lambert, her decorator, has originated a wreath to be used where soldiers are buried here. Business has been rushing. A. C. K.

MARKET UNSETTLED.

The market has been very erratic the past week. Carnations have greatly deteriorated. Sweet peas are also about done for until the outdoor stock begins to come in. Roses, too seem to have suffered considerably from thrip. Peonies are about the only bright spot for the retailer, although they shortened up considerably by the end of the week. More than likely, a whole lot of peonies have been put into cold storage. Other outdoor stock has been fair. Gladioli are beginning to come in and it is hoped they will soon relieve the conditions. Lilies and rubrum have been rather scarce, but what is on the market is of excellent quality. In greens the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

Jules Bourdet is so busy these days that he cannot spare a few hours from his place to attend the various meetings where he is unquestionably missed. He says in two weeks four of his men quit to join either the army or go into factories. That means a whole lot more work for the boss.

Unless large quantities of peonies are being held in cold storage plants, it looks as though there are not going to be any too many for Memorial day. From all indications, this day should be better than in the past few years, although everybody is a bit pessimistic about it.

Fred Foster says to date he has disposed of about 50,000 tomato plants at his Olive street store. This is going some, when you sell them all in small lots of a dozen or a few dozen at a time.

Quite a few florists have been helping the Red Cross in their drive by donating flowers, which ladies of the organization sell in the theatres and picture shows.

Oscar May, of Sappington, tells us he will be in with a big cut of gladioli in a few days. Let it be soon.

MEMORIAL DAY PROSPECTS GOOD.

All indications point to a good Memorial day business, for trade in general has been good and advance orders have been coming in very satisfactorily. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, and from the present outlook there will be no shortage. Bedding stock, seedlings and cemetery plants have had a good demand. Roses begin to show signs of the warm weather and have poor staying qualities. Francis Scott Key is about the best keeper. There are a few American Beauties on the market, but the quality is none too good. Carnations are over plentiful and the price has dropped. Sweet peas are excellent and the demand for them is very good.

NOTES.

H. B. Stringer and Ambrose Secker have been appointed lieutenants to solicit subscriptions for the war chest to which the local florists are subscribing generously.

Sergeant Tom Sullivan, formerly of George B. Hart's staff, was home recently on a furlough. He expects to be in France in the near future.

Louis Collatos has returned from a business trip to New York.

LARGE SUPPLY FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

The supply in the market is very large and will be able to satisfy all Memorial day wants. Shipping business is excellent. Prices have been at a low point. The supply of peonies seems to be without a limit. They have crowded in the market until it is glutted with them. Roses are in a good supply. Carnations are not as plentiful as they were at the last writing. Easter lilies are in good supply. Snapdragons may be had. Outdoor sweet peas are available and at this time they are better than the indoor cut. Excellent gladioli are coming into the market. Other offerings include cornflowers, delphiniums, feverfews, callas and rubrum lilies.

NOTES.

L. H. Kyrk was the first in the market to get in delphiniums this spring. They were excellent and sold well.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some fancy America gladioli from Louis Pfeiffer & Sons at Ft. Thomas.

Walter Gray is cutting some excellent Kaiserin roses. They are from his second crop this spring.

E. G. Gillett has booked some heavy out-of-town orders for peonies for Memorial day.

Mrs. J. A. Peterson had a choice display of peonies and irises in her garden last week.

C. J. Jones turned over his store to the Red Cross for a day, May 21.

MARKET WELL SUPPLIED.

Stock is more than plentiful in the local market. Peonies are arriving in quantity, but the extreme heat the past few days has had its effect on the flowers. Shipped stock arrives from two to four days late, and the blooms are heated in transit, causing many to fall. Every grower of carnations has gone to the extreme in producing white flowers, with the result they are now too plentiful and colors are scarce. Sweet peas are in good supply, as are snapdragons, bachelor buttons, field daisies, calendulas, iris, yellow daisies and calla lilies. Roses are in large supply, with only a limited demand. Kaiserin are again arriving for summer.

NOTES.

Arba Fowls, of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, has returned to Oberlin, O., where he expects to go into the bee raising business, producing extracted honey for the wholesale market.

Walter Rokusek is the proud father of a baby girl, which arrived a short time ago. Congratulations.

BUSINESS SHOWS INCREASE OVER 1917.

Trade keeps up exceptionally well and the season's sales are much better than in the past three years. Although there is little doing in the call for decorations, the general demand keeps the market fairly well cleaned up. The quality of the stock was never better at this time of the year. Perhaps keeping the houses at low temperature during the past winter is responsible for this. In roses, American Beauty, Ophelia, Shawyer and Richmond seem to take the lead. The quality of the carnations also holds up well. Orchids are plentiful, but the supply of lily of the valley is limited. The past winter has been hard on all outdoor stock and many of the herbaceous flowers show the effects.

CLUB MEETINGS.

The retail florists' May meeting held in Dunlop's hall was well attended, the "box social" feature proving very enjoyable and the bidding was keen, resulting in the ladies being greatly pleased at this recognition of their cooking. W. Hill, of Yonge street, who has been ordered to report for service, was presented with a wrist watch by President Geraghty on behalf of his fellow club members.

The gardeners' and florists' association held its monthly meeting in St. George's hall and it was decided to hold a chrysanthemum show. The assistance of the retail florists will be enlisted.

NOTES.

Some of the growers have reduced carnation prices to $6 for No. 1's and $5 for No. 2's, stating that there should be an equalization between roses and carnations. As far as appearances are concerned this is a matter of opinion and is determined by the flower buying public, and they usually prefer the rose.

R. Jennings, of Brampton, was a recent visitor. He is looking hale and hearty after his long illness. He says the damage done to his carnations in the March flood seems to have been a fortunate check, for they are now coming better by 50 per cent than most of the stock now offered.

For quality we never had a better Peony season. We have had plenty of rain and the weather being right, the buds are of a good size. You will make no mistake in adding some Peonies to your next order. We will send them to you partly in bud form, so that if necessary you can keep them in splendid condition for several days. For immediate use fully developed flowers. If you can use a large quantity of Peonies, a thousand or more, we suggest that you get our quotations before placing your order.

WORST OVERSUPPLY OF YEAR

The past week has been a nightmare to the handlers of flowers. In oversupply it has been one of the worst weeks of the season. Roses, carnations, Easter lilies, callas, daisies, irises, in fact, everything, has fairly flooded the market, on top of which came the great influx of peonies, which are from a week to 10 days earlier than usual. They found a resting place in the cold storage houses until an embargo was placed on any further business for flowers. Prices have gone as low as $15 per thousand for very good blooms. With all this stock to be handled, it was almost impossible to maintain prices, which in some items, were such as to hardly pay for the handling. One of the large wholesale dealers sized up the situation as a condition of the market that is met at times in the spring or fall, and we just have to make the best of it. He thought the great quantity of carnations was the result of the low temperatures of last winter, which had held the crops back, but which were now coming in quantities, larger than ever before at this season. The quality is fine. Cold frame sweet peas are in, there being splendid flowers of this class of stock. Pyrethrum or Paris daisies and hardy dwarf larkspur offer variety from the outside garden. Easter lilies appear to hold their own, selling out fairly well at standard prices.

SPECIAL CLUB MEETING.

The special meeting of the florists' club, called to endorse and back the efforts of the committee who appeared before the United States war trade board in Washington on Monday last relative to their ruling on importations of bulbs from the Orient, was well attended and very interesting. Paul Richter outlined the work of the committees having this in charge. After considerable discussion the club representing the growers of this city and vicinity went on record as endorsing the efforts of the committee for an importation of 50 per cent of the stock grown last season. This would amount to 5,000,000 bulbs with a weight of about 2,000 tons. An informal discussion then followed on the coal question. Robert Craig stated that men who paid $4.10 a ton for bituminous coal could get not only 50 per cent, but all they wanted, while the government's legal price was $3.15 at mine and 15 cents per ton to the dealer, but there was none of this latter coal to be had, as none of the miners cared to sell at this price. There is a grade of coal called "smithy" which was not specified in the government list, and there are now thousands of tons of good bituminous coal sold under this name for $4.10 per ton, which are being delivered to anyone who will pay the price. Mr. Craig thought this very unfair and that Uncle Sam ought to have it brought to his attention.

Another curtailment, injurious to florists, was also brought to light. This refers to rubber hose, which all companies with but few exceptions have reduced from $\frac{3}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch in diameter. The rubber trust, which controls all the large companies, have decreed that $\frac{1}{2}$ inch hose is now to be the standard size, and no orders are taken for any other. Adolph Farenwald said that on a place the size of his, it would mean the employment of two men, as there was a great difference in the force of water from the smaller size, so that it took a great deal longer for the watering and syringing. A person would hardly credit this until they had tried it out. Paul Richter stated that he would take the matter up with the companies, and if possible, get the old size restored.

The literary feature of the June meeting of the club will be a paper by Edward A. Harvey, Brandywine Summit, Pa., on "Coal Conservation and Intensive Use of Greenhouse Space." Mr. Harvey's firm consists of practical and scientific growers, who have many successes to their credit. There should be a banner attendance.

WITH THE WHOLESALERS.

Leo Niessen had no good word for last week's business, claiming the supply was so large that the demand, while not bad, did not use up half the stock, and it cost almost more to handle it than they had been able to get out of it. There is a great stock here from the smallest garden flower to the most expensive orchid. A great trade is expected for Memorial day.

Paul Berkowitz is back from a successful in the west trip, where the Mothers' day trade had been exceptionally good. He says that where the trade hustles for the business, they get it. He has never known live wires to complain much about poor business.

Harry Schlocker, of the Popular Flower Shop at Second and Poplar streets, is to be married in Brooklyn, N. Y., June 16 to Miss Irene Schnaper. Harry is a hustler and is building up a large trade in his busy corner store.

Eugene Bernheimer reports that the Florex Gardens have planted their columbias, which were good plants and appear to be getting away lively. Business the past week was very quiet.

It required a lot of energy to keep things going the past week; far too much stock for the demand, was the report of Manager Miller of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange.

Quite a number of the local craft expect to go to Washington to attend the opening of the Arlington rose garden, and also the hearings on the coal and bulb import situations.

At Berger Bros.' market a fair week was reported. Easter lilies, peonies, sweet peas and carnations are leaders. Good orders are coming in for Memorial day.

Galvin & Harris, two colored men, have opened a flower shop at 606 South 17th street. If there is anything in names, they should do well.

The Joseph Heacock Co. expects a splendid stock of roses for Memorial day trade. Business the past week was slow and prices low.

The Robert Craig Co. is having a great run on ferns. Vase plants, such as dracaenas, crotons and pandanus are also in demand.

Edward Reid is especially strong in carnations, roses and sweet peas. Wonderfully fine cattleyas are also leaders.

Jos. G. Neidinger had a wonderful run on all kinds of material and made up pieces for Memorial day.

NOTES.

Charles H. Grakelow was the guest of honor at a dinner given at the Adelphi hotel, May 27, by over 400 of his associates in lodge, financial, fraternal, political and other associations. Charlie is one of the most popular of Philadelphia's rising young men. He is gifted as an orator, being continually called on to address large assemblages. He had wonderful success in the recent Liberty Loan campaign. He was at his best on this occasion and added another rung to his ladder of success.

Fred C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O.; E. A. Feters, Detroit, Mich., and G. E. M. Stumpp, New York, members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery committee, met at the Bellevue-Stratford May 27 to select and award the prize for the best window card slogan and design. There were over 170 sketches offered, many of them very beautiful and elaborate.

The new order of the government, which on the face of it, appears to take all men of military age from less essential industries to the army or navy, or to the manufacture of war materials, ship building, etc., is making quite a stir among the craft. All are anxiously waiting to see the next move, so as to find out just where they stand.

HEAVY SUPPLY AT SACRIFICE PRICES.

It would appear that the wholesalers got more satisfaction from the flowers they gave away during the past week, than from what they sold, for reducing the over-supply, at prevailing prices, was discouraging work. There was a surplus of all stocks, but by the last of the week, peonies had become the greatest burden. They might have been measured by the cord, and all the buying that was done, had little perceptible effect on the heaps that were seen each morning on the store tables. At the first of the week, a few of the best brought 50 cents per dozen, by Thursday, 25 cents was a good price—and, a quarter for three dozen was better than nothing. As a matter of course, they dragged down other stocks. It will thus be seen that the good ladies working for the hospitals and the Red Cross, chanced on a timely season so far as flowers were concerned. May 24, was Italian day in the Red Cross calendar, and the third anniversary of Italy's entrance into the war. It was celebrated by a flower parade down Fifth avenue, in which over 100 automobiles, all gaily decorated with flowers and foliage, took part. Bunches of flowers and boutonnieres were tossed in profusion to the spectators by the fair hands that have been said to "rule the world." In the winter season, Saturdays are usually the best days for business, but as the weather grows warm the hordes forsake the city for the beaches. Thus, May 25, the market was in a deplorable condition. Sunday being a closed day in the wholesale district, thousands of peonies and carnations were on Saturday loaded on express wagons and push carts, more to get rid of them than for the trifle they brought. There will be an abundance of flowers for Memorial day, but the florists of this city are unlikely to derive much profit.

May 27.—The most noteworthy feature of the market is the great stock of peonies that is arriving, much of it in bad condition, some of it altogether worthless. As a consequence, it is difficult to fix an average value. A little special stock brings 50 cents per dozen, but an immense quantity is going at from 10 to 25 cents. This does not include the thousands that go to the peddlers at whatever they offer. It cannot now be said that there is any special quality of carnations, as the best are failing and much poor stock arrives. In roses, orchids and various other stocks, there is little change from our quotations of May 22.

NOTES.

The draft has again taken a quota of the 28th street boys. John B. Cooper, who has for several years been engineer at the Kervan Company's refrigerating plant, left, May 23, for Camp Wadsworth. Robert W. Jackson, who has been in the wholesale district since he was a boy, and during the past three years with Riedel & Meyer, started for camp May 25.

William Plumb, formerly well known as a landscape gardener, in this city and vicinity, but who has spent several years in Cuba, returned last week for his annual summer vacation, and after spending a few days here went on to Boston. He is looking well and prosperous.

President Totty and Secretary Young of the Society of American Florists, went to Washington to attend the hearing on the coal situation, May 27, and also the hearing on the prohibition of nursery stock, May 28.

The Greek-American Florists' Association has decided to give up its outing this year, on account of war conditions and the urgent appeal that has been made by the food administrator for economy.

J. Fred Piper, who has for several years been foreman at the Totty range. Madison N. J., has been called in the draft and has gone to camp.

Alfred Kottmiller, of Madison avenue and 49th street, arranged a number of fine designs for the funeral of Captain Resnati.

Miss Helen Totty, recently under treatment in a hospital, has completely recovered and returned home.

Paterson, N. J.

Combining business and pleasure, the citizens of this city had a busy time during the past week. First, a committee of citizens, of which Edward Scery was a member, brought home the native soldier boys from Camp Dix to be entertained at their homes or elsewhere on Mothers' day. The Mothers' day business of the florists was far in excess of any previous year, all flowers selling well. The Red Cross campaign received due attention and the circus came to town.

NOTES.

Edward Scery has bought the building in which the store formerly occupied by Thurston, 89 Van Houten street, was located, and has opened another retail store under the name of The Colonial Flower Shop. He reports an excellent Mothers' day business, and, as superintendent of parks and serving on various committees, has been quite busy.

MOTHERS' DAY GENERALLY OBSERVED.

The florists of this city agree that the Mothers' day business was far in excess of any previous year. None of our cities are old, compared with other cities of the world, but this is one of the oldest cities of the United States, founded by Americans who held the sanctity of the home and family in high regard, and, happily, their example has not been disregarded by succeeding generations. Thus it may be readily understood that Mothers' day would appeal to many citizens. Events connected with the war have this year been a powerful incentive to a more general observance of the day. Many young men have already left, and others are leaving, their homes—and, what is home without a mother? Under these conditions, it would indeed be strange if "mother" should be forgotten. The writer is pleased to note that, as he has previously suggested in these columns, the practice of wearing and sending flowers is being extended on Mothers' day. Admirable as the original idea was, it is exceedingly difficult to make any movement popular on the strength of a single idea. It has been abundantly proved that confining the observance solely to the wearing of white carnations has been unsatisfactory. It opened a door for attempted profiteering and created a general unsatisfactory condition of the flower market. We are all well aware that there are supersentimental people who do not consider profit and loss, but business never has been, never can be, done that way. The observance of both Christmas and Easter is founded on lofty sentiment, but it requires business to gratify the sentiment. There is no more reason in confining the observance of Mothers' day to carnations than there would be in confining the observance of Christmas or Easter to one particular variety of plants or cut flowers.

NOTES.

At the store of Connelly & Plunkett, Bloomfield and Mt. Prospect avenues, it was stated that they sold 4,000 carnations and many boxes of mixed flowers, as well as plants.

At the store of the Rosery Floral Co., Broad and Market streets, they had an exceptionally fine cut flower business. This firm has a good location for transient trade.

August C. Begerow, 946 Broad street, said that his Mothers' day business was 50 per cent better than last year, and that all cut flowers sold well.

Philips Brothers, 938 Broad street, report that their cut flower business for Mothers' day was far in excess of any previous year.

George Penek, 637 Broad street, said that his cut flower sales were almost equal to those for Easter.

At the Washington Florists, Broad street and Central avenue, they had good business. A. F. F.

Columbus, O.

SUPPLY OF OUTDOOR STOCK HEAVY.

The unfavorable factor, from the florist's viewpoint, of the present Memorial day period, has been the almost unprecedented supply of garden flowers. Peonies, especially, are in great abundance. Despite this fact, florists through attractive window displays, in which baskets played a big part, were able to realize $1.50 a dozen for choice varieties. There would seem to be no prospect of early shortage on any kind of stock. A flower not expected to be available for Memorial day is the gladiolus, which made its first appearance this week. Business is good, demand for flowers being stimulated by school commencements and weddings.

NOTES.

An unique food conservation window is seen at the Livingston Seed Company's retail store. The base is composed of beans, fan-shape sections separating different colors and varieties. Seated on a raised circular base at the inner edge of the window, are small figures of pigs, uniform in appearance and about 10 inches high. With the aid of placards, they give an appropriate version of the nursery rhyme, "This little pig went to market," etc.

Flowers are a much more prominent feature of war gardens this season than last. Blooming plants are used to spell out some name given a plot, and otherwise add to the attractiveness. Of the 5,600 lots assigned, quite a large percentage follow this plan.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

GOVERNMENT tax bills are coming along.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—W. C. Beckert, for many years a prominent seedsman of this city, died May 11.

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Howard Beale, of James Carter & Co., is now with the English forces in France.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The rainfall for the season to May 25 was 13.65 inches; last season, 15.26 inches.

SEVERAL garden seed houses report overstocks of items which early in the season were thought to be scarce.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. R. Chesmore, St. Joseph, Mo.; Geo. W. Kerr, with W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., en route to California.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade May 29 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.25 per 100 pounds.

NEW YORK—Weeber & Don, as a voluntary and unsolicited contribution to the Red Cross fund, gave 10 per cent of their gross sales May 23.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., secretary-treasurer of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., has enlisted in the United States Naval Reserves.

NORTH CAROLINA passed a regulative seed law March 7, 1917. Seedsmen should add it to their collections. Viability and purity are standards required.

EXPORTS from Amsterdam to the United States for the quarter ending March 31 included the following: Bulbs, $1,062; plants, $35,796; seeds, $123,535.

TOLEDO, O.—According to C. A. King & Co., clover stocks are very small, while the supply of timothy is large, and there is a question how the 1918 crop will turn out.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—The country in this vicinity is dry, the soil is drifting badly, and the crop outlook is not encouraging, but if favored with rain at an early date, conditions will change rapidly.

ENGLAND released her embargo on importations of French bulbs October, 1917, too late to make use of such stock that season. No doubt, there will be some movement the coming season, though transportation is uncertain.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — Northrup, King & Co. report possibly less difficulty in getting shipments in and out than Chicago or eastern seedsmen, as the congestion here has not been serious, owing to the light crop of grain being handled. The firm's new plant has proved of great advantage in giving room to take care of its increased business.

Nebraska and Colorado Seed Crops.

Waterloo, May 27.—Corn planting in Nebraska has practically been completed and 90 per cent of the crops are up. The stand is remarkably good when you consider the difficulties that have confronted the farmers this last winter in securing good seed corn, but they received ample warning and have been very careful. Thus far there has been less replanting than usual. The acreage planted to sweet corn is perhaps about an average. For ourselves, we would like to have had about 20 per cent more acreage than we have succeeded in placing. Nevertheless, we have covered our requirements in very fair shape and the stand generally is good. On flint corns, we have not succeeded in placing quite as much acreage as we would have liked, but we believe enough in most cases to cover the orders that we have booked in advance, but we would have liked a little excess to care for other trade.

The Late Maurice L. de Vilморin.

It has been very difficult to secure acreage on either squash or pumpkins, but probably there is not over 75 per cent of acreage placed that really ought to have been placed.

The planting of cucumbers and melons at Rocky Ford, Colo., is progressing, and most of the farmers have called for their seed stock, although there has been some disturbance there, especially among the Japs. Higher prices having been bid late in the season, they have become somewhat disturbed, but we believe that as far as we are concerned, the acreage that we have arranged for will be planted. We have had to make some concessions since the early contracts, but we believe that the farmers generally are satisfied with the prices that are now paid.

The acreage on cucumber is about normal with us, but we are short on what we would like to have had in muskmelons. Other seed will come up to about the average in acreage.

Taking it as a whole, crops are starting out in very fair shape, and we feel fairly contented with the outlook.
R.

Canary Island Onion Seed Crop Outlook.

At this time, April 12, approximately three months before the commencement of export to the United States of the 1918 Canary Island onion seed crop, the outlook is for a yield approximately 15 per cent above the average and probably little, if any, below the record production of last year, according to consular reports from Tenerife. The plants, while damaged to a certain extent by severe wind storms early in April, have nevertheless profited greatly by the timely rain which has fallen during the first half of this month. The outlook is now said to be excellent, both for the white or "crystal wax" variety and for the yellow and red grades, all of which are exported to some extent to the United States.

Up to that date, the shipping crisis caused by the practical tie-up of Spanish steamers for Cuban and American ports appeared to threaten the delivery of the onion seed, which constitutes at this time 90 per cent of the Canary Islands' exports to the United States. While these steamers have apparently resumed their usual routings, there is still a certain element of doubt concerning the continuance of this service, and it might not be out of place for American buyers to decline to make payment for this class of merchandise until the actual arrival of the goods themselves, and not to make payment simply on arrival of bills of lading as has very largely been the practice heretofore. This suggestion is made because of the unprecedented shipping conditions under which the trade must be conducted this season.

ATWATER, CALIF.—W. H. Osborn will plant 10 acres of castor beans on his ranch here under government contract, the price said to be $3.50 per bushel of 46 pounds.

OWING to heavy production, potatoes, onions and cabbage are the three cheapest articles of food at the present time and have never before been sold by commission men at such low prices.

"COMMON White Grubs" is the title of Farmers' Bulletin 940 recently issued by the United States department of agriculture which calls attention to the injury of these "grubworms" to such crops as beans, potatoes, strawberries, conifer seedlings, alfalfa and clover, and gives methods for their control.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 28.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1.50 to $2.00; celery, crate, $4.00 to $4.50; leaf lettuce, per box, 20 to 22½ cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $4.25 to $5.50.

New York, May 27.—Celery, per crate, $4.00 to $7.50; cucumbers, 50 cents to $4.00 per basket; mushrooms, 40 cents to $2.20 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, per package, $1.00 to $4.50; lettuce, per strap, $1.50 to $2.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $2.00.

Potato Culture in South Dakota.

The agricultural experiment station of the South Dakota College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, Brookings, has issued Bulletin No. 176, under the above title, containing much of interest on the subject. Included in the contents are sections relating to the comparative yields of large, medium and small seed pieces, cultivation, cost of production, harvesting, insect enemies, marketing, methods of cutting tubers, preparation of seed beds, planting, seed selection, production and treatment, storage, and varieties. The bulletin is well illustrated.

Vegetable Markets.

According to the reports of the United States department of agriculture, bureau of markets, for the period, May 21-27, the yearly shift from old to new stock is fast nearing completion. The week's carlot shipments of new potatoes surpassed the movement of old stock and old onions moved in small quantities. The market for old potatoes, however, was firm and fairly active, Round Whites ranging 50 to 70 cents in bulk at Michigan producing sections and about $1 f. o. b. Grand Rapids. For onions, prices were a little lower at Texas shipping points, ruling 75 to 85 cents per crate for No. 1 and 65 to 70 cents for No. 2. A few sales of poor to good to jobbers in New York and Chicago brought prices from 50 cents to $1. The supply of new cabbage continues heavy, with Virginia now leading in volume of shipments, closely followed by Mississippi and South Carolina. Stock from the more southern shipping sections is becoming mostly low grade, while the tone of the market for new cabbage has improved, prices in northern markets ranging from $1.25 to $1.50 per crate. For tomatoes, the prevailing price at Florida shipping points for fancy sixes was $4. At Miami, jobbing sales ranged from $2 to $2.25 per carrier. In other Florida vegetables, the asparagus movement continued equal to the preceding week, but only 16 cars of celery started. Lettuce shipments were also light. Fancy egg plant ranged higher and was fairly steady at $3.75 to $4.75 per crate. The watermelon supply is increasing with prices ranging at from $60 to $65 at Chicago for Tom Watsons of 23 to 30 pounds weight.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

GOOD MEMORIAL DAY INDICATIONS.

Conditions during the past week found the florists busy with a good demand, including corsages and bouquets for year-end recitals, and a heavy call for funeral work the latter part of the week. There was a heavy demand for white and pink flowers, and smilax for the processions in the various churches during the week also. The unseasonably warm weather has forced out great quantities of flowers, both under glass, and outdoors. Peonies are coming into the market in large quantities, and from indications, they will be at the height of their season for Memorial day. Roses are more than plentiful, but many are showing the effects of the hot weather. Carnations are also in very large supply, although the quality has suffered from the weather conditions. The demand for bedding plants has been heavier this week than at any time before this season. Planting at the cemeteries has been particularly noticeable.

NOTES.

The florists of this city made handsome donations to the Red Cross during the drive last week, when they gave thousands of flowers to be sold, and out of which $1,065 was realized for this great cause. The florists who contributed were the Doswell Floral Co., Freese Floral Co., New Haven Floral Co., A. J. Lanternier & Co., Flick Floral Co., W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Edgar Wenninghoff and F. J. Knecht.

C. Comincavish, the florist on Spy Run, is having a brisk sale of flowering and vegetable plants. His newspaper advertisements have increased his demand to a very appreciable extent. Cut flowers are in large supply here, particularly the outdoor varieties.

In addition to several thousand roses and carnations, the Flick Floral Co. donated a large basket which the Red Cross sold for $50 last week. Funeral work has kept everyone busy here, besides a large demand for corsages and bouquets.

One orchid corsage which was sold by the Red Cross for $25 was donated to the society by W. J. & M. S. Vesey. This firm gave many other flowers to this cause. They are cutting a large crop of orchids, roses and peonies.

Peonies are in full swing at the store of the Freese Floral Co. and other varieties of cut flowers are very much in evidence. Funeral work has been good here, and counter trade excellent.

Edgar Wenninghoff reports bedding plant trade on the increase, and a plentiful supply of all kinds of cut flowers, with funeral work constituting a heavy demand.

American Association of Nurserymen.

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President;
J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., Vice-
President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress
St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel.
Forty-third annual convention will be held

NEW YORK.—James McHutchison has gone away for an indefinite period to recuperate from overwork.

RIVERSIDE, CALIF.—The California Association of Nurserymen will hold its eighth annual convention here in November.

Fruit Package Standards in Canada.

At a meeting of fruit growers of the Dominion recently, the following dimensions and forms for fruit packages were recommended for use in Canada:

For barreled apples, a barrel similar to the United States standard, having 17½-inch head diameter, 28½-inch stave, 26 inches between heads, 64-inch circumference at bulge; capacity, 7,056 cubic inches. For boxed apples, the American or Washington box, 18 x 11½ x 10½ inches, inside measurement, to be adopted as the standard for Canada. A standard apple crate of the same dimensions as the standard apple box, with slats at least three-quarters of an inch apart, was also recommended.

For peaches the following sizes of box were recommended to be made legal: 18 by 11½ by 4½ inches; 18 by 11½ by 3½ inches. The size for the legal Canadian pear box, as recommended, is 18 by 11½ by 8½ inches, inside measurement.

VENEER FRUIT BASKETS.

The sizes and dimensions of the 11 and 6-quart baskets, as proposed by the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers' Association, were recommended by the recent conference for adoption throughout Canada, the details of the 11-quart basket being:

Veneer.—Depth inside, 6 inches, cut 14 to the inch (minimum).

Bands.—Top, ¾ inch in width, cut 12 to the inch (minimum), 12 tacks; bottom, ½ inch in width, cut 14 to the inch (minimum), 12 nails. (Nails and tacks exclusive of handles.)

Bottom.—¾ inch thick (minimum).
Handle.—25½ inches long, 1½ inches wide, cut seven to the inch (minimum). One tack in each side of handle at top band, two nails in each end of handle at bottom band. Handle to be outside of bands. Handles to be shaped so that pinching of basket when handles are attached will be avoided. All bands to be drawn tight so as to fit snugly over form.

Material.—To be sound, well-seasoned, and free from defects.

Size.—The basket to be of such length and width as to hold as nearly as possible 11 quarts.

The details of the 6-quart basket are:
Veneer.—¾ inches deep inside, cut 16 to the inch (minimum).

Handle.—21½ inches in length, cut 8 to the inch (minimum). One tack in each side of handle at top band. One nail in each end of handle at bottom, nailed securely through veneer into bottom. Put on outside of bands.

Bottom.—¾ inch minimum thickness.
Bands.—Top, ¾ inch in width, cut 14 to the inch (minimum), with 12 tacks; bottom, ½ inch in width, cut 14 to the inch (minimum), with 8 nails. (Tacks and nails in bands exclusive of those specified for handles.) Bands to be drawn tight so as to fit snugly over form.

Material.—To be sound, well seasoned, and free from defects.

Dimensions.—To be in accordance with present Act in all respects except such minor changes as may be necessary in reducing end flare to the minimum which will admit of nesting in bunches of 25 unhandled or in bundles of 4, handled.

PACKAGES FOR OTHER FRUITS.

With regard to the packages for other fruits, the resolutions adopted were: That the legal Canadian prune box be 18x11½x3½ inches, inside measurement. This package is used only by western growers.

That three sizes of berry hallowcks be made legal in Canada, namely, the standard four-fifths quart, the standard two-fifths quart, and the imperial pint, measuring 4¾x4¾ inches at top and bottom and 1¾ inches deep. After considerable discussion, the conference asked for the elimination of the "short" box, which holds one pint, but, owing to its shape, resembles very closely the four-fifths quart. This box was often so used as to deceive the customer into thinking he was getting the larger box. In its place, to fill the need for the western grower, the square pint was adopted.

For the legal Canadian 4-basket crate, the following dimensions were suggested: Baskets, 7½x7½ at top, 3¾ inches deep, 6½x6½ at bottom, all inside measurement; crate, 15¾x15¾x4½ inches, inside measurement.

Other resolutions passed by the conference recommended that the standard Canadian pear box be adopted for crabapples; that the legal Canadian cherry lug be 18x14x5½ inches, inside measurement; and that the American bushel basket be made legal in Canada.

Nurserymen's Market Development.

Supplementing our report of the national campaign for the development of the market for nursery products, and to encourage their more general use, which appeared in last week's issue, page 960, John Watson, Kingston, N. J., for the temporary committee of organization, reports that 126 firms have thus far joined in the move and have pledged $15,000 per annum for a term of five years for its development. Never before have the nurserymen of America so generally approved any cooperative movement or pledged for any similar purpose an equal sum.

Mr. Watson, in discussing the plan, states that while the question is sometimes raised that a market development plan might help one class of traders more than another, it seems hardly possible, as it would be up to each individual nurseryman, through his own energy and ability, to reap as large a share as possible from an increased market. There is no way in which the larger demand for nursery products can be parceled out among different purveyors, and what each will get in the way of business will be the result of his individual efforts. It will be suggested also that this is largely an experiment, but if it is an experiment, it has been tried by a great many other lines, and very successfully. At present we hear the suggestion that flowers, plants and trees are non-essentials. We should have a fund and a publicity manager to counteract the effect of this. A man who puts in $250 a year, may figure he is taking a chance, but if he puts in 50,000 apple seedlings he is likewise taking a chance. If he plants anything at all, he takes a chance. A nurseryman is also handicapped by the fact that he cannot patent or trade mark his stock to distinguish his goods from others. Norway maples are Norway maples, and there is nothing to distinguish A's trees from B's, but if nurserymen combine and make up a fund of $100,000 a year for five years, the laying out of that money intelligently, and educational publicity to encourage the general and generous use of what nurserymen grow, will prove to be the most profitable investment they can make. There is no line of business in which cooperation is so absolutely necessary as the nursery trade, and no industry would be more greatly benefited by an intelligent campaign for market development.

Subscribers to this fund are to meet in Chicago, June 27, to consider plans for a permanent organization and financing the campaign, an equal opportunity being given to all interested to vote on the essential features. A ballot by mail is also being taken.

It has been suggested that the management be vested in 16 directors, eight chosen at large and an equal number chosen to represent eight geographical districts, the selection being in the hands of the subscribers in the several sections, thus insuring adequate representation from all parts of the country. The results of the preliminary work already accomplished, the number and standing of the subscribers enrolled and the amount pledged to date speak well for the assured success of the movement.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Cleaning Up.

The bedding season is over, the year's work is practically finished, the young stock for another year in preparation, and now is the time to clean house. Do not leave a lot of worthless stock scattered around the houses that takes a man's time to water, but what it is desired to save block up all together where it can be watered in a short time, and, above all things, throw out anything that has passed its usefulness. How often have we seen plants that would never have been of any value left standing in the greenhouses until fall planting; neglected, yet taking more or less room, to be thrown out at last, and the houses never thoroughly made ready for the coming crop. Get the plants that need care and attention all together, and clean up the other houses: If the stock is grown in benches, these will need repairing, and if badly decayed take them down and rebuild. Those who have cement benches are fortunate, for they will only need repairs. Throw out all the old soil and clean up under the benches and in all the corners, and throw out any old, rotting boards or pieces of crocks, and thus get rid of the vermin that invariably infest greenhouses. After the benches are cleaned out, give them a good, thick coat of whitewash in which sulphur was mixed while the lime was slacking. The advantage of this is too little appreciated by many growers. It costs but little and the prevention from fungus will often amount to a great deal. After the whitewash has dried throw a few ashes or a mulch of some kind on the benches to protect them from the hot rays of the sun. Give the inside of the house a good coat of white paint; this should be done at least every other year, for the difference in the amount of light in a clean white house and in a dirty one during the dark short days is material, and the increased quality and quantity of stock will more than repay for the expense and labor. Any repairs that the heating system needs should be made at once and the boilers cleaned up ready for fall. Too often the boiler is never thoroughly cleaned out after the last firing, and ashes and clinkers are left lying around in a moist condition, rusting the boilers. The steam boilers should either be emptied or filled, for if the water is left standing rust will form inside just above the water line and rapidly eat into the iron. These are all necessary details to be looked after at the earliest possible moment.

Canterbury Bells.

There is always a demand in the spring for something different than the flowers which the buyers have seen all through the winter, and many growers have a call for some of the forced perennials. Canterbury bells are grown for this purpose, and if well grown find a ready sale. Seeds sown now and grown on in pots, being shifted into larger sizes as may be required, will bloom next spring and help furnish the grower with a variety of stock. They should be grown cool during the early winter, a violet house or one of a similar temperature being about right, and then brought into a warmer house with a temperature of 50° degrees in late winter, where they will produce fine blooms for early spring. By bringing a few at a time into the warmer house, a succession of blooms may be had.

Ardisia Crenulata.

The seeds of ardisia may be sown at any time during spring and, as it will take until another year to grow plants that will fruit, it is not material at which particular time they are sown. The seeds are a little slow in germinating, and it is better to sow them in the manner of sowing cyclamen, about half an inch apart. In early summer they should be potted in 2½-inch pots, and are better grown in a frame than in the greenhouse. In the fall, when brought into the houses, they should again be potted in 3 or 4-inch pots and grown in a temperature of 50°. The plants are of a woody nature and grow slowly, and should not be potted into too large pots, for it is far better to allow the roots to fill the pots before shifting. The following spring they will bloom and should then be potted in 6-inch pots and given a cool location in the houses. After the fruit has formed and grown to good size the plants should be given a good, sunny position, that they may take on a bright color by Christmas. If the plants are grown too warm the foliage will be thin and lack the substance and luster which make them so much admired in the cooler grown plants, and the warmer grown stock gets chilled very easily, when the berries will drop off. The only insect which infests this plant is the brown scale, which, if not destroyed, will cover the plant stem completely. These should be carefully removed and continually guarded against. If there are any old plants that have dropped their lower leaves, the tops of these can be rooted in a similar manner to rooting rubbers, that is, by cutting into the stem and mossing the cut and, after the roots have appeared in the moss, the tops cut off below the moss and potted.

Calceolarias.

A plant that always attracts attention and is as decorative as cineraria or other plants of that kind, and yet but little grown, is the calceolaria. The culture is very similar to that of the cineraria, and is fully as easy. The seeds should be sown at once and shaded until they have produced one or two leaves, when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as large enough they should be potted into small pots and shifted along into larger sizes as fast as required. They should, as soon as well established, be given a light, airy location, not shady enough for them to become drawn, but if in the full sunlight they will have to be watched closely that they do not get dry. They will require cool quarters during the winter, if nice, stocky plants are desired, and under this treatment fine 6-inch pot plants may be had in bloom in early spring that will surely attract attention. For the last potting a good, rich soil will be required, and when they begin to bloom watering with liquid manure will be beneficial. Like the cineraria, they are quickly ruined by aphids, and constant fumigation will be necessary. Many growers stand the plants on tobacco stems, which are renewed as the strength is lost.

Twin Oaks and Rose Meeting Notes.

The accompanying illustrations show the beauty of the rose gardens and perennials at "Twin Oaks," at Washington, D. C., an ideal country seat, which in its perfection is a great credit to Superintendent G. E. Anderson. The group picture, taken at "Twin Oaks," contains men prominent in all lines of the florist trade, nearly each one having a title of some kind. Among them are President Chas. H. Totty, of the Society of American Florists; also four ex-presidents, Wm. F. Gude, F. R. Pierson, Richard Vincent, Jr., who is also president of the American Dahlia Society; John K. M. L. Farquhar, President Benjamin Hammond, of the American Rose Society; John Young, secretary of the S. A. F.;

Professors Corbett and Mulford, of the department of agriculture, and a host of presidential timber for the management of any of the trade organizations from the S. A. F. down.

The Red Cross drive at the Botanic Gardens, in charge of George W. Hess, superintendent of the gardens, was much enjoyed by the visitors. Mr. Hess introduced Hon. Champ Clark, who made a stirring address, in which he told of the great amounts of money that were being appropriated by Congress to win the war. He urged all to give liberally to the Red Cross. There were a number of other speakers, all of whom roused enthusiasm for this cause. President Chas. H. Totty told of the activities of the florists in this work. An American half-cent, coined in 1809, now one hundred and nine years old, was auctioned off by W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., of New York. Spirited bidding was started by R. Vincent, Jr., who offered $10. This then jumped $1 to $3 at a time, being raised by F. R. Pierson, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, W. R. Pierson, C. H. Totty, C. S. Honaker and others until it was finally knocked down to F. R. Pierson for $61. A number of girls sold flowers from trays. There was good music by a military band. Mr. Hess was proud to turn over to the Red Cross nearly $500 as the result of his efforts.

Price Fixing.

The genial John S. Williams, from Mississippi, recently said in one of his Senate speeches: "How have we been attempting to meet most of our difficulties? Why, in a perfectly impracticable way. We have been trying to fix prices. You can no more fix a price than you can moderate the warmth of the sun by a legislative decree. You do one of two things. You fix the price, yes, in a certain sense, because you may keep a fellow from selling higher by threatening him with jail; but if you fix the price too low, you decrease production; if you fix it too high, you breed speculation; and unless you are as wise as God himself you cannot fix it exactly right. Let prices take care of themselves, and then production will take care of itself."—The Farm Journal.

Wedding Flowers and Decorations.

With the advent of June, the month of roses, there is again ushered in—the bride. As if expecting the visit of the lady and her bevy of maids, all nature is at her best; flowers are everywhere, the whole landscape is gay with color—it is truly the blossom time of life.

With such a wealth of material, the florist is called on to show his art in the decoration of the house and lawn.

In many cases the ceremony and reception take place on the lawn under a floral arch or canopy erected on a portion of the grounds adjacent to the dwelling. Should the weather be fair, everything passes off smoothly; but, in case of wet weather, the scene of action is transferred to the house, which must often be hurriedly put in order.

For the lawn setting, a tent-like canopy made of garlands of laurel is effective. A background of palms and cibotium ferns gives a color tone with peonies, Easter lilies or long-stemmed roses, together with a rose-decked kneeling stool, decorates the space admirably for the ceremony and makes a pretty picture for the pleasure of the company while waiting for the bride to appear. The aisle from the dwelling to the canopy should be on the grass, across the lawn, not following the graveled path. Garlands of laurel, decorated with snowballs or other flowers suspended from shepherds' crooks stuck into the ground, should outline the way. A large floral arch may take the place of the canopied enclosure, the garlands of the pathway spreading out and enclosing the limits of the necessary space. The refreshments are generally served at small tables on the lawn, the center of each bearing its more or less elaborate vase of flowers.

If, on account of inclement weather, the ceremony must take place in the dwelling, the decorations will consist of a bank or graceful arrangement of palms and ferns at the place of the ceremony and given touches of color with flowers in tall floor vases placed at intervals. The mantels should have low bowls of flowers. Vases or blooming pot plants, such as well flowered hydrangeas, are very decorative if placed on the seats and ledges. The tops of bookcases and china closets and also the sideboards should have low bowls filled with flower blossoms to harmonize with the furnishings of the rooms. Over all doorways are decorative points that when touched up with garlands of green and color are very noticeable.

Perhaps the flowers that attract the most attention are those carried by the bridal party, and at this time there is great variety to choose from. The bride can carry lily of the valley and roses or orchids, or just plain lilies. All white sweet peas are good in shower effect, as is also the lily of the valley; for the maids blue or pink hydrangeas, with the same colored ribbons in contrast. Baskets made of light material, when nicely filled with any of the above flowers and tied with appropriate ribbons, are an agreeable change from the bouquets. Striking color effects are always good and are sure to make a hit, providing they do not clash with the dresses or millinery. Large shower bunches of pink sweet peas are very effective at this time, as they seem so seasonable, as are also baskets or hats filled with them.

For the buffet dining table, a tall vase of American Beauty roses, if not interfered with by the chandelier, is nearly always a winner. A vase is always better than a plateau on a table of this kind, as there is generally so little room. For the boutonnières there is a choice of lily of the valley, gardenias or sweet peas. The supply men offer very pretty and dainty baskets, with or without handles, for flower-girls, to be carried by bows of ribbon on the arm or held in the hand. When nicely filled, they are very suitable for the purpose.

Church Decorations.

The decoration of the church for the wedding is an important branch of the business. In public such a wedding is always more or less elaborate and in most cases gives the artist an opportunity to add to his laurels and at the same time increase substantially his bank account.

There are as many different ways in which the decorations can be arranged as there are changes of architecture in the churches. In many buildings the platform on which stands the pulpit is high, and the ceremony is performed at the head of the middle aisle on the main floor directly in front of the pulpit. In this case, the platform, not being used, is banked with palms. In many churches the front of the platform contains a wooden, or sometimes a stone, bannister or railing, which will support mossed boards or shelves of cut flowers, with drapings of greens and flowers to the floor. If the platform is without the railing and is three or four feet in height, a ledge or border of pot flowering plants and cut flowers can be arranged to fall over the edge, with the taller palms as a background. There is a general rule to be followed in decorations of large buildings of this character, and that is that everything is to work in together for the general effect; there are certain points to be emphasized, but it is the view that spreads out before one and that is seen at once that pleases. With the ceremony at the head of the aisle, it is nearly always necessary to remove a few of the front pews to make room for the bridal party. A raised platform one foot high, made solid and covered with denim or crash, places the ceremony within the view of all the guests, and is well worth the small additional expense. On this is placed the kneeling stool, which should be well decorated, as it is the central point to which all eyes are turned.

The treatment of the main aisle is important. This may be decorated with punches of flowers and ribbon at ends of every pew or at intervals, or only on the pews reserved for the family and special guests. From one to two arches, or more, placed at regular intervals over the whole length of the aisle, make an elaborate showing. Another beautiful effect is with standards of cut flowers on either side of the aisle at intervals; these can be more or less elaborate. Iron plant stands about three feet high make a good foundation on which to place tall American Beauty wicker vases, which, when filled, make fine standards. Quite tall stands mossed up to resemble tree trunks with cibotium ferns at the top are very effective. If all these are considered too heavy, one-inch poles, painted or wrapped with white cheesecloth, with a more or less elaborate tree or basket of ferns at the top, or just a bunch of long-stemmed roses and a bow of ribbon or chiffon tied to the pole, will be found very decorative. Arches or canopies are sometimes erected at the place where the ceremony is to be performed. The old-time bell is now seldom used, but can be suspended from the arch or canopy.

In the churches where the choristers' pews occupy the front of the chancel the pew ends fronting the audience should be decorated with baskets of cut flowers and greens, or heavy garlands of the same, all arranged so as not to hide the view of the ceremony at the altar. The rear of the chancel each side of the altar will contain the palms in this case, and tall American Beauty wicker vases of cut flowers will relieve the somber green. The altar vases should be well filled with choice blooms and the font with a handsome fern or basket of long-stemmed flowers of the season. The window ledges can also be banked with foliage and blooming plants, and add much to the effect. In many churches columns are to be reckoned with, and these can be garlanded or made to support a climbing rose. Wrap the column with a stout green cord, using small blocks to leave a space behind the cord, and fill this with short branches of laurel. This can be done the day before. Have a lot of roses, stemmed loosely, several together, and as late as possible stick them through the green. If nicely done, the effect of the climbing rose is well brought out, particularly if a pot cover mossed and filled with bunches is placed on a pedestal and the bush appears to be growing from this.

After the company has assembled, the ushers should tie them in with the strip of ribbon across the pew ends. This, by the way, is best done by having the right lengths of ribbon wound on two round sticks about a foot in length. These sticks are painted white or wrapped with ribbon. These rolls are placed in the last reserved pews on each side of the aisles, with the loose ends of the ribbon securely fastened. With this preparation, it is but the work of a moment for two ushers to walk to the rear and fasten the ribbon to the extreme end pews. Another last-minute touch that is worth the trouble is made with a roll of white muslin the length of the middle aisle and from 36 to 48 inches in width. This is rolled on a stick which projects six inches or more from either end, so that it may be carried. The loose end is tacked to the floor or platform where the ceremony takes place, and left rolled up. Just as the bridal party is arriving and the guests are all seated, two of the ushers or two boys selected for the work pick up the roll and carry it down the aisle, the roll unwinding as they proceed, and the other end is then quickly drawn taut and tacked to the floor strip of the front door. This gives a finished path that adds much to the bridal procession.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The secretary during the week just closed made a short trip into eastern territory and found the florists everywhere enthusiastic over the publicity campaign. While liberal contributions had already been made from the sections covered, several additional subscriptions were obtained, and as an endorsement of the work of the society, 25 additions were made to the membership roll. A great deal of newspaper publicity was obtained for flowers in connection with the Italy-America flower day, May 24, and reports so far received are to the effect that a large amount of business resulted for this day.

The campaign fund is still a long way from the point where it was hoped it would be by this time. While many staunch supporters of our project have given liberally, the amount of the fund as it stands today represents but a small percentage of what the trade can and ought to contribute. The giving to the fund need not "hurt"; the money will come back multiplied many times, without the shadow of a doubt. It is not a gamble; on the contrary, it is good business enterprise. It is an organized effort—and it is meeting with great success—to keep flowers in the public mind as essential for home use, and for gifts which are to carry a sentiment. Surely, when just now there is so much propaganda in evidence tending to turn the public mind from the use of flowers, this campaign is an absolute necessity. Were flowers generally tabooed in these wartimes, what would become of the florist trade? For self preservation, if for nothing else, it behooves every florist to contribute what he can to a fund which is providing a defense against propaganda designed to cause the elimination of flowers from home life. Give to this fund so that the efforts of the committee may be continued indefinitely. If you cannot give $10 give $5. If you have already given, just look around you, and think what might have been, had not this defense been launched, then give again. Do not expect the one shot to help you over the top, and do not let the other fellow say that his ammunition has been your protection. Do your bit and take comfort for having done it. What is $50,000 to an industry such as the florists'? And that is the amount aimed for to carry on this year's service. The fund for the year is still only in part subscribed. Just a little thought, just a little realization of the necessity for publicity, and just a little dip into your pocket, Mr. Non-subscriber, and the required amount will be reached. You will be glad that you have done your part, glad that you have had the opportunity to do it. Next year you will be glad to do more.

Publicity Results.

We have now entered upon the sixth month of the active work of the campaign, and from the reports received, our publicity work has resulted in a very visible stimulation of business generally throughout the country. Mothers' day business was heavier than ever before, and this, in spite of rather vicious propaganda designed to cause the elimination of flowers altogether in the observance of this day.

The promotion bureau is getting considerable publicity for flowers through its co-operation with the work of the National League for Women's Service. The bureau is supplying the league with 20,000 signs embodying the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," in blue, green and gold, as nearly as possible as follows:

TO OUR BOYS IN THE HOSPITALS	"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS"	THEY COMFORT AND CHEER
---------------------------------------	-----------------------	---------------------------------

This quantity is the first installment of the league's requirements. Such publicity is in return for donations of surplus flowers which the florists throughout the country, wherever base hospitals are now located or are to be established, are asked to contribute to the branches of the league. The secretary has sent out over 2,500 letters to florists covering the towns where these branches will operate. Some of the hospitals will contain so few soldiers that flower contributions, necessarily, will be small, and entail an expense hardly worth consideration. In large cities, flowers will be contributed collectively, as in New York, so the burden will not be felt. But stop to think of the return benefit—20,000 and more of these signs in public display. Do you not think the public will feel like falling in with the idea of contributing flowers to hospital patients and that they will buy their flowers from the florists and that this movement will keep flowers before the public as among the most essential of essentials, and offset much of the propaganda we are obliged to combat every day?

Such work as this can only come through the organized effort—organization made possible through your subscriptions to the campaign fund. Whatever you give is returned to your advantage, to the advantage of the whole trade.

If you have not already given to the fund, do not hesitate longer. By this time you should be fully aware of the aims of our publicity committees. You have, undoubtedly, already experienced benefit from their work, and will continue to do so. A good deal of money is required to carry this campaign along, and you can help to keep it going without impairing your resources to any noticeable degree. You should look upon it as a small premium on insurance, and charge it on your books as such. And it is insurance! In these times of curtailment, our publicity insures that flowers will not be cut out of the home, except by the very thoughtless. It insures that all movements to belittle the great social value of flowers will be challenged and a greater use of your products encouraged.

Will you not take a little of this insurance? Sit down while the matter is now before you and send in your cheque to the secretary for what you think you can afford. Whatever the amount, it will be most welcome.

Can you use some of our "dealers' helps"—lantern slides for the movies, booklets, stickers, signs, electrotypes for your newspaper advertising? They are all good, and supplied at actual cost.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Florist Service to Soldiers.

No one should consider the florist industry nonessential since 38,000 florists all over the United States have pledged themselves to keep the base hospitals supplied with fresh flowers. What more fitting service could they render to our wounded soldiers?—Philadelphia Ledger.

Store Window Publicity.

How many florists throughout the country are taking advantage of our promotion bureau service in so far as getting interested in our glass signs for window display?

You are losing one of the best means for tying-up to our national campaign by not having this glass sign continually displayed in your windows thereby making a connecting link with our campaign in keeping the slogan "Say It With Flowers" before the eyes of every passer-by.

Can you imagine the accumulative effect this sign would have if every florist's shop displayed the same sign and slogan? Each one would benefit by the efforts of the other. We think enough of it in Boston to keep it in our windows continuously, and we are on one of the best corners of our city.

Now just to illustrate the value of store windows as an advertising feature here are a few facts that you can jot down in your memory. The following valuations include a list of some of the prices stores in New York have asked and received for use of show windows the past year: Drug store, Broadway near Fulton St., $75 per week; Drug store, Broadway and 42nd Street, $75 per week; Drug store, 4th avenue near 23rd street, $60 per week; a hardware store in Grand Central Station charges $100 per month for a window 10x12; a manufacturer of a drug specialty, reports having contracted with numerous small dealers, who agree to give a very small display in their windows one day each week for $15 to $25 per year; a Cincinnati merchant who pays $140 per month rent, charges $100 to windows and $40 to store. A store on Broadway, having 20-foot window frontage by 60 feet deep (1200 square feet) pays $7000, whereas an adjoining store with 30 foot front and 30 feet deep (only 900 square feet) pays a rental of $11,000.

It is reported one of the largest chains of stores in the United States has separated its windows from their stores, the windows being capitalized at $300,000 for the 800 stores, and they sell these windows to themselves or others, using approximately $120,000 of this space themselves. This shows quite conclusively that windows do sell merchandise.

"Say It With Flowers." This valuable glass sign costs you only $1.50. Inclose check to Secretary John Young's office, and you will greatly appreciate the effect this sign will have in gradually influencing new business.

Rusts, Wilt and Fungi.

Dr. Irwin F. Smith, pathologist in the department of agriculture, advises that greenhouse men should fumigate their houses, whenever empty, with burning sulphur. Wet down the benches and woodwork (this is important, as the damp atmosphere makes the fumes more effective), and close all crevices as tight as possible. All manner of fungus and insects are destroyed if this is thoroughly done. All tools, carrying trays, barrows, even the clothing of the men should also be placed in an infected house and treated or allowed to have this fumigation. It should be done at night. The house can then be used the next day.

Progress against wilt and rust of the snapdragon and anything like satisfactory remedies is making little headway. Wilt affects many plants, even asters out of doors, also watermelons and cotton. In these latter plants the trouble has been overcome by cross fertilization, selecting plants that appeared to be the least affected. After several years of selection, resistant varieties are found that showed no effects of the disease. Dr. Smith stated that one time, in certain sections of the south, watermelons were a failure on account of the wilt, but that now, owing to this work of the department, the new resistant varieties were not affected. Rust in wheat has also been combated in this way, and he believes that if someone would take up the snapdragon a resistant variety might be developed along these lines. Very fine flour, dusted on the under side of the leaves in the rust spores, is considered the best remedy so far discovered.

Cyaniding in greenhouses is the best remedy for all insects, except red spider, which it does not seem to affect. The first cyanide he knew of was used by Dr. Woods, of the department, about 25 years ago on a lot of coleus in the government greenhouses that were badly infected with mealy bug. The treatment was a great success.

The official name of the snapdragon rust was said by Miss F. Patterson, of the department, to be Puccinia antirrhina. Prof. George L. Peltier, of the University of Illinois, was said to be making progress in a study of this disease.

BUSINESS SHOWS INCREASED VOLUME.

Everything in this beautiful city is topsy turvy. The population has increased in the past two years from 400,000 to 750,000 and there is great demand for additional dwellings to house the people, but scarcely any material or mechanics with which to build them, everything being taken by Uncle Sam. The government is erecting dormitories for 5,000, and $10,000,000 has been appropriated for additional buildings of a similar character to provide homes for its many thousands of extra employees, made necessary by war activities. With this great influx of people, there has been an increased demand for flowers, making the past season a prosperous one for the craft in all lines. Memorial day business was very good, there being a general cleanup of all kinds of stock. Wreaths of magnolia and galax leaves, decorated for the most part with fresh flowers, palm leaves, and quite a few with the waxed artificial stock, were the leaders. Flags were a feature of many pieces. Peonies were very prominent, probably a third of the cemetery orders being for large single or double sprays of white peonies tied with tricolor ribbon.

NOTES.

Gude Brothers Co. had a large force who turned out an immense amount of work. Over 125 wreaths in assorted sizes were made, the floor of their large store, front and back, being covered with cemetery pieces and piles of boxes of flowers in the early morning of May 30. There is always something doing here, the large force of young men being continually on the go. What is going to happen when all these skilled workers get into Uncle Sam's activities, is a problem that will certainly have William F. guessing.

Z. D. Blackstone's shop was full of activity. It looks very inviting here. A good use was made of fresh oak branches. These were used to decorate the corners and lattice work of the store, being placed in vases of water. These were almost as effective as when colored in the fall. Arranged with sprays of peonies they added much to the appearance. Branches of laurel, in flower, made very effective wreaths and were used also as a filling for other flowers. A very good business was reported here.

The Oehmler Floral Co. reports the season has been very good. Mr. Oehmler just met with a great loss in the death of his partner, Robert L. McMackin, a former valued employee, who had been taken into the firm a year ago. He was only 21 years of age and died of athletic heart, contracted while a school boy. He was very popular with the trade. At the funeral, June 1, there was a great display of flowers.

The Dupont Circle Flower Shop, E. C. Mayberry, manager, is an ideal cut flower store, with windows to the floor the depth of the store, facing the circle. It is a splendid place to display plants. A large American flag in immortelles was a feature. A continuous run of good business the past season was reported.

George C. Shaffer, who has had a very good winter, was full of work for Memorial day. His is a model flower shop. With its windows all along I street, fronting the full depth of the store, he produces wonderful decorative effects. He had found the peonies very good stock this year.

The Flower Store, with its large side windows, J. A. Phillips, proprietor, is another beautifully lighted shop. Mr. Phillips is in charge here, while Mrs. Phillips has opened a branch store in Martinsburg, West Virginia. Mr. Phillips is well satisfied with the season.

Washington is to have a new club called the Washington Gardeners' and Florists' Club, to which only members of the trade or profession will be eligible to membership. A meeting for organization will be called soon.

The S. S. Pennock Co. has just lost one of their best men, Milton Redmond having enlisted in the marine corps. Manager Bauer was full of business, plenty of orders, but much handicapped for help to get them out.

F. H. Kramer, with his nursery and greenhouses, the market stand, two stores and palm garden, has his hands full. Memorial day trade was very good. Five thousand peonies were one item of his sales.

J. H. Small & Sons enjoyed a prosperous season, regardless of the fact that large decorative work had all been done away with on account of the war. Choice pieces of funeral work were a feature, June 1.

Miss Dougherty, of the Louise Flower Shop, was much pleased with the steady increase of her business. This store is as light as a greenhouse and kept well stocked with a good line of choice flowers.

The American Florists Shop at 14th and I streets, Misses J. Ballenger and C. Sauer, proprietors, has a neat and artistically arranged store. They are well satisfied with the season's business.

George H. Cooke was very busy, much good outside plant work having to be turned down for lack of labor. Very good larkspur and sweet peas were a feature of the cut flower stock.

J. J. Leapey had a very good season. A large bedding plant business is done here. His large stock of magnolia wreaths were all sold out Memorial day.

The Leo Niessen Co. has found an active demand for good stock the entire season. The question of efficient help is also a problem with them.

W. W. Kimmell is to give up his retail store and business and devote his entire time to landscape gardening.

Horticultural Society of New York.

A flower exhibition will be held June 15-16 in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden. Outdoor-grown roses and peonies will be the features. Prizes are also offered for flowering shrubs and trees and for herbaceous plants. Schedules are now ready for distribution and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City.

MEMORIAL DAY SALES FALL SHORT.

There were so many garden flowers in bloom this year that the cut flower business for Memorial day was not up to expectations, the amount being about the same as last year. There was a big supply of flowers of all kinds, especially roses, carnations and peonies. The plant trade was very good and anything in bloom sold at good prices. Hydrangeas were seen in abundance and moved very well. Good geraniums in 4-inch pots were in demand and some sold as high as $6 per dozen. Roses seemed to be the most plentiful and prices were low, as everything had to be disposed of at once on account of the extreme heat. Carnations are showing the effects of the hot weather, and most of them are small. Peonies were in full crop some days ahead of time and were in good demand. There were large numbers sold, but at low prices. Some very good lilies are on the market and sell well. Delphiniums, daisies, lily of the valley and calendulas are still to be had, but have very little call. June should be a good month, and most all dealers are preparing for weddings and commencements. The crop of roses should last for some time, which will be a help during the coming month. American Beauties will soon be off the market, somewhat earlier than usual.

NOTES.

The feature of the meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Florists' Association, which will be held at the Seventh Avenue hotel, June 11, at noon, will be the address of the local fuel administrator.

The McCallum Co. received a very nice letter from the Red Cross of New Brighton, Pa., thanking them for the donation of cut flowers they made during the recent drive.

Paul Barber, of the Liberty Flower Store, Steubenville, left last week for Camp Sherman to take up military duties there.

The A. W. Smith Co. has been busy with landscape work and is away behind on orders. Scarcity of help is the cause.

R. A. Blackshaw, representing the Ove Gnatt Co., of La Porte, Ind., was a caller this week.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE UP TO STANDARD.

Memorial day business was good, although no records were broken. Stock was plentiful and the quality good. Bouquets of wax flowers and magnolia wreaths sold well, and practically every geranium that was at all good went at a good price. Many more could have been disposed of had they been available. Department stores, small groceries and fruit stores sold wreaths this year at cut prices and did well. One establishment is credited with disposing of more than 1,000, the supply coming from an out-of-town concern. This is something that the retailer has had to put up with for years, and, while it may help the flower business in general, it decreases his Memorial day receipts considerably. A good cleanup in plants is reported, the growers receiving good prices for their stock. The time of weddings is at hand, and one florist has four orders already booked for one day this month.

NOTES.

Harry Oakley, at his new store on Matthewson street, did a good business, cleaning up well on his heavy stock of magnolia wreaths and wax flower designs.

The sale of vegetable plants continues brisk and good prices are obtained in spite of an overcrowded market.

Olney Williams had a good stock of plants and sold out completely.

BUSINESS SHOWS STEADY GAIN.

The trade among the florists in this city is in a very healthy condition and business is going along steadily. The weather has been ideal for growing stock, both inside and outdoors. Russell's promise to be in large supply. Ophelia, Ward, Radiance and American Beauties will also be in the market in large quantities. The supply of these varieties at present is equal to all demands. Carnations are in large supply and no steady price is being maintained, except for high grade flowers. Matchless is the best white coming in and Enchantress Supreme is the leading pink. Benora, as usual, is always popular, owing to its keeping qualities. Gladioli are becoming more plentiful every day and are in much demand. Peach Blossom and the Bride are the two favorites among the small flowered varieties, while America, Francis King and Panama are the most sought after in the large flowering sorts. Peonies are in great favor here just now and many beautiful varieties are being offered this year for the first time. Sweet peas of all varieties and colors are being received in large quantities. Nothing but the best Spencers are being grown this year. The quality is excellent and good prices are being received. Orchids are not very plentiful at present, and many more could be used if they were obtainable. Gardenias, however, are in large supply and sell well. Anemones are being sold freely and so is Lilium giganteum. Some fine candidums are seen occasionally and meet with much favor. There are plenty of rhododendrons on the market, all of which seem to find a ready sale. Pot flowering plants other than the above are rather scarce, but there is an abundance of Boston fern. Greens are plentiful and cheap.

NOTES.

The range of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., at San Mateo is in particularly fine condition just now. Superintendent McDonald has a very fine lot of young cyclamen plants coming along, which fill several houses. Large blocks of the leading flowering plants are being rounded into shape here for next season's trade. Manager Edwin Hoffinghoff, of the Powell street store, has everything in first class shape.

Manager P. Vincent Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., is receiving a grand lot of peonies at present. The most popular varieties are Lae Calot, Festiva Maxima, Duchess of Wellington and Rubra. Large flowering gladioli are also being handled with fine results, particularly Mrs. Francis King and America.

Percy Ellings, of the Lynch Nursery Company, at Menlo Park, reports the demand for chrysanthemum plants to be far ahead of last season. This firm has been known for years as the leading specialists in this flower in the west, and all the newest and latest novelties are always grown here in large quantities.

Manager J. A. Axele, of the E. W. McLellan Co., says he booked a heavy list of orders for long distance shipment for Memorial day. He is at present receiving a very large cut of Russells and Ophelias, together with other reasonable stock from the company's greenhouses at Burlingame.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has finished planting out his dahlias at his nursery on Guttenberg street. His novelty, Dr. H. L. Tevis, has enjoyed a heavy sale this season. He also has many other very promising seedlings, of which great things are expected this year.

Emile Serveau is a frequent visitor to his store on Fillmore street, having almost entirely recovered from his recent illness. During his absence, the management of the store was in the hands of his son, Albert, who has been associated with his father for many years.

G. Rossi & Co., whose headquarters are on Geary street, near Leavenworth, will have a large stock of Lilium longiflorum and giganteum—besides many thousand gladioli will also be handled by them. The business in green goods of all kinds is heavy.

Shibaya & Tchida have about completed their plantings of chrysanthemums for the coming season. The acreage is about the same as that of last season, and almost the same list of varieties are being grown.

Recordie Lee Murray, at Geary and Larkin streets, says she is well pleased with business and is looking forward to a heavy trade next week. Her store is always attractive and only the best stock is carried.

Henry Goertzshain of the Redwood City Nursery, is doing a very good business at his new store on the state highway near Redwood City and wholesales his surplus stock in this market.

Almon Wheeler, of the Buehl-Wheeler Nursery Co., of San Jose, called on the trade here during the past week. His firm is probably the largest growers of field grown roses in the west.

Martin Poss, of San Mateo, is busily engaged in shipping bedding plants and attending to his landscape work. He is greatly pleased with this season's business thus far.

Henry Maier, of the Hillsborough Nurseries, is sending in a fine lot of Russell roses to this market. All his roses are looking in the finest condition.

Frank Mills, of Palo Alto, is sending some very fine Spencer sweet peas to this market. His carnation cut promises to be in full crop for next week.

Frank Clavere, the Polk street florist, says business keeps up steadily at his establishment. A choice lot of stock is always carried.

Arthur Cann, of San Jose, was a visitor this week. He reports trade as very satisfactory.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—The Minnesota Garden Flower Society held a very successful plant and flower show at Holm & Olson's store, May 23.

GALESBURG, ILL.—I. L. Pillsbury, well-known florist of this city, has been successfully operated upon for a cataract on his eye. He has been in the hospital for about ten days.

OBITUARY.

John Joseph Stuppy.

John Joseph Stuppy, secretary of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., in charge of the firm's plant department and recognized throughout the country as an expert grower, his cyclamens particularly being of unsurpassed quality, died at St. Joseph's hospital in that city, June 1. He suffered an attack of tonsillitis two weeks before, which developed into pneumonia, his condition steadily became more serious, and three days previous to his death he was hurried to the hospital in a futile attempt to save his life. He was 33 years of age.

John Joseph Stuppy, who had been a resident of St. Joseph since his birth, was the son of the late Laurence J. Stuppy, founder of what has grown to be one of the best known florist firms in the middle west, the family being early settlers. He was educated in the public schools of the city and at St. Mary's College, St. Mary's, Kan., graduating at the age of 16 years. Soon after, he entered the business with his father and brother, Frank X. Stuppy, and upon the death of Mr. Stuppy, senior, about 10 years ago, he became a partner in the concern with his brother and mother. He had a host of friends both in and out of the trade and was a great lover of outdoor sports, his annual hunting and fishing trips being among his greatest pleasures. He was a prominent member of the Elks' lodge.

Surviving are a widow, two children, his brother, Frank X., his mother, and four sisters. The funeral services were held in St. Joseph's cathedral, with interment in Mount Olivet cemetery. Many beautiful floral offerings followed the remains to their last resting place.

IN MEMORIAM.

A committee representing the employees of the Stuppy Floral Co., consisting of T. H. Best, A. T. Newett, Joseph Novak and C. G. Caster, voices the feeling of those with whom he came in daily contact, in the following tribute:

"He was a man of high moral standards and was loved by all who knew him. As an employer, he was peerless, being an associate and companion instead of merely 'the boss.' Many times he gave up opportunities to attend social functions to be with the employees at their parties and entertainments and often himself arranged and assisted in many affairs for their enjoyment.

"The employees of the Stuppy Floral Co. are deeply grieved over his death. His absence will be keenly felt and he will be sincerely missed."

PANA, ILL.—The A. N. Neilson Corporation has purchased five acres of land here and will erect a large garage.

WINSTEAD, CONN.—Joseph D. Norton, a well-known florist of this city, was killed in a runaway accident, May 22.

HAMILTON, ONT.—Charles W. Collins, florist, a resident of this city for a quarter of a century, died May 20, following a short illness.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—Mrs. H. E. Philpott died at Victoria, B. C., June 6. Funeral services will be held at the Winnipeg home of the deceased, June 9.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—The United States Cut Flower Co. has decided to close its range next winter, not being able to operate on one-half of its normal coal supply.

It is reported florists' wire designs are considered non-essentials under the recent government ruling affecting steel products.

Glass Prices to Be Advanced.

Pittsburgh—Glass manufacturers declare that substantial price advances will be made in the near future. The reasons for the higher prices are increased demand upon an industry whose output has been curtailed because of governmental restrictions as to output and the 25 per cent advance in freight rates which goes into effect June 25.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

Mrs. Julius Roehrs, president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, has appointed Mrs. Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., as treasurer to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., appointed secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. George W. Smith.

The flowers stay in color for from six to eight weeks, and are carried for three months, just as are the flowers of Hydrangea paniculata.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Federal Horticultural Board Hearing.

To one who has nothing at stake, but listened to the opening and closing remarks of the chairman, it was evident that the board were there with open minds and wanted all the information, particularly from practical men, that they could get. The scientists, members of experiment stations and forestry associations formed at least three-fourths of the assemblage of about 150 present, all of whom were armed with statistics and costs of damage by the almost endless number of insect and fungoid diseases, almost all of which, they said, had been brought into the country on imported plants or in balls of earth about the roots. One speaker declared that it was costing the country in the damage caused by these various pests and efforts to eradicate them $1,000,000 a day.

While the plantmen and nurserymen, represented by J. K. M. L. Farquhar and Wm. Pitkin, stated their cases well, they did not attempt to question the great depredations as depicted by the other side. Ten years ago the San Jose scale was going, it was claimed, to destroy all the apple and many other fruit trees, but apples at this date appear more plentiful than ever. The contention of some of the speakers, those in favor of the embargo, was that foreign plants, now favorites or considered standard, could be grown just as well here, or other native plants might be substituted for them. This was, in the case of bay trees and other plants, declared to be not feasible, as it took 20 years and longer to perfect large specimens.

Raising of apple seedlings and rose stocks had been tried out in this country, but without success. Our native stock was also declared to be much more affected with disease than the imported.

The board had received numerous papers bearing on the case, many from nurserymen who were in favor of the embargo. None of these were read. After full opportunity for all to offer anything on the subject the facts brought out would be gone over by the various heads of the department of agriculture, who would then make their decision.

Thompson Carnation Co. Sale Postponed.

The sale of the business and personal property of the bankrupt J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., scheduled to be held June 1, has been adjourned until Saturday, June 15, at 2:00 p. m., at the court house in that city. The postponement resulted from the fact that while it is understood there are a number of persons interested in buying the establishment, few were present on the original date, and the opening bid of $3,000 was not raised. The appraised value of the property is reported to be $24,615, and it has been hoped to secure a large enough bid to cover the indebtedness of the concern, amounting to about $18,000.

Coal Order Moderation Possible.

VEGETABLE RANGES MAY GET RELIEF.

There may be another ruling in the coal situation as regards greenhouses before the snow flies. This is in answer to the plea of the vegetable growers, who in many portions of the country have ranges of large houses, which if standing without fire during heavy snows would be in great danger of destruction. There is good authority that this feature and phase of the situation is receiving close attention, with a possibility of a ruling that will afford relief.

American Gladiolus Society.

The ninth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society will be held at Buffalo, N. Y., August 14-17, 1918. This promises to be one of the most interesting gatherings in the society's history and a large attendance is desired. A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., is president and Professor A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y., is secretary.

WAR CONDITIONS

Of Supply and Demand

While there is no doubt the demand for spring bedding and other decorative plants and bulbs will be materially curtailed by the war garden movement, we believe this condition will be fully counterbalanced by the prosperity in the south and the effects of the coal shortage on the greenhouse men of the west, north and east, placing in the market for stock a large number of new buyers not familiar with the sources of supply.

Most of these buyers can be reached at small cost by advertising in The American Florist, and we feel that it will be greatly to your advantage to start this campaign with an advertisement in our columns.

PEONIES ARE IN LARGE SUPPLY.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful, especially peonies, which are arriving in exceptionally large supply in all the seasonable varieties. Home-grown peonies are more plentiful and are gradually becoming a factor in the market. American Beauty roses in the fancier grades are selling at $5 and $6 per dozen with very little stock being offered. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are having a good call and clean up nicely considering the general market condition. Sunburst is arriving in fairly good condition and a few fine Columbia are included in the daily shipments. Roses in general are in large supply, but there is very little good shipping stock available and the large supply of inferior ones will hold the averages down. Carnations are in fair supply with good shipping stock bringing from $2 to $3 per 100 at this writing. Gladioli are in fair supply and clean up each day at $6 to $8 per 100. Lily of the valley is exceedingly scarce and what little stock there is easily brings $5 and $6 per 100. Lilies are in brisk demand in the better grades at $10 to $12.50 per 100 with a few extra select bringing $15. Callas are about done and the same holds true for tulips and other spring stock. Sweet peas are having a good call and so are orchids, which are in fair supply. Some particularly fine white phalaenopsis are to be had and come in handy for the wedding work there is around. Candytuft, stocks, daisies, pansies and other miscellaneous stock are included in the daily receipts, but the list of offerings is not as large as it was a week ago. Green goods are in large supply with the exception of smilax, which is commanding high prices. Business has been rather quiet the past week, but there are signs of improvement at this

Charles Erne, of Erne & Co., received a telegram from the Stuppy Floral Co., June 1, announcing the death of John Stuppy, who was well and favorably known to the trade here as well as elsewhere. The news came as a complete surprise, and the entire trade joined with Mr. Erne in extending their heartfelt sympathy by telegraph to the bereaved family and the concern in their hour of sorrow.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a large and fine supply of white phalaenopsis, which are in brisk demand for weddings and school closings. Cattleyas are in good supply at this house, also, not to mention the heavy receipts of choice Mrs. Chas. Russell roses. The supply department is having a brisk call for wedding accessories, of which it has a most complete assortment.

Hild Bros., well-known florists, of Lake Forest, have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their mother, Marie K. Hild, whose death occurred June 1. She was 80 years old and was the mother of George, Charles, Edward, William and the late Frederick H. Hild. The funeral was held Monday, June 3, at 4 p. m. from Graceland chapel and was well attended.

One of Bassett & Washburn's young office ladies is going to be married next week. The writer has promised not to mention any names, but if you can recall a popular play that appeared at one of the local showhouses recently you will be able to guess who it is. "Along came —."

D. E. Freres has retired from the wholesale commission business, winding up his affairs this week. He left a clean slate, and his many friends wish him every success in his new undertaking, whatever it may be, but hope to see him back with the trade again.

J. A. Budlong is having a brisk call for Double White Killarney, which is grown in quantity at the firm's greenhouses and is a good shipper. Montrose and Champ Weiland are two other roses that are making new friends every day.

Jack Byers, formerly with Zech & Mann, and Leo Koropp, son of L. Koropp, manager of the Ohio Floral Co., have arrived safely overseas, according to Allie Zech, who received word to that effect this week.

Zech & Mann are featuring a good supply of sweet peas and gladioli, not to mention their usual complete line of all seasonable cut flowers. Green goods are in heavy supply at this establishment.

KENNICOTT BROS. CO.

Established 1881

H. B. Kennicott, Pres. J. E. Pollworth, Sec'y and Mgr.

H. Van Gelder, manager of Percy Jones, Inc., reports that the year closing June 1 was one of the most successful his firm ever experienced, notwithstanding the existing wartime conditions.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association has no complaint to make in regard to their May sales, which were away ahead of the same period last year and exceeded all expectations.

Peter Reinberg is cutting heavily in roses, particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell, which is the best shipper now. The shipping trade is holding up remarkably well at this establishment.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner report a record-breaking Memorial day trade, when the total sales were the greatest of any holiday experienced since they have been in business.

The George Wittbold Co. has about 20 stars in its service flog. Mandy Doetsch left for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., this week and Edward Alexander for Macon, Ga.

E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., and William Reid, representing the A. L. Randall Co., attended the Stuppy funeral at St. Joseph, Mo., this week.

R. J. Windler has invested in a new Ford delivery truck.

Kennicott Bros. Co. handled 50 per cent less peonies for Memorial day this year than last, owing to the fact that the crops were late on account of the cold weather.

Wietor Bros. are in good crop with Sunburst roses, which are arriving at the store in good condition. Mrs. Chas. Russell are in fair supply and in good demand.

Fred Lautenschlager, with Kroeschell Bros. Co., is attending the annual convention of the plumbers and steamfitters at St. Louis, Mo., this week.

Sergt. Walter Lamson, formerly with A. Lange, is now overseas, and Martin Nielson, from the same establishment, is with the troops in Georgia.

The John Kruchten Co. is handling a large quantity of peonies in addition to a fancy grade of sweet peas and other seasonable stock.

Hugh Barker, former office employee of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, is now a sergeant in the Thirty-fifth Infantry, stationed at Nogales, Ariz.

J. C. Nielsen, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., is back from a successful southern business trip.

E. B. Washburn, who is with the colors, is stationed at Camp Kelly, Tex.

Harry Gardiner, of A. T. Pyfer & Co., will be called to the colors June 24.

TRADE IS SLOW.

Business is rather quiet. The supply of stock is fairly large, but only a limited part of it is of A1 quality. Prices are low. Roses are fairly plentiful, but as a whole are very poor. Carnations are inferior and have been seriously affected by the heat. Easter lilies are in a fair supply and are selling well. Some excellent rubrum lilies may be had. Splendid gladioli are offered and generally meet with a ready sale. Some excellent snapdragons and delphiniums may be had. Water lilies and coreopsis have made their appearance. Other offerings are a few late peonies, cornflowers, feverfew, sweet peas and callas.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the florists' society will be held Monday, June 10, at the store of the E. G. Hill Floral Co.

Wm. H. Gear, the Vine street florist, donated more than 1,500 carnations to the Red Cross, the sale of which netted several hundred dollars.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some excellent water lilies from the east.

RED CROSS DRIVE BREAKS OVERSUPPLY.

The market was well supplied during the past week until the eve of Memorial day. For two weeks previous the receipts were in excess of requirements, and had it not been for the energetic flower committee of the Red Cross, captained by R. A. Scott, the wholesale houses and retail shops would have been swamped. To relieve this condition, flowers were sold all over the city for the benefit of this worthy organization, S. A. Anderson's store being the downtown base of supplies, and the results were most satisfactory. The sales to the public here, as well as at W. J. Palmer & Son's, Felton's Flower Shop and others were brisk. Trade in general has been good. June weddings are numerous, but the decorations are not elaborate. Two or three the latter part of the month give promise of some good orders. Carnations have been fine until June 1, when they seemed to fade away to nothing. Roses are fair, but they show the effects of the heat. Peonies from the east were here in abundance, the prices ranging from $1 to $2 per dozen. Memorial day found a scarcity of mixed flowers at the cemetery greenhouses. All the peonies were corralled before noon, there being a complete sellout in this item. The downtown stores are feeling the growth of the city with each succeeding year, with a more limited sale of flowers locally, while shipping business and F. T. D. orders show an increase. Good geraniums sold for $3 per dozen in nearly all places, and there were few objections to the price; in fact, at the majority of the greenhouses 20 cents was the price asked. From all reports, Memorial day trade as a whole was as good as last year.

NOTES.

Graduation exercises at all of the local schools will be much more simple than in other years. One, in particular, where the graduation bunches would amount to $300 or $400, will dispense with flowers entirely. What the high schools will do has not been decided, but the indications point to few flowers and no pre-entertainments.

As the florists will be busy in their houses, there will be no meeting until July, when the president will make arrangements for the annual outing.

Miss Bessie Billanca, of the Colonial Flower Shop, is a very active worker in the woman's motor corps for war work.

BISON.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Herbert G. Walker, of the F. Walker Co., who recently sustained a broken hip in an accident at the firm's garage, is reported doing nicely, but it will be some time before he will be able to return to business.

RHINEBECK, N. Y.—M. E. Bishop has a fine lot of violet cuttings for sale which he expects will be in good demand, owing to the report that many western florists will grow them owing to the new coal ruling curtailing the season's coal allotment 50 per cent. The local violet growers will run 50 per cent of their glass, which will help considerably in taking care of the regular demand next season.

MEMORIAL DAY SUPPLY LIMITED.

Memorial day trade was very good, large quantities of both cut flowers and pot plants being disposed of. There were few peonies offered and lilacs had passed their season. Carnations were of good quality, while the supply was limited, but roses were good and the cut was plentiful. There was a great call for plants for cemetery urns and wreaths for grave decorations.

NOTES.

H. C. Salmon at Mt. Hope cemetery disposed of 2,500 Poitevine geraniums in addition to thousands of other plants for Memorial day.

Wm. T. Dunbar, son of John Dunbar, has enlisted in the naval reserves and will leave shortly to begin training at Pelham Bay.

H. E. Wilson did a large Memorial day business. E. P. Wilson of this firm is, on a fishing trip at Lake Conesus.

MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS AS USUAL.

The market was somewhat short of stocks the past week. Peonies fell off entirely within a few days, carnations are getting poorer in quality, the supply very limited, and roses have been getting scarce. Sweet peas are in low supply, but outdoor varieties are beginning to come in and should help out for a while. Gladioli are not plentiful, but of excellent quality. Outdoor stock is especially fine. Lilies and lily of the valley are equal to the demand. Candidum lilies are going to be scarce this year on account of recent hail storms. A few of very good quality are seen. Orchids have been a drug on the market, even though they were very fine quality. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. Memorial day business was about up to the average, but any increase of business was not noted generally. However, the market was short of stock and would not have been able to supply a big demand like Mother's day. Peonies were a great disappointment. There were not enough to fill a good-sized order, and at that they were all of the "pickled" variety, which is anything but satisfactory. Quite a few made up wreaths of magnolia leaves and prepared flowers were disposed of and proved to be good sellers. The cemetery florists seemed to do a big business, but as a whole the trade was somewhat disappointing.

NOTES.

A. W. Lommell, in charge of the made-up wreath department of the Natural Foliage Co., left on his vacation the day after Memorial day, after putting in a strenuous few months getting out orders. He has gone to his fishing grounds in the north for a three months' stay.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. has a new delivery truck. A novel feature adopted has been a place on the side of the wagon for specially painted signs advertising special days in the flower business, the signs being interchangeable.

The wholesale houses have sent out announcements that they will begin their summer closing schedule June 15. From now on we ought to get some good fish stories.

MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS SATISFACTORY.

From various reports the business for Memorial day was very satisfactory, the demand being very good, the supply equal to the occasion, and at reasonable prices. Due to the extreme warm weather the week previous, some stock, especially that being held, was soft and brought poor prices. The four days preceding May 30 it was cool and wet, which gave the stock a chance to recuperate. On Thursday morning it cleared and it was then that the local business assumed a double-quick pace, thus ending up the month with its two flower holidays as one of the best in a long time. Local tulips were in with lilac just gone and Spirea Van Houttei and snowballs just beginning to bloom. Large quantities of southern peonies, which came through in fine shape, found ready sales and helped to make a better variety.

NOTES.

John Ruppel, who is conducting a general retail and nursery business, with a store at 816 Thirty-fifth street, has taken the position as general superintendent at the Pabst farm at Wauwatosa, which is being planted for residential purposes. He expects the job to last about one year.

The florists' advertising club did its share of publicity in the daily press for the Memorial day business. The next on the programme will be the use of advertising cards in the street cars, in order to stimulate business for commencement exercises and weddings.

Among those in the craft who left for training camps, May 27, were Irwin Harnach, with Wm. Manke & Co., North Milwaukee, and sons of Otto Eggebrecht, Gust F. Baerman and John Ruppel; also Herold Baumgarten.

A. H. Knief, 1905 Vliet street, who specializes in outdoor work, claims he refuses orders nearly every day, due to the trouble of obtaining reliable help and at good wages.

Thus far, the sale of spring bedding stock has been very brisk, and in most cases at increased prices over last season.

SPLENDID DEMAND FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Memorial day trade gave the local florists their hands full and left little to be desired, except more stock and a more elastic capacity for such rush occasions. Weather conditions were all that could be wished for, and the demand was fully up to the record, so it was merely a question of ability to get the stock and handle the trade. Peonies were in fine quality and brought from $1.50 to $3 per dozen retail. Jessamine sold for 35 cents to 75 cents per dozen. Carnations showed their usual sleepy tendency, although there were some really good ones in the market which brought $2 per dozen. Roses, lilies, gladioli and sweet peas about finished the list and cleared out nicely. Prices ranged about as usual on this date, with a slight grading up on fancy stock in most lines. Prepared goods, such as magnolia wreaths, etc., found a fair market. Shipping trade was good, this city being a natural center for quite a territory. The month of May was a busy one for the local florists, and with the prevailing scarcity of skilled help much unfinished work is to be done. Except for a few belated orders, the season's sales are practically over in greenhouse stock.

The members of the trade here heard with surprise and deep regret the news of the death of John Stuppy, of St. Joseph. The Stuppy Floral Co. is well and favorably known to the trade in Wichita and the southwest, and many of the craft enjoyed a personal acquaintance with both John and Frank Stuppy.

PRICES AT LOWEST LEVEL.

The past week had been looked forward to as the time when the demand for Memorial day would make up for the late period of over supply. Very little extra business developed, however, and prices saw the lowest level ever experienced for this period. Peonies, that have formerly brought $6 to $8 per hundred, were sold as low as $15 per thousand, and even lower. The very choicest Festiva Maxima sold at $4 per hundred. Every line was full; carnations were very plentiful, larkspur, calendulas, Easter and calla lilies, snapdragons, sweet peas, cornflowers, in fact, everything seasonable was thrown on the market in large quantities. The wholesalers struggled along under the load as best they could. On account of the hot weather, the most of the stock was soft and not as good as it ought to be for shipping, which outside demand has much to do with the clearance of this market. Monday, June 3, opened up with a good supply, but much of the stock was soft, and particularly the roses were too open. There was really more demand than good stock to fill it. Cattleyas are very scarce, the crops all being off at this time.

CLUB MEETING.

The June meeting of the florists' club had for its feature the paper of Edmund A. Harvey, of A. Harvey & Sons, Brandywine Summit, Pa., on "Coal Conservation and Rotation of Greenhouse Crops." The subject was treated in a broad, comprehensive manner and contained many suggestions of much value to the trade. There was a general discussion on the labor problem, regarding which no one present seemed to have definitely made up his mind. It was voted to discontinue the July and August meetings.

WITH THE WHOLESALEERS.

The first of July is anxiously awaited by many of the trade, who do not seem able to understand or apply the order of the government and are still in doubt as to whether florists are in the non-essential class. Best wake up now and take in whatever reefs are necessary to weather the storm. There is but one slogan and that is, "We must win the war." Every dollar and pound of surplus energy is to be devoted to this cause.

The Jos. Heacock Co., after an occupation of their present commodious store for eight years on a month to month lease, are obliged to vacate and will move to No. 9 South Mole street July 1. This is but a few doors away from their present location. The Killarneys, Hadley, Mrs. Ward and Ophelia are their principal varieties. Business is reported very fair, but at low prices.

The Leo Niessen Co. had handled an enormous stock of flowers last week, but prices had ruled too low, however, to make the business satisfactory. All flowers that graded up, however, were in good demand at fair prices. In fact, much more of this kind of stock could have been sold. Very good Easter lilies and a few exceptionally fine Cattleya gigas were features here.

Good Sunburst and Ophelias were features at Eugene Bernheimer's. Entirely too much stock for the demand had caused ruinous prices. They had,

A freight and express embargo was declared on the Doylestown branch of the Reading road on Monday last. All growers' stock came through by the package service of the company.

Quantities of peonies, and their usual large stock of roses, were features of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange. Stock had been found hard to move the past week.

Edward Reid moved a lot of stock for Memorial day, but prices ranged low. The great stock of peonies and the warm weather accounted for the oversupply.

Maryland roses, sweet peas and Easter lilies were headliners of the Berger Bros. stock. A very fair Memorial day business at low prices was reported.

NOTES.

The annual peony exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, held at Fireman's hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa., was very full, completely filling the hall. In addition to the peonies, there were fine exhibits of outdoor hybrid tea roses and perennials.
There were six large collections of cut roses, many of them with stems three feet in length. Ophelia, Hadleys and the two Killarneys were the leading sorts. The H. F. Michell Co. offered special prizes for specimens of the new Randolph fern. Thos. Long won first and Jos. Hurley was second. The plants were fine. Early vegetables were exhibited by school children for prizes and were a feature of the show.
There was a large attendance.

about the same—a trifle higher in a few cases. There was a demand for about called for. The supply was, on the whole, equal to the demand.

MEMORIAL DAY DEMAND NORMAL.

The Memorial day business was about the same as in former years, but it had little effect on wholesale prices, there being such a heavy supply of stock on the market. In late years, the retail stores of Manhattan have had little business attending the day. There are now, numerous retail stores near to all the cemeteries, and people going from the city can buy from them and be saved the trouble of transportation. Brooklyn always has good Memorial day business. Greenwood, one of the greatest cemeteries of the country, Evergreen, and at least a dozen others, are easily reached from any part of the borough. Brooklyn has also a more settled population than Manhattan, where many of the former homes of old residents, are now owned or occupied by comparative strangers. Around Greenwood, in addition to retail stores, there are a number of ranges of considerable glass area where both plants and cut flowers, but particularly plants, are grown. The same may be said of Middle Village, on the outskirts of Brooklyn, which practically exists on its cemetery business. On the other hand, Woodlawn is the only large cemetery convenient to the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx. As already stated, there was little change in the condition of the wholesale market during the past week. On May 28-29 an effort was made to push carnations to $4 per 100, but it was rather a dismal failure, as by the afternoon of May 29, fair stock sold for $1 per 100. The peony situation was somewhat improved, not from higher prices, but from the arrival of more good stock and less rubbish. Home grown Festiva Maxima and other good varieties are now on the market and are more satisfactory than stock shipped from distant points.

June 1.—After a rather discouraging week in the wholesale district, there was a more cheerful tone to the market today, and as in the past, June has been considered a good month for the florists, it is hoped that the experience of the opening day is a good omen. Good home grown peonies were on the market, and considering the recent demoralized condition in that stock, they brought good prices, that is, from 50 cents to $1.20 per dozen, the latter price being paid for some very select stock. Special American Beauty roses range from $25 to $35 per 100. While many tea roses of poor quality are going cheap, some of the best specials of the Ophelia and Killarney types bring $10 per 100. Good cattleyas were not over plentiful during the week, but the buyers balked on a price above 50 cents per flower for C. gigas. Carnations, particularly whites, were, so to speak, the "fly in the ointment," as thousands of them went to the push carts. "War weddings" are now considered more appropriate and up-to-date than June weddings, and it is hoped they will help the florists.

NOTES.

In our notes of June 1, reference was made to the Greek-American Florists' Association giving up its outing. N. J. Lales, an officer of this association, informs us that there are now 22 of its members serving under the Stars and Stripes, and several more are anxious to enter the service and will be proud to do so. The members are all greatly interested in the Red Cross and other war work, and contributed liberally in the recent Red Cross drive.

S. Masur, of Brooklyn, is attending to the horticultural features of a large summer hotel at Lake Ronconcoma, L. I., which is owned by a member of the Vanderbilt family. He recently furnished it with $1,500 worth of plants. He is performing similar service for the Gedney Farm hotel at White Plains, Westchester county.

At the store of James Weir, Inc., 324 Fulton street, Brooklyn, it was stated that they had a splendid Memorial day business. There is a greater number of homes of old residents in Brooklyn than in any other part of the entire city, and this store, having been long established, has many good customers among them.

W. P. Sears is now well located in his new store, 721 Sixth avenue. It is only three doors from his old stand, where he had been in business about 30 years. In the new store he has more room, better facilities, and a much more attractive front.

Before Justice Fawcett, in the Brooklyn supreme court, a verdict for $10,000 was recently handed down against John F. Marsden, a well-known florist of Far Rockaway. His automobile struck and killed Mrs. Ellen Pelkington, October 23, 1913. Her relatives sued.

George Hoopis, of 601 West 144th street, a young man well and favorably known in the wholesale and retail trade of this city, has taken the position of eastern representative of the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co. of Chicago. He succeeds Frank E. Henry.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on the night of June 10. President Totty and Secretary Young of the S. A. F., and F. R. and Wallace Pierson are likely to relate the experience of their recent trip to Washington.

Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, arranged a fine decoration in St. Thomas' church, June 1, for the wedding of Miss Marion Townsend to Lieutenant Shotter, of the aviation corps, United States Army.

Maurice Kleinemann, who for a number of years has been buyer for Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, is now in the flower department of Abraham & Strauss, Brooklyn.

S. Masur, 256 Fulton street, Brooklyn, stated that he had excellent business, and in addition to other features, had made up a great number of fine wreaths.

William P. Ford, 107 West 28th street, in addition to a great stock of peonies and other seasonable flowers, is receiving a fine quality of delphinium.

Frank Nielsen, the retailer of 17 East 28th street, has recently found it necessary, on account of increasing business, to enlarge and improve his store.

C. Remuzzi & Son, who are located opposite Calvary cemetery, Woodside, had a fine Memorial day business and are doing much cemetery work.

Spiwak & Perlow, of Elmhurst, specialize in plants, including heather and other stock suitable for the Christmas and Easter trade.

Traendly & Schenck are now receiving fine stock of Festiva Maxima and other varieties of peonies from a Connecticut grower.

Rodman & Sons have two good stores at Evergreen cemetery. They had good business in both cut flowers and plants.

Alfred Banhofer, 3047 Third avenue, has an attractive retail store and advises us that he has had a good season.

Charles Beckman, of Elmhurst, is marketing fine lilies and a variety of other stock.

STATEN ISLAND.

At Richmond, a new firm, the Richmond Floral Co., Inc., has shown considerable enterprise, for these uncertain times. They bought the Henry range, over a year ago, but the houses were old and soon collapsed. They immediately set to work and erected four good houses and had them finished and planted for the winter business. They have been cutting a great crop of sweet peas, and are now preparing the beds for chrysanthemums.

The growing business established many years ago, at Port Richmond, by the late Charles Hunt, is now conducted under the firm name of Charles Hunt's Sons. As in former years, they have a great stock of geraniums and other bedding plants, which are selling well.

Christ Reitle, of New Springville, has had good crops of sweet peas and pansies.

JUNE TRADE OPENS PROMISINGLY.

June started in auspiciously with a fine demand for wedding work and the ever-present funeral, and school commencement bouquets, so it promises to be a busy month for the florist. The Memorial day trade brought May foremost among the months of the flower season, as in every instance the demand was heavy and showed a big increase over the business of 1917. This is accounted for to a large extent by the advertising done by the local florists and by the fine growing weather. Stock of all kinds was plentiful. Carnations suffered from the continued hot weather, although prices advanced from 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Orchids were in fine, large supply and Easter and rubrum lilies met with a good call. One outstanding feature of the Memorial day business this year is that plants of every description were in much heavier demand than cut stock. No geraniums in bloom could be obtained from Monday preceding Memorial day, and thousands of orders had to be turned down. Prices for all kinds of plants were much higher than in other years. The sale of magnolia and other wreaths was not a prominent part of the Memorial day sales this year.

NOTES.

Adolph Jaenicke, superintendent of the city greenhouses and city forester, reports that the greenhouses have done $6,000 worth of business in private forestry and landscape work since the first of January, 1918. Mr. Jaenicke has just returned from Ligonier, Ind., where work on the large American service flag and a large Red Cross with 6,000 bedding plants has just been completed for Simon Strauss, millionaire of that city.

Mrs. R. W. Doswell is suffering from a severe illness and has been absent from her post for over two weeks. Memorial day business was much greater at this store this year, with plants taking the lead, although many cut flowers were sold. This firm also did an immense business at the greenhouses which are situated at the entrance to Lindenwood cemetery.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey had a very satisfactory business in cut flowers for Memorial day, cutting many thousands of peonies, orchids, and a fine lot of roses. Many plant orders had to be turned away here, because their supply was exhausted. Tomato, cabbage and other vegetable plants continue to have a heavy sale.

Plants were very prominent in the Memorial day supply of A. J. Lanternier & Co. Hydrangeas, rubrum and Easter lilies, gloxinias and begonias were some of their fine offerings. Miscellaneous flowers sold well for cemetery purposes.

Cut flowers and plants met with about equal call at the store of the Flick Floral Co. Peonies were of mammoth size and roses were also of fine quality. Gloxinias, hydrangeas and begonias took the lead in blooming plants here.

A fine line of pot plants, which were up to their usual good standard, were in evidence at the Freese Floral Co.'s shop for Memorial day and brought good returns. Their supply of cut flowers, particularly peonies, was very large.

Edgar Wenninghoff reports a record Memorial day demand, with peonies very much in the ascendancy. Plants met with a big call. Prices were an improvement over other years.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE GOOD.

Memorial day trade was the best in years with an extra large demand for cut flowers and blossoming plants. Greenhouses disposed of every plant that was showing color and cut flowers, which were not over plentiful, cleaned up wonderfully well at a fair figure. Candytufts and feverfew were good and sold well at 50 and 75 cents a bunch. Lavender and white stock was very scarce and the demand so great that $1 a bunch was the lowest price. Roses were the only flowers that were plentiful and they sold well—12-inch, $6 a hundred; 21 and 24-inch, $12.50 a hundred. Carnations, especially white, were a drug on the market, but these sold before the day was over. Sweet peas were very poor. Easter lilies were plentiful and $10 a hundred was a good price. Large shipments of peonies arrived from the south and cleaned up at $12 a hundred.

NOTES.

Penn, the Florist, had a large business in magnolia wreaths. This firm, one of the heaviest advertisers in the business, sold out completely. They carried a large stock of rose bushes, spireas and geraniums, besides a heavy stock of cut flowers.

After the holiday trade was over, Samuel Wax, of Wax Brothers, spent the week end at the lakes in New Hampshire trout fishing. He was very successful and several of the boys at the market had trout to take home.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. had their best year and the store was kept open continually from Monday until Thursday evening before any of the help were able to go home.

Thos. F. Galvin, Inc., had a very busy trade and went ahead of last year in the demand for magnolia wreaths and bouquets.

Welch Bros. Co. had a very busy week. Their stock of roses, carnations, lily of the valley and orchids was the best in this city.

B. A. Snyder & Co. had a very successful trade. Their shipping demand has increased 100 per cent over last year.

John J. Cassidy reports a large business, and is very much pleased the way trade in general has been.

S. K. G.

Baltimore, Md.

SEASON'S BUSINESS GRATIFYING.

The trade in the "Monument City" appear well satisfied with the past season's business. There are a number of good growers who keep the market well supplied with seasonable stock in variety. Three old established commission houses, and another added this spring, handle this stock efficiently. Manager McKissick, of Leo Niessen Co., is a live wire with a thorough knowledge of the business. His fine stock was, and had been moving in good shape the entire season. Even one or two periods of excess supply, had been weathered without much difficulty.

NOTES.

Samuel Feast & Sons, who have the oldest established retail business and large greenhouses for growing cutflowers and decorative stock, have, notwithstanding the loss of the major part of this latter work on account of the war activities, kept up with last season in the volume of trade. Charles Feast, who manages the store, believes one can overcome most of the war handicaps by meeting each situation as it presents itself and being always on the job.

The Edwin A. Seidewitz shop reported a good year. Wm. E. Seidewitz is interested in collie dogs, having quite a large kennel. His Queen Hectarine, 14 months old, has won 100 prizes at shows during her short life. Mr. Seidewitz sold his Annapolis property, greenhouses and land, May 20 to the Maryland State Emergency Hospital, whose grounds he adjoined.

The Baltimore Cutoffler & Supply Co., Wm. Muhly, manager, who has taken this position the past year, is much pleased with the prospects of the company, which is an organization of growers, formed to handle their own products. They also handle consigned stock.

John Cook has broken the record for May business. The Misses Cook, who manage the store, feel that the future of the cutoffler business is perfectly safe. Theirs is a beautiful shop.

At Mary Johnston's busy shop there is always something under way. The season had not been without its difficulties, but business on the whole had been very satisfactory.

The S. S. Pennock Co.'s stock cleaned up well for Memorial day, although this is not much of a holiday in Baltimore. Manager Perry stated that he was at his wits' end for help.

At Hamilton's pretty store, with its always attractive window, satisfaction was expressed with the year's business. The question of help is becoming serious.

Wm. J. Halliday was another of the satisfied florists who has done very well the past season. He enjoys a high class family trade.

Seick & Glick are the new comers who opened up the last week in March. They are much encouraged with their growing trade.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

CHAS. HOLLENBACH, Chicago, is planning a California trip.

VISITED NEW YORK: C. C. Massie and wife, Minneapolis, Minn.

ALBERT DICKINSON of Chicago is at the Signal Mountain Hotel, Chattanooga, Tenn.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, left this week to join Mrs. Goodwin at New York.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The rainfall for the season to June 1 was 13.83 inches; last season, 15.26 inches.

JEAN SCHAEFFEL, only son of Eugene Schaeffel, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, is with the French troops in Mesopotamia.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade June 5 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.00 per 100 pounds.

THE term "German" millet has been changed to "American" millet by the board of directors of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—William B. Currie, accountant for the Currie Bros. Co., left recently for New York, where he will report for Y. M. C. A. work overseas.

In preparing the new catalogues, the increased freight rates and traveling expenses should not be overlooked when the selling prices of stocks are being revised.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The National Seed Co. has filed amendment to its articles of incorporation, increasing the capital stock from $5,000 to $126,000, and the debt limit to $200,000.

NEW YORK.—It is reported that the Dutch steamer Nieuw Amsterdam is ready to sail from Holland, but is held up there waiting for guarantee of safe conduct from Germany.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Templin-Crockett-Bradley Co., Inc., are adding two stories to their present plant, which when completed, will be one of the best equipped establishments of its kind in the country.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover, cash, was steady, June 3, at $18.25, closing at the same price as on June 1. Timothy was lower for September; old, quoted at $3.67½, September, $4.30, October $3.97½, December $4.07½, March, $4.15.

THE Federal Trade Commission has found the practice of bribing so common, so unfair and corrupt that it has asked Congress to enact a new law penalizing it. In some cases it is reported employees exact a commission of 20 per cent.

VISITED CHICAGO: Edwin B. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., who will spend a month in California; George C. Thompson, of the same firm, enroute to the east; Geo. W. Kerr, with the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., returning from California.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The W. Atlee Burpee Co. reports vegetable seeds have been in extraordinary demand for war gardens, and flower seeds have about held their own. Much more field corn could have been disposed of had suitable seed been available. On the whole, it has been a very satisfactory season. With many of the most experienced employes in the army, and others engaged in munition and shipbuilding plants, the labor problem is a serious one, as it is necessary to pay almost any price to get help of any kind.

California Seed Crops.

San Francisco, May 29.—Lester L. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., says: "In the territory south of this city, where our crops are growing, we have had one of the driest seasons ever known, and a large proportion of our stands are drying out on account of the serious drouth. At San Juan the actual rainfall was less than seven inches, all of which fell the last week in February and the first two weeks in March. Radish, lettuce and endive will be very light, and parsley and salsify total failures. Other crops, grown in the delta regions, or what is called the river country, are looking better, there having been more rain in that section, and less moisture is usually required, the land being subirrigated from the rivers. Carrot, beet and spinach look well at present. As to onion, it is too early to make estimates, as the critical period will not arrive before about July 1. On the whole, the yield in this state will be light this year."

COOL WEATHER BENEFICIAL.

Gilroy, June 3.—L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., reports that crops have been improved by cool weather during May, but it is doubtful whether the soil contains sufficient moisture to carry them to maturity, as rain does not usually fall after the above date.

Nebraska and Colorado Seed Crops.

Waterloo, May 28.—The Western Seed & Irrigation Co. reports as follows: "The season in Nebraska is starting out favorably. While it has been very dry, there have been some good rains during the past 10 days. Corn, generally, is making good stands, but the cut worms are doing damage in some localities and may necessitate some replanting. We are short of acreage in a few varieties of extra early and medium early sweet corn, but hope to be able to cover requirements possibly with other growers, or farmers who may find it too late to replant some of their large varieties, making it necessary for them to put in early sorts.

The acreage of vine seeds, as near as we can ascertain, is much smaller than usual in this state and also in the vicinity of Rocky Ford, Colo., and we are going to be short in about four or five varieties of cucumber and about the same number of muskmelon, although we may get some additional acreage of the former before it is too late. In watermelon, pumpkin and squash we are fairly well covered in other localities, except in a few small lots of the last named, of varieties not generally known. With a favorable season, we look for fairly good deliveries with the exception of the few items mentioned."

CONDITIONS GOOD AT VALLEY.

Corn crops in this vicinity were all planted in good season and the conditions up to the present have been very favorable. The rainfall has been ample and there has been little replanting. It has been extremely difficult to place acreages of vine seed, particularly squash and pumpkin. We believe, however, there has been a fair acreage planted and the condition of these crops, as with corn, is quite favorable at this time.

THE C. HERBERT COY SEED CO.
Valley, Neb., May 29.

American Seed Trade Association.

With what promises to be an unusually representative and large attendance, the thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, which will be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 18-20, will doubtless prove one of the most interesting meetings of that body. The programme, as announced in our issue of May 25, page 954, includes many papers, especially timely, and in the hands of able authorities, while the discussions on matters of vital importance to the trade under present conditions will doubtless bring forth expressions of opinion that will prove determining factors in the lessening of many troublesome problems. The action on the amendment to the by-laws, permitting a change in dues and initiation fees, will also come before the association at this time.

As previously announced, each firm having membership in the association, is requested to notify Secretary C. E. Kendel, 2010 Ontario street, Cleveland, O., not later than June 13, giving the name of the accredited representative who will be in attendance.

Hotel rates are announced as follows: Single room with bath, $2 per day and upward; double, with bath, $3 a day and upward.

Long Island Cabbage Seed.

About 90 per cent of the cabbage seed crop has been lost, the stock being severely frozen during the winter, and but a small portion found to be alive this spring. A number of varieties have been lost entirely as far as the 1918 crop is concerned, leaving but a few that will produce any seed whatever. A planting of spinach has been made under favorable conditions, the crop is quite large, and at the present time the condition is satisfactory.

J. M. LUPTON & SON.

Mattituck, May 31.

French Seed Crops.

Paris, May 4.—The busy season is now over. With labor so scarce, it was a difficult and unsatisfactory period. The short acreage planted is now looking well and it is hoped the crop will be good. Railroad transportation and shipping are very slow, however, and unless these improve before fall it will be no small task to carry on business and satisfy customers.

Onion Set Prospects.

Onion set prospects in the Chicago district were as follows June 3: About 65 per cent of the crop shows a stand of 60 to 75 per cent as compared with 1917; 15 per cent of the crop is below 60 per cent stand; 20 per cent of the crop is 90 to 100 per cent stand.

Prevalence of smut is the cause of the poor stand.

New Jersey Seed Crops.

Prospects at present are for large acreages of pepper and egg plant and an increase in tomato about 25 per cent over normal years. Most of the acreage has been planted, there seems to be a full supply of standard varieties, and the plants are looking well.

EDGAR F. HURFF.

Swedesboro, May 31.

CINCINNATI, O.—Walter C. Renaker, president and principal stockholder of the J. Wilder Seed Co., announces that the business will be offered for sale, owing to the fact that he expects to enter the government service in the near future.

BOSTON, MASS.—R. & J. Farquhar & Co. report excellent business in the seed department. Counter trade was late in starting, owing to a backward season, but came with a rush, making it difficult to handle at times. The demand for flower seeds for 1918 was about equal to that of last year. In vegetable seeds there was a decided increase.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—According to James Vick's Sons, sales for the year, and likewise expenses, have shown large increases over previous seasons, with a possibility that the expense increases will run several laps ahead of those in sales. A big gain is recorded in the demand for vegetable and farm seeds, but there has been a large decrease in lawn grasses. Sales in nursery stock, hardy perennial plants and bulbs, flower seeds and flowering plants have not been as brisk as usual.

Cable Regulations.

New requirements in regard to all messages to and from foreign countries have been issued by the chief cable censor of the navy department. Hereafter cablegrams will not be passed unless the identity of the addressee and sender is satisfactorily established and the text is clear. It cannot be assumed that because a message is clear to the sender, who is familiar with all the surrounding circumstances, it will be equally understandable to the censor, who is unfamiliar with the circumstances. Anyone who willfully uses or attempts to use any code or other device for the purpose of concealing from the censors the intended meaning of any communication is subject to a fine of $10,000 or 10 years' imprisonment, or both.

Catalogue Sizes Standardized

At the session in Chicago of the National Catalogue Conference, including representatives of purchasing agents, typothetae, and various associations, of paper and other industries, called by the standardization committee of the National Association of Purchasing Agents, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That catalogues be standardized to 6 by 9 or 7½ by 10½ or 8 by 11 inches; also resolved that we recommend for catalogues the manufacture of paper sheets ranging as follows, 25 by 38, 32 by 44, and 33 by 46 inches, with their double sizes; that we also indorse the weights of 40, 45, 50, 60, 70, and 80 pounds on the basis of 25 by 38, and that colors be limited to white and natural.

The standardization committee of the National Association of Purchasing Agents recommends that all catalogues meant for the use of purchasing agents be 7½ by 10½ inches.

Farmhands to Be Mobilized.

The war department will mobilize an army of 30,000 farmhands. Starting early next month in southern Oklahoma and Kansas with winter wheat cutting, this army will gradually work its way up into the spring wheat region in northern and northwestern states, finally crossing into Canada to help dominion farmers.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The articles of incorporation of the L. Teweles Seed Co. have been amended to permit an increase of the capital stock to $500,000. Plans have been made to greatly enlarge the business.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—According to the Harnden Seed Co., trade in general has not come up to expectations, the volume being less than in 1917. The number of sales were about the same as last year, but in smaller amounts. It is possible that the adverse weather conditions in April will prolong the season and the difference may be made up in June.

S9. LOUIS, MO.—The Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. reports an active demand early in the season, but adverse weather conditions delayed the early summer buying for several weeks. During the last 10 days there has been a great improvement in the movement of cowpeas, soybeans, millet and cane seed. A large acreage of wheat planted last fall has reduced the space available ordinarily for other crops. Clover, at present, is in excellent condition and farmers in some sections are cutting the first crop.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—An urgent call has been sent to this city for men for work on farms in this vicinity at wages ranging from $40 to $60 per month, with board.

Carlot Shipments of Vegetables and Fruits.

Carlot shipments of vegetables and fruits reported to the United States department of agriculture for the season to May 28 were as follows: Asparagus, 714; celery, 7,812; cucumbers, 1,077; egg plant, 49; green peas, 220; lettuce, 5,819; new onions, 3,353; old onions, 20,103; peppers, 322; string beans, 1,218; tomatoes, 3,202; white potatoes, new, 5,724; apples, 58,164; cantaloupes, 3; grapefruit, 2,878; oranges, 7,870; strawberries, 5,759; watermelons, 273.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

CHICAGO, June 4.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1.25 to $1.85; celery, crate, $4.00 to $4.50; leaf lettuce, per box, 15 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.75 to $2.00; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $4.00 to $5.50.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Celery (Florida), per crate, $1.00 to $4.50; cucumbers, 50 cents to $4.50 per basket; mushrooms, 40 cents to $3.00 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, per package, $1.00 to $4.50; lettuce, per package, $1.50 to $2.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Asparagus of Superior Strain.

A new strain of asparagus that is larger, more uniform and more productive than the old varieties and in addition is highly disease resistant has been developed through 10 years of work by J. B. Norton, a plant breeder in the bureau of plant industry, who introduced, tested and hybridized asparagus from all parts of the world, according to the United States department of agriculture. Introduction of the new strain is expected eventually to stamp out the "rust," a destructive disease that swept over the country a few years ago. Commercial quantities of the new type recently sold in Washington, D. C., for more than double the price of other asparagus.

Plant Trade Disappointment.

The spring plant trade has come and gone, and many hopes and expectations have gone to smash. "Overdone" has been the general verdict. We expected this, and would refer those interested to our notes in these columns a year ago. We said then that another year pansies and geraniums will make the money and not tomato plants. Every one having a hot bed or greenhouse jumped in to the plant game, and "too many cooks spoil the broth," is true again. Owing to scarcity of help, transplanting was not much attempted, most goods offered being seedlings, poorly grown and cheaply sold. As it is, the regular trade has suffered a bad set back in this vicinity (Ohio), which will require some patience and hard work to overcome.

Producers are slow to learn the lesson that it is folly to violently change one's course of procedure. Vegetable forcers can never expect to become rich over night by producing chrysanthemums, geraniums and pansies any more than florists can do so by raising tomato and cabbage plants for an undeveloped market. We should all develop our trade outlet carefully and steadily and avoid these fatal "plunges."

The weather in this section, helped for the final result—too favorable—if we had had a couple of sharp freezes to destroy part of the crops and necessitate resetting things might have come out different. But this is part of the plant trade—to be prepared for reverses.

MARKETMAN.

Parcel Post Shipments Facilitated.

An order was issued, May 29, by Postmaster General Burleson which will simplify and facilitate shipments of farm products by parcel post over a greater area. In lieu of the present restrictions as to the method of packing perishable articles, butter, eggs, dressed fowls, vegetables, fruits, etc., may be sent to any post office that can be reached within a reasonable time without spoiling, packed in crates, boxes, baskets or other suitable containers which will properly protect the contents and prevent escape of anything therefrom. Heretofore eggs could be packed in this manner only for local delivery or from points on local rural routes, and other products to points within the second zone (150 miles). More liberal packing regulations covering liquids are also contained in this order.

Recently the weight limit on parcels was raised from 50 pounds to 70 pounds within the first three zones (300 miles), and from 20 pounds to 50 pounds to all other zones. Beginning with the July edition of the Official Postal Guide, that publication will be revised so that it may be used as a parcel post guide in ascertaining rates of postage on parcels. Space is provided in the list of post offices by states in this publication for the insertion of the zone number after the name of the post office. A zone key will be furnished with each guide. The Postal Guide will be sold by the Post Office Department to the public for 65 cents and an additional 35 cents for the eleven monthly supplements.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President; J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-third annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 26-28, 1918.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—P. J. Lynch was nominated for clerk of the supreme court last week.

FRESNO, CALIF.—The Fancher Creek Nurseries report a heavy demand, especially for fruit trees.

NEW ALBANY, IND.—John K. Graham, veteran nurseryman of this city, is dead at the age of 75 years.

ELDRIDGE, IA.—The Alta Vista Nurseries will in the future be known as Rohlf's Nurseries, to individualize the establishment. There is no change in management.

SHRUBS and vines at Chicago were badly winter killed. Ampelopsis Veitchi on east and south fronts has been damaged in excess of any like happening for 10 years.

WE are in receipt of the thirty-fifth annual report of the board of park commissioners of Minneapolis, Minn., for 1917, an interesting book of 104 pages, handsomely illustrated.

THE state of Illinois has issued an official quarantine against the common barberry (Berberis vulgaris and its varieties) because of its increasing the destructive black stem rust of grains.

YORK, NEB.—Rev. C. S. Harrison, of the York Nursery Co., and well-known horticultural writer, is blind as the result of a ruptured eyeball, caused by a careless nurse, following what had been a successful operation in removing a cataract.

FRESNO, CALIF.—George C. Roeding, president of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, and who recently assumed the management of the California Nursery Co., is well pleased with the business done this season. He is preparing a sufficient supply of fruit trees to meet all demands next year.

FARMERS' Bulletin 938 has been issued by the United States department of agriculture, under the title, "Apple Bitter-rot and its Control." Apple bitter-rot is a serious disease in the southern apple growing regions of this country, especially favored by hot weather, particularly if moist.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Manager J. T. Lynch, of the nursery department of the Hallawell Seed Co., reports the most successful season in the firm's history, the demand for all varieties of roses and fruit trees being particularly heavy. Large shipments of Holland stock arrived recently in good condition.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A civil service examination to fill vacancies in the position of gardener in the parks in this city and vicinity will be held June 15. The examination is divided into three classes and applicants will be rated on past experience and physical ability. The pay varies from $2.50 per day to $70 per month.

American Association of Nurserymen.

CHICAGO CONVENTION, JUNE 26-28.

From present indications, it appears that the forty-third annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, which will be held at Chicago, June 26-28, will be one of the best attended and withal most interesting sessions of the organization. An excellent programme has been prepared, and in addition to a number of interesting papers the various discussions on matters of great importance to the trade at the present time, should bring forth much valuable information and helps in surmounting the various difficulties. The cooperative advertising plan, which has already been so favorably received by the live wires in the nursery business, will doubtless be given still greater impetus at this meeting.

One of the familiar faces at the annual gatherings of the association will doubtless be much missed this year, that of Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., past president, who resigned his office August 15, 1917, as announced in our issue of August 25, that year, page 318, having been commissioned major of field artillery, and who is now with the colors.

Early-Flowering Lilacs.

The earliest flowering lilac here in other years, Syringa affinis, is not blooming this year and there are not many flowers on its variety Giraldii with pale rose-colored flowers. The flower-buds of these lilacs are perfectly hardy and the cold winter cannot be charged with the absence of flowers on these north China plants. They are tall shrubs of loose and rather ungainly habit, but the foliage is good and the flowers are extremely fragrant. Another north China lilac, S. oblata, is blooming well this year although the flower-buds are often injured by the cold of less severe winters. If this lilac always flowered as well as it has this spring it would be one of the most valuable of the whole group for it blooms early, and the pale lilac-colored flowers in short compact clusters are very fragrant. The large broad leaves which are thick and leathery and are not disfigured by mildew turn in the autumn to handsome shades of orange and red. One of the first hybrid lilacs was obtained by crossing this Chinese species with the common lilac (S. vulgaris). The plant obtained by this cross is called S. hyacinthiflora. It is a large, compact, round-topped shrub with leaves resembling in shape those of its Chinese parent and with small clusters of extremely fragrant, pale lilac-colored double flowers. As a garden plant this lilac is more interesting than beautiful. Syringa pubescens is covered with clusters of opening flower-buds. Attention cannot be too often called to this native of northern China. It is a tall shrub with erect stems, small leaves and short broad clusters of pale lilac-colored flowers remarkable for the long tube of the corolla and for their pungent and delightful fragrance. For this fragrance, if for no other reason, this lilac should be found in every northern garden; indeed some persons consider it the most valuable of all lilacs. Although S. pubescens was first raised at the arboretum 36 years ago, it is still rare in this country, for it never produces seeds here and is not as easily propagated by cuttings as other lilacs. It is in bloom nearly four weeks earlier than it was last year. Indeed all the lilacs are early this year, and by the time this bulletin reaches its Boston readers many of the varieties of the common lilac will be in full bloom.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 16, 1918.

Apples of Illinois.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the great show of apples grown in Illinois, to be held next November at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, under the auspices of the State Horticultural Society, met at the exhibition quarters, May 30-June 1, to further plans for the event. President A. W. Brayton, of Mount Morris, says $2,500 has been appropriated for prizes and that the premium list will shortly be ready. A. N. Augustine, of Normal, is secretary.

Correction.

In our issue of last week an error was made in the descriptions under the illustrations of the roses in the Arlington test garden, appearing on pages 973-974, the sub-titles being transposed, the illustration at the top of page 973 being of the baby ramblers, while that on the following page shows the hybrids.

MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS WAS GOOD.

Warm weather during the past two weeks did not help the supply of stock for Memorial day, especially in the peony line, which fell far below the standard. Carnations were quite plentiful, but of poor quality and did not bring as good prices as usual. Roses were very good and quite numerous, but as they had to shoulder the bulk of the burden of demand they did not last long. Lilies, cape jasmines, daisies, hardy phlox and cornflowers were among the other offerings. Take it all in all, business was highly satisfactory.

NOTES.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a heavy shipping business and the trade in general as good as far as the limited supply would permit. They handled a nice line of roses, peonies, daisies, carnations and some fancy home-grown gladioli.

W. J. Barnes says his trade and deliveries were handled in better shape than ever before. His supply in all lines ran short of the demand. His force has been kept working steadily on the bedding business.

A. Newell featured artificial wreaths to an extent and reports the best Memorial day trade in years. He says he handled less stock than in former years, but profits were greater.

A. F. Barbe's place was crowded to the doors and customers lined up on the street awaiting their turn. In addition to much other stock, he sold 1,000 geranium plants.

Samuel Murray had a splendid showing of canterbury bells and hydrangeas. An immense cut flower trade was handled easily and in a most satisfactory manner.

H. Kusik & Co. report their only drawback was the scarcity of stock. Shipping trade was excellent and they had orders for numerous decorations.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports higher priced offerings went best. The demand in all lines was good, and there was less loss than in former years.

Ed. Humfeld put in one of the busiest periods in his career, and a needed rest was taken advantage of when the rush was over.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Dracaena Indivisa.

The seedlings of Dracaena indivisa should now be taken from the flats and potted in small pots and placed in a good moist location that they may make a good growth before the fall. A palm or fern house or one with a similar temperature is the best for the small stock. The four-inch stock that was not disposed of during the spring sales can be either plunged outside or planted in a frame, where they will not demand the close attention necessary in the greenhouse. If planted out they should be potted up early, at least by September 1, when the roots are active and will quickly obtain a foothold in the new soil. They should be heavily shaded for a few days after potting or some loss of the plants may result. Any old plants that have outgrown their usefulness may be propagated, the stems cut up into small pieces and laid in a propagating bed with bottom heat, where the eyes will open and young plants quickly form.

Oleanders.

A plant that does not receive the attention that it should is the oleander. While there probably would not be a large demand for this plant, yet it is an old-time favorite, and well-grown specimens in bloom are a valuable addition to a porch or lawn. They are too often so sadly neglected that they get unshapely and far from being an ornament, but a little attention to trimming them into shape after they get through blooming will keep them in good condition. They can be wintered in any cool quarters, and if brought into the heat and light in early spring will be full of bloom in June and July and a valuable decorative plant. The cuttings root easily and at any time when the plant is in growth, and grow very rapidly for a hard-wooded plant. Any florist carrying a line of assorted stock should include a few of these in the variety which he cultivates. The only insect which troubles them is the mealy bug, but a good frequent hard syringing will soon dislodge them.

Freesias.

A crop of freesias, or a few plants in pots in bloom, at Christmas is a valuable asset on that holiday. In order to have them in bloom at that time the bulbs should be planted by July 1. Select the large, strong bulbs and by careful inspection many will be found on which the root eyes are beginning to swell. These will make the earliest blooming plants, and this selecting will produce plants that will all bloom at the same time. The bulbs should be planted in a good soil enriched with well rotted manure, but no fresh manure; it is a well understood principle that bulbs of all kinds do not grow well in soil full of fresh manure. Eight to ten large bulbs in a 6-inch pot will give the best results. The pots should be well watered and placed in a dark, cool place until the shoots appear above the ground, when they should be given a light location. As soon as the growths get tall enough they should be staked and tied. By continual early selection of the bulbs and keeping the earliest separate, an early strain can be assured.

Nephrolepis.

Probably no plant that the florist grows gives more returns for the labor spent in its culture or the space that it occupies than the Boston fern and its various sports. The old Boston is still, however, the easiest to handle and grow. The plants should be repotted every year, and with good treatment are sure of making nice plants. Any plants that are in poor condition can be divided and with the young stock planted in a bench of good rich soil. The house should be shaded enough to assure of good color on the foliage, but not heavy enough to prevent the house being maintained at a good high temperature. During the day the house should stand at about 80 degrees with a little ventilation, which should be closed down before the sun leaves the houses. The plants can be set 6 inches apart and the soil should be two parts loam, one part leaf mould, and one part rotted manure. The house should be frequently syringed to keep a moist atmosphere. Under these conditions fine plants can be produced from young stock in three months. In September they should be lifted and placed in 6-inch pots, if single specimens are desired, or three or four plants can be placed in a 9-inch or 10-inch pot if larger plants are wanted. In lifting the plants they can be cut around about two inches from the crown, and lifted with a trowel, leaving the runners in the bench if the place they occupy is not wanted at once. The runners will immediately break into small plants which can be placed in flats for young stock for the next season. The finer varieties of this fern, such as Whitmani, do not submit to the lifting and potting as well as the old Boston, and better plants can be obtained by potting along into larger pots as may be required. The only insects that trouble these ferns are the brown scale, and the plants should be kept clean from these by washing or spraying with aphine or a weak nicotine solution.

Poinsettias.

The propagation of poinsettias should be pushed to the utmost at this time, for it is the plants that are rooted early in July that make the best single specimens at Christmas. Those that are rooted later in July and during August will make fine plants for pans, placing four to eight plants in a 6-inch or 8-inch pan, for they will be much shorter than those rooted early in July. The plants that were rooted earlier should now be growing nicely and should be shifted into larger pots as soon as they require it; under no circumstances allow them to become pot-bound until the bracts begin to set in November. They should be placed in the bright sun as soon as strong enough to endure it, that the growth may be short and sturdy and the leaves as close together as is possible. A long drawn plant grown in the shade, with the leaves far apart, is not the typical plant for the holidays and does not meet with approval.

Gloxinias.

The gloxinias that were started in late winter should now be beginning to flower. After the flower beds have set they can be placed in a little shadier location and the danger of burning the foliage be obviated to a great degree. The plants should be spaced far enough apart that they do not touch and a proper circulation of air produced around the plant. If the flowers are to be used in floral work they should be cut as soon as fully open and placed in water away from draughts, and they will keep very well. These flowers are very fragile and should be handled carefully. If there are any particularly beautiful flowers that it is desired to propagate, the leaves can be rooted in the propagating bench by placing the base of the leaf in the sand to the depth of about an inch. The seedlings should be potted along for later blooming.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Commencements are now in full swing, giving, in spite of the "slacker's" plea that it is not the custom to make gifts at this time, considerable work to the florist. Baskets and clusters are most in demand. A sample of each, made up as if for orders, displayed in the case, will often help to make a sale.

A bright dealer once said: "Mark a thing sold, and some one would be sure to want that particular plant or arrangement of flowers, although there were others just as good in the shop. After a little maneuvering, they were allowed to have it, as the selection had been made by the dealer and something else would do, in this case, just as well.

June weddings are still on, and a stock of requisites should be on hand that will fill the bill. The supply houses are always adding something new in this line, samples of which will often secure an order from those who are after novelty.

The backbone of the summer business is funeral work. Made up wreaths of green and bronze magnolia leaves, some decorated with small sago leaves, also entire wreaths of small sago, as well as wreaths of prepared oak leaves, should be on hand in variety, so that in a short time they can be finished with seasonable cut flowers. Even in this comparatively dull season, such preparation counts for a good deal when an extra demand finds one short handed.

Larkspur is now at its best and can be used to advantage in all classes of work. The light blue is particularly effective with pink roses in sprays or basket work. Foxglove, with its well filled spikes of bell shaped flowers in a great range of colors, is splendid for vases, baskets, and sprays. It does not last long out of water and is not a good shipper.

Well filled hanging baskets, that have had a start in the greenhouse, will attract attention and find sale as porch ornaments. Balance them in pairs, hooked to the same cord over pulleys. The ease with which they can be handled, when shown in this way, will often effect sales.

In delivering baskets or bouquets for commencements, concerts, etc., to any public place, it is worth while to get a receipt, as too often a card is lost or the wrong person gets the package, in which case the store, in addition to the dissatisfaction, has to stand the loss.

Hydrangeas in tubs well set with buds, that will flower during July and August, should be in demand for people that can afford them. They are ideal for the lawn or portiere.

Keep water lilies to the front; a good sized, shallow, moss-covered pan, filled with floating flowers that are at their best in the early morning, makes an attractive window decoration. A few open lilies are a good finish to a box of flowers.

Every shop should carry a line of ivory-tinted pottery in pedestals and jardinières. Green or other colored foliage plants look finished and salable in these receptacles, which can be used with good decorative effects about the store and window at this time.

Make another drive for all delinquent accounts. Customers are getting out of town fast these days, and it is either now or November. So make it now, if you can.

Funeral Flower Preparations.

The demand for funeral flowers is the most remunerative feature of the florist business; in fact, some stores do little else, devoting all their energies to securing work of this character. As this business is so important, every facility for the prompt transaction should be always at hand, as very frequently last-minute calls are made which must have instant attention. If, on account of lack of foresight or preparedness, the order is lost, not only is the profit gone, but the reputation of the store also suffers.

It is imperative that wire designs in various sizes of wreaths, crosses and pillows, together with stands to mount the larger sizes, should always be in stock and a sample of each mossed up. In the case of wreaths, a made-up sample or two of galax or magnolia should always be in the case; with this on hand five or 10 minutes is sufficient to turn out a very nice piece of work. If not thought large enough, when placed on an easel or stand 50 per cent is added to its effectiveness and a considerable sum quite out of proportion to the cost, to the price. If, however, the proper sized accessories have to be sent for, this is not possible and the opportunity is lost. Prepared palm leaves and wheat sheaves are standard stock that should never be allowed to run low, as both, with the addition of a few flowers, are quickly made into very acceptable pieces, particularly for the funeral of elderly persons.

One of the most showy designs, which requires scarcely any preparation, is a banking of palm leaves on an easel which is used as a background for a large spray-like effect. Long stemmed roses in one or two dozen sprays, or the same of Easter lilies, can be attached to this background, until gradually a large loose cluster of roses or of the lilies, which, with an appropriate ribbon, finishes out a very showy and effective design. A feature of all such work in which the easel forms an important part, is that nothing is lost, every flower showing in one direction, the full effect being seen at a glance.

When the preference is for a casket cover of which the regulation form would take too much time to arrange, a double spray on a flat palm leaf base can be made up in a very short time. The palm leaves, laid three each way to cover the top of a casket, are wired together in the center and two large loosely tied sprays are fastened to the palms. Where the stems come together the space is filled with more roses, stemmed on sticks, or any desired flower, such as violets, lily of the valley or orchids. A generous bow of ribbon gives a rich finish and a very good hastily constructed substitute for a blanket is ready.

Chiffon or ribbon bows, if made up at leisure moments, are then much more shapely and symmetrical and will keep their shape if packed in a box kept for the purpose. They can be wired or tied to the design in a moment.

Boxes of suitable size should also be on hand as often the order is by phone, and what florist is there without the exasperating experience of being out of a suitably sized box in which to ship something choice that has but a short time to make a train.

Land Security.

In times of war as in times of peace, land is the only permanent thing in the world—the source of all that which is indispensable to life. It is the only security known to man that is immovable, indestructible and imperishable, and when properly cared for and cultivated never fails to increase in principal value, nor to provide its owner with substantial dividends.—Howard Everett.

Zieger & Sons, Philadelphia, Pa.

When, in Philadelphia, quality or something choice, a little out of the common in cut flowers or flowering plants is required, the query frequently is: "Have you tried Zieger's?" Because you are almost sure to find there something odd, little grown, or standard stock that nearly always grades up to the highest notch.

Zieger & Sons, East Washington lane, Germantown, a suburb of the "Quaker City," grow a variety of stock in cut flowers and flowering plants. Several ranges of roses are done well. Cut chrysanthemums get a great finish here, particularly the early Golden Glow, which is exceptionally well done. The method is to start rather late with strong stock set out in tables of good rich soil. The plants are kept on the go from the start. The critical period comes after the first pinch, in the selection of the proper bud. Paper pointers will not help much, experience being the only teacher.

Hydrangeas are an important crop. These have two seasons, at Easter, and a batch later for lawn decoration. The latter are grown in from 12 to 14-inch tubs. The plants are field grown, lifted in late September, tubbed or potted, plunged back in the same soil where they make quite a good root growth and the wood is thoroughly ripened. Before severe frost, they are placed in single row trenches, in a sheltered situation, and well covered with leaves. Here they remain until wanted for forcing. A feature of great importance is, that no pinching or cutting back should be done after July 15 or away goes next year's flowers. The plants must be so protected during the winter that the ripened buds at the ends of the branches are not frozen. The failure to ripen the wood in the fall, so that flowering buds are not produced and allowing the perfected buds to freeze, is the cause of most of the failures in forcing hydrangeas. Another important point is, when brought in for forcing to remove all old foliage, and thoroughly syringe the wood, to remove any matter likely to produce fungi. Light, sandy soil will produce fine plants, but for best results in forcing, a heavier soil, well drained, should be used, which produces stronger growth and larger flowers. Liquid stimulant, after buds are formed, increases size of blooms. The illustration is of a house of plants, mostly French varieties, in 12 to 14-inch tubs, carrying 20 to 25 buds and flowers.

Aquilegias, delphiniums and campanulas have been forced successfully. The first two are lifted and wintered in cold frames and brought inside in January. Campanulas, grown in summer into 1-inch pots, kept in frames, when moved in, are planted out on tables or into 6-inch pots for cutting, or for sale as pot plants. All old leaves and stems should be removed from this herbaceous stock, as they carry fungi, which in damp weather, always start something. This class of plants want to be kept cool, as low as 40°. They will not stand forcing. Kept too warm and subject to drafts, will cause mildew which is hard to manage. They can be flowered easily in April.

A golden yellow lupine is a novelty. Other colors are grown, but this plant has not been found profitable, as it does not move well, and requires to be started in the summer, taking up the house room for 10 months for the comparatively short flowering season.

Rubrum lilies have been found to produce a good second crop of flowers, if given time. After the first were cut here, the plants were planted in the asparagus house, and are now full of growth and buds, which will flower in July.

Asparagus plumosus is grown in four foot ground beds, three rows, one foot apart, plants six inches in the rows. The temperature must be kept from 70° to 75° to get results. Beds last from seven to 10 years. The first few years are best for sprays; later the strong shoots are trained up for strings. Each summer, the beds are dried off, cut back, and heavily manured with cow dung; well dug in. If planted too close, a damp frequently sets in in dull weather, which will quickly spread over the entire house and ruin the foliage. In this range, the glass on the ends of the houses is close to the ground. This space is utilized for a row of Godfrey callas, planted five to a tub. They throw a lot of flowers, as it is cooler next the ground and glass. During the summer, they are planted out side in rows close together without division. They continue their growth, but ripen their bulbs during the hot dry days of August. Early in September, the tops are cut off with a sickle. The bulbs or plants, which never seem to entirely stop growing, are shook out and again planted in fresh soil in tubs and started on their winter campaign in the house.

A new set of cypress benches were interesting. These were reinforced on the inside with cement at end, in corners and on the boards over the cross support. The cement at these points was not more than an inch in thickness. A finish over the whole inside surface was made with a liquid, one-third cement and two-thirds soft ash dust. This was brushed on, and is said to be much better than lime.

An intensive use of space is made previous to Easter; a flat, skeleton staging placed well above beds of asparagus, calendulas and the herbacious stock, affords room on which to spread out and finish rambler roses and other specimen Easter plants. Immediately after the holiday, this is removed.

A large frame outside is filled with gladioli, just coming into bloom; these had been planted in March, close together, well protected from frost. They are well cut out before the field crops are in.

There are many other features here that would interest the average grower. The elder Mr. Zieger is a great lover of plants, very enthusiastic, and yet intensely practical in all that he does. He believes in doing everything well, so as to secure the best price, and at all times have a market for his stock.

Primula Obconica.

This class of primulas appears to be rapidly gaining in public favor, a fact which is not surprising, considering the number of ways in which the variety may be employed. Their keeping qualities and almost perpetual flowering character render them invaluable for winter and early spring decoration, and as a cut flower they hold remarkably well in water.

Chenies Giant Hybrids, a strain of robust constitution, embrace brilliant shades of rose and crimson, the white and pale colors being purposely omitted by the raiser, John Dickson, but the size of the individual blooms and the wonderful trusses of flower make a gorgeous display. Chenies Blue is a strain of chaste and perfect flowers in shades of clear lavender and darker tints, very free flowering and excellent for grouping. Both these strains have been raised in the gardens of Adeline, Duchess of Bedford, at Chenies, Rickmansworth, England.

Primula Eureka, a valuable novelty, also raised in the same gardens, an illustration of which is presented herewith, is akin to obconica, but Mr. Dickson claims to have used P. Sinensis in breeding this variety. The plants are sturdy, resembling sinensis both in habit and size of flower, with leaves of a bright glaucous green, remarkably undulated and frilled, and the brilliantly colored flowers of a rich rosy carmine, shaded cerise, are greatly enhanced by a clear well defined yellow eye; the blooms are of great size and substance, with broad overlapping petals, and are borne in sinensis-like trusses on stout stems, obviating any necessity of artificial support. Eureka is practically perpetual and can be flowered in about six months from seed.

Primula Eureka.

It Resembles Sinensis Both in Habit and Size of Flower.

The entire stocks of the above choice specialties have been secured by Hurst & Son, wholesale seed merchants, London, Eng., who are now distributing them to the trade.

American Peony Society.

The fifteenth annual exhibition of the American Peony Society was staged in the "Victory Tent," Cleveland, O., June 5-6, under the auspices of the Canteen Club of that city, which maintains a large clubhouse for the accommodation of soldiers and sailors temporarily located there. The experiment of staging the show under canvas turned out better than some of the exhibitors thought possible as fortunately the weather the greater part of the time was cloudy and the majority of the blooms remained in fairly good condition until the end of the show. Among the best displays staged were those of B. H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.; G. B. Babcock, Jamestown, N. Y.; Martin Kohankie, Painesville, O.; Knoble Bros., Cleveland, and C. Betscher, Dover, O., besides a number of amateurs including Lee R. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, O.; Edwin C. Shaw, Akron, O.; O. A. Risk, Cleveland; Wm. McClelland, Saginaw, Mich.; A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., and others.

The most sensational feature of the exhibition was the new seedling displayed by E. J. Shaylor, Auburndale, Mass., which was awarded Mrs. Edward Harding's prize of $100. This prize was given to the society three years ago, with the condition that if not awarded within five years, it was to be returned to the donor. Mr. Shaylor, unfortunately, could not be present to see the success of his production. The blooms were sent on by A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass., and after a few hours in water, came up in magnificent form. The flower, which goes under the number, 35, and is so far nameless, is an immense white of very strong growth with leathery foliage, the bloom something after the style of Le Cygne, the famous Lemoine white. The judges unqualifiedly recommended it to the nomenclature committee of the society, who under the conditions of the award, had the final decision, and it was unanimously agreed to award the prize.

HOSPITAL FLOWERS FOR SOLDIERS BEING COLLECTED IN WHOLESALE DISTRICT, NEW YORK.

Seated in the Automobile are President Schenck of the New York Florists' Club and Members of the National League for Women's Service. Standing, with Hand on the Machine, Frederick R. Newbold, of the Horticultural Society of New York and the Red Cross. Standing Behind the Lady Chauffeur is the Representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

Some of the local growers made very effective displays of peonies and other perennials, among them being Knoble Bros., S. P. Baldwin of Gates Mill and Martin Kohankie. In the large classes, those for 100 blooms, B. H. Farr's exhibit easily took first place. The flowers were wonderfully uniform in quality and most of them were shown in very perfect form. Lee R. Bonnewitz, an amateur, also came in this class with a fine display, and G. B. Babcock also had a very interesting group, including a number of A. M. Brand's seedlings and other novelties. There was also an interesting group of Japanese varieties and singles, which attracted a great deal of attention and held up surprisingly well throughout the show. It was quite a gathering of peony notables, among those present being James Boyd, president of the society, B. H. Farr, and others of the eastern growers. A. M. Brand, of Faribault, Minn.; D. W. C. Ruff, of St. Paul, Minn., and others from the western states.

The judging was in the capable hands of A. H. Fewkes, John Van Leeuwen and A. M. Brand.

THE BUSINESS SESSION.

The annual meeting of the society was held following the banquet at the Hotel Hollenden on the evening of the first day of the show. The attendance was better than usual and a very sociable atmosphere pervaded the proceedings throughout. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: James Boyd, Philadelphia, Pa., president; A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass., vice-president; A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., secretary; A. H. Scott, Oak Lane, Pa., treasurer; R. T. Brown, Queens, N. Y., director to serve for three years.

In recognition of his services to peony culture in America, both as a pioneer in the introduction of fine varieties from England and France, and now, in his later years, as a creator of fine seedlings of his own, honorary membership in the society was conferred upon E. J. Shaylor.

It was voted to continue the publication of the news bulletins, which have now been issued twice yearly for three years, and have proved of wide interest to peony growers throughout the country.

The question of canceling the meetings of the society for the duration of the war was taken up, and it was the sentiment of those present that no objection could be made to a society so small as the peony society, and for which so little transportation is needed in connection with the exhibitions, continuing to hold its regular meetings. Several localities were discussed, and it is hoped that it will be possible to arrange to hold the meeting in some centrally located city, possibly Detroit or Rochester.

The thanks of the society were extended to its hosts, the Ohio Horticultural Society, the Florists' Club of Cleveland, and the Cleveland Garden Club, and, in particular, to Messrs. Knoble, Vinson and Baldwin, who constituted the local committee, and to whose unsparing energy the success of the show is mainly due. All the members of the society who had come from a distance felt more than repaid in the delight and interest afforded by the superb and representative display of blooms, as well as by the opportunity of meeting their brother enthusiasts.

Miss Frances M. Steinhoff, daughter of Herman C. Steinhoff, a well known grower of West Hoboken and West Norwood, N. J., has bought the retail store, which has long been known as the "Fernery," located at 426 Hackensack Plank Road, opposite the Hudson Trust Company. In addition to designing and decorating, she is handling shrubbery, etc. Relating to the florist and nursery business, Miss Steinhoff has been trained in a good school, that is to say, by her father, and doubtless she will make a success of it.

Calling recently on Eugene Nehr, 223 Bergenline avenue, we found him busy with funeral work. He is a good designer, and a constant buyer in the New York market.

James Catsules has recently opened a neat retail store at 12 Bergenline avenue.

More F. T. D.'ism.

Just to recall again the importance of our Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. What would we do without it? The past several years have proven the worth and necessity of our organization to those who already belong; but how about the non-member who participates in the receiving of orders and perhaps sends orders with the full knowledge that his orders will receive every attention to fully justify his joining our association?

We should have members in every city and town in the United States and Canada to complete our chain which will give us absolute confidence that every order so transferred will be filled by a member of the F. T. D., which stands for service. To those who are not members allow me to say that the enthusiasm and spirit which is felt at our annual convention is worth all it costs you to join. This feature is growing more and more enthusiastic year after year, and no one can afford to miss them.

Send for membership application blank to Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich., our genial secretary, who will look after all details, and it will be doing something you will always be thankful you did.

HENRY PENN.

National Publicity for Flowers.

A well known gentleman in the millionaire class, and very prominent in New York society, when dining out recently, complimented his hostess upon the beauty of her table decoration. "Well," she said, "I do not know whether rightfully I should use flowers on my table. A good many people are eliminating flowers in their homes during war times, but when I read of the noble work the florists are doing, in spite of restrictions operating against them, I do not see why I should not have my flowers as usual."

And yet there are many among us who do not believe that our publicity for flowers campaign is effective. The fact must not be overlooked that we are getting a great deal of publicity through sources other than our magazine advertising. Our promotion bureau is meeting with success in many other directions, and it is safe to say that no opportunity is lost to exploit our slogan, "Say It With Flowers."

Are you, as florists, using this slogan to the extent that you might? Were we to judge from the demand for our beautiful glass sign, we would have to form the opinion that there are less than 600 florists in the country. Is it realized that this sign, properly displayed, means business for those who display it? Is it not helpful to help one's self? It is hard to conclude that there are thousands of supposedly up-to-date florist stores which are not using this sign—a little trade-bringer that pays its cost in a single day.

Then think of our other aids—lantern slides for the movies, which are handsome enough to hold the attention of anyone with a normal soul, which cost a mere song, and which any motion picture theater will project for you at a trifling charge; booklets which treat of flowers in a manner calculated to make the desire to possess our products almost irresistible; electrotypes for use in your local newspapers, which save you the trouble of preparing good copy yourselves; stickers bearing our slogan which you can affix to anything you send out; and the slogan in transparency form, which which you can transfer to your store windows and doors and also use on the windshields of your automobiles.

It is expected of all in the trade that they lend a hand in this promotion work—make it general. And, can we not urge you, Mr. Nonsubscriber, to get in line with your fellows? Watch our lists of subscriptions that the trade papers so generously publish for us, and ask yourself why your name is not there. Do not be pessimistic in your views. Remember the fate of the farmer who feared to sow his corn because of the crows—he starved to death!

New York Flower Show, 1919.

A meeting of the joint committee of the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club was held June 8, by invitation of T. A. Havemeyer at his beautiful estate at Brookville, L. I. The members were escorted through the extensive grounds by Mr. Havemeyer, and the horticultural treasurers of the place were inspected with great interest. Unfortunately, the lilacs had passed, and the large plantings of peonies and roses had suffered severely through storms. There was, however, a fine display of the giant eremuri, an unusual exhibition to many of the visitors. The many rare shrubs and plants in the different collections commanded the attention which, of course, was to be expected of them. The developments in nature gardening which have been in progress during the last few years were a revelation to all, of the landscapist's fine work, particularly those who were acquainted with the estate before the change was planned; and the engineering facilities in the direction of water supply and so forth astonished many through their completeness.

The business of the meeting, which was held in the Havemeyer residence, was the organization of the 1919 flower show committee. There were present, besides Mr. Havemeyer, F. R. Pierson, Wallace R. Pierson, C. H. Totty, W. H. Duckham, Joseph A. Manda, Edw. Sceery, James Stuart, P. W. Popp, George V. Nash, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., A. L. Miller, John Scheepers, F. L. Atkins, and John Young. The election of officers resulted as follows: Theodore A. Havemeyer, chairman; John Young, secretary, and F. R. Newbold, treasurer. A resolution was passed instructing the secretary to communicate with the International Exposition Co., citing conditions as they exist at present among commercial growers and owners of private places in regard to restrictions placed upon their supplies of coal for greenhouse consumption, and notifying the company that under the circumstances it would be most unwise at this date to decide upon the question of holding a show next year, but that a meeting of the committee would be held in the fall, and if conditions at that time were changed for the better, a definite decision would be announced by November 1 whether the show would be held.

Mrs. Havemeyer was a delightful hostess and assisted Mr. Havemeyer in serving luncheon. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to host and hostess for the day's enjoyment.

On the return trip, the committee visited "Willowmere," at Roslyn, the home of Admiral and Mrs. Aaron Ward, where they were cordially entertained, and enjoyed an inspection of the admiral's famous rose garden.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

EDWARDSVILLE, ILL.—J. F. Ammann's poisoned hand is now much better.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.—S. W. Pike says the business this year is considerably ahead of previous records in all lines.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Of 22 employees of Gude Bros. Co. now with the colors, fully one-half are in service in France or England.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The recently organized Advertising Club of this city has invited the retail florists to join the organization.

DAYTON, O.—J. W. Rodgers was in Chicago June 11-12 purchasing supplies for school and wedding work and says the retail trade has been very satisfactory this season.

Boston.TRADE EXTREMELY QUIET.

The market is dull, business very quiet, with weddings and graduations calling for very few flowers, which are not over plentiful, therefore stock cleans up each day at a fair figure. The help situation is another problem for growers and store keepers to worry about. Many of our boys have enlisted in both branches of the service, and others who have dependents are joining the shipbuilders. Roses are a drug on the market and one grower cleaned out his whole shipment of 20,000 at $30 a thousand, Ophelia, Stanley, Hadley and Killarney, the stems ranging from 9 to 21 inches long. Sweet peas are quite plentiful and sell well at $1 a hundred. Carnations are getting small and poor and $15 a thousand is good money. Peonies are about over; the last few hot days developed them very fast, and they were hard to sell at 75c and $1 a dozen. Francis King, Halley and America gladioli are seen in large numbers, selling for $1.50 and $2 a dozen.

NOTES.

Karl Butcher, buyer for The Rosary, has joined the shipbuilding force at Quincy. The Rosary reports business very good and is very much pleased the way their houses of carnations produced. The past season's cut was 350,000. Among them were Matchless, Ward, Benora and Pink Delight.

Neal Casey, of Casey Bros., Melrose, invited a number of the market boys to the Elks' home, where an entertainment and a supper awaited them, June 7. Among the speakers were Charles Evans and Arthur Parker, who acted the part of a comedian.

B. A. Snyder & Co. are having one of their most successful seasons. They carry a heavy stock of roses, carnations, sweet peas, and orchids.

Wm. Elliott has raised a service flag over his stall at the market with five blue stars, and a gold star for one of his men killed in action.

Arthur S. Parker, of Stoneham, is cutting some excellent sweet peas and reports his field of asters is looking remarkably well.

N. F. McCarthy's auction rooms are crowded each day. A large stock of bedding plants and shrubs can be found here.

Charles Carrigan, formerly salesman for A. M. Davenport, is now located at Penn's on Tremont street.

Welch Bros. Co., reports business very good; in fact, better than other years.

S. K. G.Fort Wayne, Ind.*BUSINESS FAIRLY ACTIVE.

There is a plentiful supply of all kinds of stock, although the quality of many of the greenhouse flowers has suffered from the effects of the hot weather of a few weeks ago. Wedding work was in good demand the latter part of the week, and there was a good call for bouquets for commencements. Funeral work was also in moderate demand. Outdoor flowers are fast finding favor with the flower-buying public. Delphiniums, larkspur, cantebury bells, gaillardias, coreopsis, Spanish iris and sweet williams are the principal varieties now being offered. In the flowering plant line, some handsome specimens of blue hydrangeas are being shown, which bring from 75 cents to $3.00 each. Gloxinias, begonias, and a few baby ramblers are the extent of the variety.

NOTES.

Business during the month of May showed a good increase over the volume of business for May, 1917, or any other previous year. This is explained by the increased demand for flowers for both Mothers' day and Memorial day, when national, and local advertising was used extensively, both by the individual florists, and co-operatively by the florists' club.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held June 19 at a place to be announced later. As this will be the last meeting of the club until fall, President Wenninghoff is desirous of having a very good attendance. Several matters of importance will come up for discussion.

Miss Junetta Schoch has taken the position of bookkeeper with the Flick Floral Co. This firm had 57 corsages for a social event at the country club last week. Wedding flowers have also been in good demand at this establishment.

Edgar Wenninghoff reports the demand for bedding plants for the filling of porch baskets and boxes excellent. Although no blooming geraniums can be obtained, foliage plants and vines are meeting with a fine call.

The Freese Floral Co. had a good week, with funeral work in the lead, and a fine call for commencement bouquets. Mrs. Clara Shoaff of this firm is having a two-weeks' visit from her son Robert Shoaff.

The New Haven Floral Co. is cutting a large lot of Easter lilies, and roses. Both the wholesale and retail demand continue active for this season of the year.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a fine lot of Shawyer roses and Cattleya gigas and Mossiae. They had a good demand last week, especially for orchids.

H. K.Pittsburgh.*STOCK POOR AND BUSINESS DULL.

There is plenty of all kinds of stock on the market at present, but from the appearance of the quality, it will not last long. Carnations are very small and very poor. Only the best grade has any call. Roses have more demand than anything else on the market. They are small and mostly short stems. The dull business of the past two weeks still continues and prices have suffered considerably. There are loads of lilies and they move fairly well. Outdoor flowers are now coming and sell very well, as most flower buyers are very glad to get something different at this time. Peonies are almost over for this season. The peony growers did not have a very successful season, as their stock was in ahead of Memorial day and there were too many other flowers on the market. American Beauties are not moving very well. The flowers are small and not very good.

NOTES.

Edw. Blind is still cutting some very good carnations; in fact, the best that are coming to this market. His plant business was exceptionally large this year.

Tom Silverblatt has taken charge of the flower stand at the Wm. Penn hotel.

C. C. Phillip expects to resume the road duties of Geo. McCallum this week.

A. W. Smith Co. is doing a large business in gold fish and fancy birds.

M.Providence, R. I.*AMPLE SUPPLY AND DEMAND GOOD.

Trade during the past week has been good, with stock plentiful and the supply increasing daily. The peony season came in with a rush, and the few days of warm weather brought them out almost faster than they could be disposed of. The stock brought five cents with three cents the lowest figure. Carnations are coming in slowly and are not very good property, while roses are excellent and sell on sight. Several weddings and social functions have aided in keeping the market fairly well cleaned up.

H. A. T.Cincinnati.*MODERATE BUSINESS REPORTED.

Business is only fair with enough stock to go around, but the supply of good quality is rather short and sells well. The other stock has a poor sale. Roses are in fair supply but the carnations have been badly affected by the weather and as far as quality is concerned are more or less minus. Some excellent formosum, Harrisii and rubrum lilies may be had and choice gladioli are coming into the market and prove good property. Excellent snapdragons and delphiniums are available. Other offerings are water lilies, cornflowers, coreopsis and a few sweet peas.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell now has his new eastern fern. They have been meeting with a good demand.

P. J. Olinger is cutting some excellent formosum lilies. They have been selling well.

Visitors: George Lampert, Xenia, O.; J. J. Thares, of the Ferncliff Floral Co., Springfield, O., and Mr. Cheeseman, New York.

H.Rochester, N. Y.*GOOD DEMAND CONTINUES.

Trade has been quite good, but there was a slight falling off the latter part of the week. Peonies have suddenly come into favor, and the market is flooded with them in the early varieties. Few Festiva Maxima have been seen as yet. Harrisii lilies are superabundant, as are carnations. Columbines, pyrethrums, mignonette, larkspurs and cornflowers are in great demand. Hardy ferns are very poor. The fresh crop is good, but the supply has been limited.

NOTES.

George T. Boucher is making a specialty of stone garden ware and finds sales of plants, boxwood and baytrees are helped very much in this way.

Wm. Ballantine is growing some excellent long-stemmed red dahlias that sell well.

CHESTER.Yonkers, N. Y.

During the Red Cross week, the New York Floral Company, Manor House square and North Broadway, presented the ladies of that organization with 7,000 carnations with the privilege of using their store as a salesroom. The sale netted the Red Cross $405. This concern has one of the finest stores in the state.

Albert Millard, formerly superintendent of the estate of George W. Perkins, at Riverdale, has recently accepted a similar position with Samuel Untermyer at Greystone.

At the store of Mrs. F. Millott, which we believe is the oldest in the city, business continues good.

The Hollywood Florist, 36 South Broadway, has a good store and seems to be prosperous.

A. F. F.The Late William Hay.

William Hay, for many years proprietor of a florist's establishment on Dyer avenue, Providence, R. I., and who later moved to Oaklawn, where he specialized in rose growing for the wholesale trade, died at his home, June 4. The deceased was born in Scotland and came to Rhode Island when a young man, being employed for several years in ranges and later entered business for himself, and at the time of his death had a number of houses. He is survived by a widow and six children. Of three brothers, Daniel Hay is a gardener for the Vanderbilt estate at Newport. James is a florist at East Greenwich and Lawrence, who conducts a florist business in East Providence.

Bulb Embargo—Official.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, telegraphs as follows, June 12: "Bulbs must remain on restricted list for the time being."

Since the original bulb embargo applied only to Bermuda, Japan and China, we assume French and Dutch restrictions remain as per former circular, namely, "When coming as a return cargo from European points, and then only (a) when coming from a convenient port, (b) when loaded without delay, and (c) when the importation from Europe is not specifically prohibited," etc., and this appears to be confirmed in a further message from Mr. Gude as follows:

"Everything is prohibited as the order stands at present unless ship sails with empty space and does not require war labor or time to load and special permits are obtained from both governments for each shipment."

American Rose Society.

The Hartford garden exhibit of the American Rose Society will be held in Elizabeth park, Hartford Conn., at 1:30, June 20. The local committee, consisting of Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., John Huss, Hartford, and Alexander Cumming, Jr., Cromwell, has made plans for a most enjoyable occasion. The Elizabeth park rose test garden is the oldest, and one of the best in the United States, and a visit to it will be a rare treat to all rosarians. In addition to an inspection of the garden, an interesting programme has been prepared and the speakers will be some of the best known American authorities on roses and rose culture. If enough of the members of the American Rose Society remain over night, an interesting trip will be arranged covering the Hartford parks. As the hotels are crowded, those members expecting to remain over night should notify George Lane, 180 Asylum street, Hartford, Conn., who will see that hotel accommodations are reserved. Such notices should reach Mr. Lane before Saturday night, June 15, or early Monday morning. All the Hartford incoming trains on Saturday morning will be met, and the members conveyed to the gardens. Members of the American Rose Society in the east should attend and bring their friends, and everyone should unite to make this meeting one of the big events in the annals of the American Rose Society.

E. A. WHITE, Sec'y.

HARTFORD ROSE GARDEN INSPECTION.

The various local committees appointed in connection with the garden exhibit met in the Municipal building, Hartford, June 7, and arranged a very attractive programme for the reception of visitors on this occasion. The meeting will be held Thursday, June 20. The programme for the afternoon will be as follows:

Meeting at rose garden, Elizabeth park, 1:30 until 3:30 p. m. Auto trip through Hartford parks, 3:30 until 5:30 p. m. Entertainment by recreation department, 5:30 until 6 p. m. Lunch, 6 to 7:30 p. m.

A rose lecture with stereopticon views will undoubtedly be arranged to take place at the Municipal building at 8 p. m.

Visiting members should arrive in Hartford in time to secure lunch before going to the park. Automobiles will meet members at the Union station until 1 p. m., conveying them directly to the rose garden. It is to be hoped that all who can will remain over Friday, as a trip will be arranged to cover the numerous places of interest and beauty with which Hartford is blessed. On the whole, an enjoyable second day may be anticipated.

THE GARDEN EXHIBIT.

This addition forms an attractive wing to the south end of the original rose garden. Forty-eight beds in all have been laid out and planted. These contain many of the newer hybrid teas and climbing roses and will make a splendid showing for a new garden. Among the large exhibitors are Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Bobbink & Atkins, A. N. Pierson, Inc., Henry F. Michell Co., Gude Bros., Adams Nursery Co., as well as local firms and individual members of the society.

WASHINGTON ROSE TEST GARDEN.

On May 27, we stood on a new road looking over level sloping land. In the background was Arlington Heights with the Custis mansion, the one time home of Robert E. Lee, showing through the trees, the national cemetery with its thousands of graves hidden by the trees, the great skeleton frame towers for the wireless telegraphy at Fort Myers, a white marble government building standing out above the trees, and between this ridge and the road, was the rose test garden—all a picture of beauty.

The garden is fenced with a plain wire fence, pathways between the sections, high trellises with climbing roses, many in bloom, beds of various varieties splendid with color. During the three years of work the men in charge certainly have done well. Prof. Mulford, head gardener, Prof. G. C. Corbett and others deserve much praise. The committee of the American Rose Society for this test garden, Robert Pyle, chairman, has looked after its part well.

The large new greenhouses and other structures are a marked change over the Virginia clay roads and fields which we looked at four years ago when some of the autos in which we rode churned up the wet clay and stood still and the party had a taste of Virginia mud which was a new adventure to some. But the time is near when the Washington rose test garden will be one of the many attractions of the capital city of the nation. "A Rose for every home, a bush for every garden." BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Pres.

Express Companies Under Government.

Director General McAdoo of the Railroad Administration has announced that, with a view to handling the express business of the country in the most efficient and economical manner, he has sanctioned the forming of a new company composed of the Adams, American, Wells-Fargo, and Southern, with which he will make a contract for the carrying on of all express business for all railroads under government control. The character of the service and rates will be under the director general's control and subject to initiation by him. Under the new arrangement, the new company is to be capitalized only to the extent of the actual cash and property put into the business, and the government will share on a progressively increasing scale in any profits derived.

The new arrangement will make it practicable to avoid a great deal of wasteful duplication of facilities and to eliminate a large amount of accounting which, while necessary under the old system of separate contracts between the various express companies and the various railroad companies, will be unnecessary under the new system.

Labor Problem Helps.

The labor problem is rapidly becoming more acute as young men subject to the draft are enlisting daily. Now is the time to look about and size up the available material in ones community. Boys and girls can be taught to make themselves very useful in all branches of the craft, as those born to the service, have abundantly proved. Many elderly persons of both sexes, but who are still active, could probably devote a portion of their time to greenhouse or store work, and would, after a little experience, no doubt become helpful and dependable.

TRADE IS IMPROVING.

Business is a trifle better at this writing than it has been and there does not appear to be as much stock as there was last week, but at that there is more than enough to go around. American Beauty roses in the fancy grades are bringing $5 per dozen with very little stock obtainable. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in good supply and are moving nicely. A few Columbia are included in the daily shipments. Roses in general are arriving in large supply but the shipments of real first-class stock in this line is limited. Some of the growers are cutting roses from young stock which is attracting the attention of the buyers, especially the Killarney. Carnations are not as plentiful as they have been. Lily of the valley is in short supply and orchids appear to be holding their own. Lilies are in good demand and no trouble is experienced in disposing of the few callas that reach the market. Peonies are plentiful and are moving as nicely as can be expected considering the general market conditions. Gladioli are in good demand but are none too plentiful. Daisies, gardenias, feverfew, water lilies, cornflowers, candytuft, stocks, pansies, sweet peas, Spanish iris and calendulas are included in the offerings. Green goods are plentiful with the exception of smilax and adiantum. All the wholesalers have agreed to close on Sundays commencing July 7 and will make arrangements to handle all shipping orders on Saturday if the action is definitely decided upon at a meeting to be held this week. The retail florists are seriously considering of closing all day Sunday also.

J. J. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, Neb., and son, Carl, passed through here this week on their way home from Delavan, Wis., where Carl has been attending school at St. John's Military Academy. Mr. Hess was accompanied from St. Paul, Minn., to Delavan by O. J. Olson, of Holm & Olson, whose son, George, graduated at the same school as lieutenant with the highest military honors. He was awarded $100 in gold for being the best all-around cadet.

Zech & Mann's rose shipments now include a limited supply of the new rose, Columbia, grown by the A. F. Ameling Co. at Maywood. Allie Zech and wife will attend the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22, and are planning on making the trip by auto.

Henry Hassen and family, 1742 Rosehill drive, have the sympathy of the entire trade in the loss of their son and brother Elmer, whose death occurred June 8. The funeral was held June 11, at 9:30 A. M., from the home to St. Gregory's church, thence to St. Henry's cemetery.

O. J. Friedman, chairman of the garden committee of the florists' club, has received many complaints that growing plants are being destroyed by malicious boys or Hun sympathizers. J. H. Prost, garden director, has asked police protection that the war measure be not thwarted.

At Peter Reinberg's store Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in large supply and appear to be the principal offering. Champ Weiland continues to attract attention and is gradually being recognized as one of necessary varieties in this market.

Eddie Hunt, formerly with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, who is at the Great Lakes Naval training station, visited his many friends in the wholesale market June 8. He is now taking a special course in gunnery.

John Poehlmann and Kellogg M. Patterson passed through here this week on their way to Camp Pike, near Little Rock, Ark. Both of the young men are well-known to the trade and have just received commissions as second-lieutenants.

Frank Gorly and wife and E. F. Grimm and his cousin, Miss Alice Rush, of St. Louis, Mo., are here on an auto trip. Mr. Grimm has been accepted for military service and is awaiting his call to the colors.

More than 700 maids and matrons have volunteered their services for flower day in behalf of indigent elderly mothers, which is set for June 20. On this occasion flowers will be sold in all parts of the city. The Mothers' Relief Association is responsible for this happy thought and the sale is now an established feature of their programme. The proceeds of these sales bring a bit of cheer to thousands of mothers who otherwise would receive little recognition or comfort in the declining years of their lives. Among the girls prominently identified with the sale are Miss Eleanor Harkness, Doris Clawson, Mabel Cosler, Janet Thorp, Helen Van Buren, Selma Hallberg, Dorothy Newton and Clara Helmcke.

Herbert Stone, with A. Lange, has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred this week.

Vaughan's Seed Store is showing freesia bulbs, well graded, and possibly at the earliest date ever put on sale.

Martin Nielsen, formerly with A. Lange, is now with the colors in Georgia.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, April 6, with a good attendance. Vice-President Friedman occupied the chair, in the absence of President Lautenschlager. The feature of the meeting was a lively discussion on the growing and marketing of stock, in which John Michelsen, O. J. Friedman, Paul Klingsporn, Peter Pearson, Geo. J. Ball, Otto H. Amling, Walter Amling and others participated. Mr. Michelsen claimed it would be better for the trade all around if the retailers took more of the stock off the market in times of glut, displaying it in their stores to attract buyers, and he criticized the amateur and commercial growers of plants for peddling peony and other cut flowers among retailers, to the disadvantage of the wholesale trade. He urged greater co-operation of all branches of the trade, with a view to producing the best possible flowers and securing for them the best possible prices.

Otto H. Amling told of some of the grower's problems, emphasizing the importance of correct knowledge of costs in the production of stock. Without this information, he felt that many growers may slip backward to a dangerous extent without knowing it. Mr. Amling thought that under present conditions roses ought to bring an average price of four cents to be profitable to the grower and carnations three cents.

Mr. Friedman believed the prices of cut flowers could be standardized, so that orchids, for example, could be bought and sold at a uniform figure the year through. It was very annoying to the retailer, he said, to charge his customer 25 cents for a given flower today and $1 for the same flower the following day. Mr. Friedman also spoke of the good work of the Red Cross and garden committees, the latter distributing some 200,000 vegetable plants.

Chairman Waters, of the good-of-the-club committee, announced that the next meeting would be held at Kart-hausen's grove, Rogers Park, July 18. The proposed picnic was abandoned.

The following were elected to membership: Harry Blewitt, Thomas D. Long, Emil Danz, John Frickett, Louis Meuret, Park Ridge, and J. C. Nielsen, 72 East Randolph street.

Vaughan's Seed Store exhibited handsome vases of peonies and irises, the former including Avalanche, Delachei, Festiva Maxima, Krelage, L'Indispensable, Martin Cahuzac, M. Dupont, M. Velie, President Taft, Triomphe de l'Ex de Lille, and many others. The iris collection consisted of Caprice, Candelabre, Celeste, Cherubin, Clio, Crepuscle, Dalmarius, Darius, Dr. Bernice, Edward Michell, Eldorado, Fairy, Honorabilis, Hector, Isoline, Lohengrin, Mars, Monsignor, Mme. Chereau, Pallida Dalmatica, and Pallida Mandaliscae.

Vice-President Friedman, in feeling terms, called the attention of members to the death of the wife of H. E. Philpott, one of the most highly esteemed members of the club, and his associates gave suitable expression to their sincere sympathy in this great bereavement.

BUSINESS CONTINUES GOOD.

The writer has by this time been able to interview every florist of consequence since the big rush occasioned by Mother's day and Memorial day has once more passed into history. Not one has any complaint to make and are agreed that these two days were better than ever, both as regards volume of sales and better prices. The market, which at first threatened to run short, finally revived sufficiently to take care of all demands. All kinds of wreaths sold well on Memorial day. The war has certainly caused no decrease in the demand for bedding plants, shrubs and porch and window boxes as had been anticipated by some florists. The sales were not only more brisk than ever before, but the prices received more profitable. The customary five cent sales of geraniums, so popular at this time before the war, are now a matter of history. They ought never to be revived. The big grower, who sells his stock at retail for what he wholesales it to the retail florist, is doing the latter a grave injustice, and this practice ought to be stopped for the good of the trade. Ferns are enjoying a lively sale at this time, because many of these favorite household plants were lost during the recent cold winter. Bedding plants are still moving at this time, but the stock is nearly exhausted. Those florists who made an effort to increase the sale of seeds, did a very profitable business.

NOTES.

Tom Magee, of the Scottwood Greenhouses, is well pleased with the business he did in bedding plants and shrubs. He has a reputation among flower lovers in this city for producing plants that are really specimens of the best that a modern greenhouse can produce, and at every season of the year, when flowers and plants are in demand, he has very little difficulty in selling out. His geraniums were beauties this year, and were eagerly snapped up by his patrons. He also states that Memorial day surpassed his fondest expectations.

Metz & Bateman, who from the inception of their career, have occupied a room in the Ohio building, will remove after July 1 to 231 Superior street. This firm always did a big business in their present location, but the quarters were too small to allow any great expansion. In their new room they will have plenty of space to take care of their enlarged patronage. Extensive alterations are being made with a view to making their shop one of the most modern in the city.

Schramm Brothers have been doing a remarkable business during the past two weeks in funeral work, wedding orders and graduation flowers. Among the orders were two beautiful casket covers, several large basket orders, and several large weddings. The greenhouses are almost cleaned out of bedding plants. Lawn vases and stands were sold in good variety.

J. L. Shiller's business on Prouty avenue has been growing to such an extent during the past few years that he was forced to take a partner, in order to relieve himself of some of the duties of active management. C. G. Anderson, of Lincoln, Ill., is the new man. He is an expert grower, and ought to be a success in his new position.

The new "work or fight" order of General Crowder will most likely hit some florists quite hard, as they have some of their best salesmen and growers included in this classification. As the war goes on, florists will have to make even greater sacrifices.

The Summit-Cherry cooperative market house, which was recently opened in this city, has added a flower department. Since many people are drawn into this place every day, business should be good at the new department.

WARM WEATHER CONDITIONS FELT.

Summer weather has arrived and can be plainly seen in stock which arrives on the market. Business also has assumed summer proportions to a great extent. The best flowers coming to this market at present are gladioli and roses. The latter in all colors are coming in good supply, but do not last. Russell is the exception to this rule. Carnations are getting very poor and it will not be long before they disappear all together. Sweet peas are of fair quality, but cannot be depended upon. Outdoor larkspurs have been exceptionally good and have a good call. Other outdoor stock has been of good quality and in big supply. New shipments of fancy ferns are arriving and are welcome after using so many unsatisfactory substitutes. Other greens are in good supply.

NOTES.

President Bourdet, of the florists' club, has announced the following committees to take care of the visitors to the S. A. F. convention in August: Hotel—J. J. Benecke, chairman. Finance—Wm. C. Smith, chairman. President's Reception—L. Jules Bourdet, chairman. Entertainment—Frank Windler, chairman. Ladies' Reception—W. J. Pilcher, chairman. Reception—J. J. Windler, chairman. The trustees have been empowered to select a place and date in July to hold the annual florists' club picnic. Everybody looks forward to this annual event, and the committee is striving to make it better and bigger than last year.

Geo. Schmidt, rose grower, who has been with W. J. Pilcher for the last few years, has severed his connection and taken a position with Otto Brueinig, who is running the range vacated by Chas. Steidle, Olivette, Mo.

The landscape gardeners and bedding plant growers had a big season, and are about cleaned out of everything. Good four-inch geraniums were scarce a few weeks ago.

A visitor the past week was Fred Lautenschlager, Chicago, who was in town to attend the plumbers' convention, and incidentally visited a number of florists.

J. J. W.

Kansas City.

SUPPLY POOR IN QUALITY AND LIMITED.

The market is poorly supplied with a run of inferior stocks. Roses are about the best offerings, but that is saying very little, as they are small and open fast. Carnations are very poor and move slowly, with the exception of the arrivals from Colorado. Gladioli are very good, but slow in arriving, and are taken up on sight. Outdoor garden material is plentiful, the quality good, and is playing quite a big part in the trade at present. Lilies are numerous and the quality is fine.

NOTES.

One of the best features seen in this city for boosting the sale of thrift stamps was a sidewalk booth decoration arranged by Mr. Carter, of the Wm. L. Rock Flower Co., in front of that establishment. Each purchaser was presented with a rose donated by the firm.

The amateur flower growers of this city held their annual show at the Baltimore hotel, and the displays were both numerous and unusually good. The attendance was large and the proceeds went to the Red Cross.

The week has been a good one for orders for corsages, vase and arm bouquets, as well as decorations for school commencements.

Growers report a good run of bedding plants still on, which helps to clean up the odds and ends.

This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

BRISK DEMAND FOR QUALITY STOCK.

A demand for good stock, particularly roses, carnations and sweet peas, was the feature of the past week. All flowers of these varieties, that half graded up, brought very good prices for the season. About 75 per cent of the material, however, was poor, without substance or color, would not do to ship, and had, therefore, to be sold, most of it to the street men, at wagon load prices. The few hot days the last of May were very injurious to greenhouse stock. This, coupled with the shortage of labor, which is becoming daily more acute, greatly interferes with the proper care of all inside stock. Sweet peas, particularly, were hard hit, carnations also show the effects of the heat, while a number of varieties of roses have little substance and pop wide open, even in the flower case. Ophelia, Sunburst, September Morn, and Victoria, (the Kaiserin Augusta, part of the name has been dropped), are the best. Ward and Sweetheart are also good summer sorts. American Beauties are almost out of it. There is still a little lily of the valley and plenty of Easter lilies. Peonies from cold storage look very well, all right for the first 24 hours. Outdoor larkspur was never finer, but the market is greatly overstocked. Early sweet peas from frames are seen in limited quantities. The field crops should be in any day. Cattleyas are very scarce at top prices. There are quite a few weddings, at all of which, however, the decorations are far from elaborate. The great demand is for funeral flowers, the business for which, with quite a number of the trade, is perceptibly increasing.

EXERCISING JUDGMENT.

A large commission dealer, in speaking of the quality of low grade stock, which fills the market at times of overproduction, stated that it seemed very difficult to get the average grower to realize, that at such times, he should grade his stock with the greatest care, shipping only the best, and that this should also be bunched with the greatest care, every flower perfect, as one bad or too open a flower will often condemn a whole bunch. The standard method for handling roses is that each 25 of a grade, shall be wrapped in a bundle with paper and tied around the middle with one piece of string. Newspaper will do, but brown paper, cut in correct sizes, with the grade as well as his own designation number stenciled on with rubber stamps is best. The grower who skins in his grading in these packages only cheats himself, as he is soon called to account. Roses put up in this way are not bruised in the handling, are counted 25 at a time, ready for immediate shipping, and carry better than when packed in separate layers. Why is this not the universal custom? Because it takes a long time to shake off the old and establish any new business practice. This is one of the reforms, however, that is fast being adopted.

NOTES.

When attending the Shriners' session at Atlantic City, last week, Charles, Grakelow came to the front again, as the man of the hour. A crowd collected on the beach to help bring in the survivors of the submarined ship, Carolina. One of the lifeboats reached the shore with 29 passengers. They looked so forlorn that Mr. Grakelow, hastily getting the Shriners' band and a few of the clan together, started up the famous boardwalk, soliciting funds. Each time a crowd collected, Charles would make the appeal in his forceful manner and his aids passed the hat. Inside of an hour, a sum of over $1,000 was raised and turned over to the mayor of the city to purchase new outfits for the survivors.

Frank M. Ross had the misfortune to have his new Buick touring car stolen, June 8. It had only been parked a short time on 16th street near Ludlow, next the curb, while he was in the wholesale houses purchasing flowers. It is covered by insurance in every way. He lost another car in the same manner a year ago, but which was later recovered.

Samuel Lilley stepped on a rusty nail and has been compelled to use a cane as a means of support. He was more scared than hurt, and now no more spiked boards are allowed on the floor. Chas. Pappas also leans on a cane. An auto truck laid him out. Charlie is a careful fellow, but somehow could not help this, and is thankful it was no worse.

Wm. Leonard, of Lansdowne, has secured more coal than he knows what to do with. Fourteen box cars of bituminous arrived one day last week and he does not know where to put it, as this is more than his quota. Labor is so scarce with him now that about all that can be done is cutting roses and the watering.

Martin Gannon thinks the flower business in this city would take on a wonderful spurt if the men engaged in it were as good as the United States marines in France.

W. H. Earnshaw is now with the Bristol Shipbuilding Co., Bristol, Pa. Probably a lot more of the trade will follow before long.

Frank Polites has closed his Chestnut street store for the summer.

WITH THE WHOLESALEERS.

Clarence Watson, of the Leo Niessen force, says there is plenty of business for good stock, but a great shortage of this grade. Hot weather and a general slowing up of business keeps prices down. Roses, carnations and larkspur are features.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange lost two men last week. Benny Berman, next to chief Miller, and Raymond Walton, their chauffeur. Choice larkspur, roses and carnations were leading items of the stock.

Berger Brothers had a fair week, but find good stock scarce. Easter lilies, Maryland roses and carnations are handled in quantity.

"A good demand for all roses we can get, and a fair week's business," was the report from Edward Reid.

A fine sample line of ferns are seen at the Jos. Heacock Co.'s. Carl Cortis reports cattleyas very scarce.

K.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The stock at the range of the late M. J. Hannigan is being disposed of by his son, and the business will be discontinued, in view of shortage of fuel and labor.

HEAVY SUPPLY BRINGS LOW PRICES.

The business of the past week was dull and disappointing. Though there were a few weddings, none of them called for a great amount of stock, so funeral work and a minimum of counter trade were the main outlets for the wholesale district. In addition to a heavy supply of roses, carnations and peonies on the market, there was a great quantity of what one wholesaler facetiously called "junk," meaning corn flowers, gaillardias and various other outdoor stock, which sells cheap. It was almost impossible to sell carnations, even the best hanging fire. As for whites and inferior stock of other colors, if sold at all, they went at push cart prices. Though a few good roses brought fair figures, the surplus was nearly as hard to move as the carnations. The bulk of the rose stock was poor, consequently it went cheap. It would seem that wholesalers, who are this season handling large shipments of peonies, will hereafter vote them more of a nuisance than otherwise. The crop is hard to handle, much of the stock is poor and is in the way of everything else. In cattleyas, lilies and lily of the valley, there has been more than enough to supply the light demand and all moved slowly. A fine quality of delphinium, or larkspur, is on the market, which in better times would sell well, but it drags.

June 10.—The market continues in poor condition, with a large amount of inferior stocks.

NOTES.

Professor Thomas N. Carver, of Harvard University and Boston, has written a letter to one of our city papers, of which the following is a part: "Are we a fat or a muscular nation? Is every part of our body politic working to win the war, or is a large part of it wasting itself either in idleness or self-indulgence? Are we wasting a large part of our man power and resources in producing non-essentials, and do those who are producing essentials waste a part of their own and others' time and energy in self-indulgence by buying non-essentials?" Before Cambridge and Boston undertake to reform the rest of these United States, they should be sure that their own houses are thoroughly swept and garnished. It has been charged that a man, long a professor at Harvard, was at the same time drawing a salary from the German government, presumably for his spy work and propaganda. Fortunately, the unholy compact, if such it was, ended by his recent death. If we mistake not, the notorious Dr. Muck, now in a prison camp, was long a pride and pet of Boston. There are many excellent men holding chairs in the universities and colleges of this country, but that gives them no special license to prefer wild and groundless charges against the rest of the people. The professor is harping on the old and much worn string of "non-essentials." We agree that there are non-essentials that cannot help to win the war, and among them are the college professors who produce nothing but wild and misleading statements. Probably, in the opinion of Professor Carver, the florists and other industrious trades are of the earth, earthy, and, therefore, non-essential. We would remind him that all trades and professions—possibly excepting college professors—have a full quota of members enrolled under the stars and stripes, many of them being in the battle lines, and that those they have left at home are giving both time and money to sustain and comfort the boys at the front as well as the unfortunate ones who are in hospitals, suffering from wounds or disease incurred in the discharge of their duty. All the people cannot fight, build ships or make munitions, and there are many things which are not essential in a sea or land battle, but which contribute largely to support, sustain and comfort those who are engaged in war and its industries and help to raise the enormous revenue, so necessary to carry on this war. Figuratively speaking, it is useless to clothe ourselves in sackcloth and put ashes on our heads just because we are in war. Serious as the situation is, and we do not attempt to minimize its seriousness, there should yet be some joy in living. Not the joy of extravagance or over-indulgence, but the joy of doing loyally and well whatever our hands find to do.

The coal question continues to disturb the minds, not only of the florists, but of the whole population that is given to straight and serious thinking. The large coal dealers say that they will not be able to fill the orders already placed before snow flies. There was a general response to Fuel Administrator Garfield's advice to order early, but the orders cannot be filled, the dealers claiming that they cannot get the coal. Joseph M. Bacon, a large Brooklyn dealer, recently said that there was no need of camouflaging the situation, and added: "The distribution of coal depends on the amount of coal we get," which seems to the point.

Frank M. Bradley, a wealthy fruit grower of Niagara county, was elected president of the state federation of agriculture at a convention held in Albany, June 7. Nineteen organizations were represented, among them being the New York State Fruit Growers' Association and the New York State Horticultural Society. The agriculturists and horticulturists are causing uneasiness among the professional politicians and lawyers.

On June 9, the splendid rose garden of Rear Admiral Aaron Ward, U. S. N., retired, and Mrs. Ward at Roslyn, L. I., was thrown open to the public and so continued for the past week. For a number of years this has been an annual event. This year, to swell the fund for the American Ambulance in France, an admission fee of $1 was charged. Admiral Ward's estate is famous, not only for roses, but many other good horticultural features.

An exhibition of peonies and roses under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York, will be held in the Museum building, New York botanical garden, Bronx park, June 15-16. A lecture on "Rose Gardens" will be delivered in the lecture hall of the museum, June 15, at 4 p. m., by Secretary George V. Nash.

Adam Krebs, who has been employed by Leo Klein, of Lexington avenue and 60th street, has enlisted, and been assigned to the quartermaster's department and is now at Fort Slocum.

Charles H. Totty is shipping an exceptionally fine quality of delphinium to Joseph S. Fenrich.

Max Schling says that he is very busy with wedding decorations, funeral and other work.

The club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the night of June 10, President Schenck in the chair. A thunderstorm, which came up in the early evening, caused the attendance to be lighter than usual, but a fair number were present. Resolutions of condolence on the death of James McArdle, long a member of the club, were read by P. W. Popp, and on motion of Patrick O'Mara, were adopted.

President Totty, of the Society of American Florists, reported on the recent meeting with the fuel administration in Washington, saying among other things, that the small growers in the towns and villages throughout the country would be taken care of, the fuel commissioner feeling favorably toward them. The amended rule to cover their case has already been published in THE AMERICAN FLORIST. William H. Siebrecht, Jr., who was also a delegate to Washington, speaking on the fuel question, said that every conceivable argument was used before the commissioner in favor of the florists, even to pointing out that advertisers were allowed to burn coal for illuminated signs, which was less useful than that used by the florist business, which has been classed as a non-essential. Commissioner Noyes, in reply, said that the advertising men had helped the Liberty Loan, Red Cross and other projects to sustain and win the war by their signs throughout the country; also, that the amount of coal used was small compared with that used by the florists. F. R. Pierson, who was also at Washington, spoke in an optimistic vein, saying that he believed that the florists would manage to pull through in good shape, regardless of all difficulties. He also spoke on the efforts of the New York delegation before the federal horticultural board, relating to the embargo on nursery stock.

Winifred Rolker spoke at length and strongly, in opposition to the embargo, giving the result of his interviews with prominent statesmen, and advised the members who could advance any good arguments against the exclusion of plants from foreign countries, to put them in writing and send them to the federal horticultural commission. Patrick O'Mara said that the members should write to their senators and members of the House of Representatives, expressing their views in opposition to the proposed embargo. The following committee was appointed to prepare a letter of protest to the federal horticultural commission against an embargo on bulbs and plants from England, France and Holland: Winifred Rolker, chairman; F. R. Pierson, Patrick O'Mara and Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr.

F. R. Pierson spoke of his interview with the shipping board, relating to Japanese imports, and concluded by saying: "We certainly had two busy days in Washington." President Totty highly commended the untiring and helpful activities of William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F. Throughout the discussion there was a high tone of loyalty and resolve that to win the war is the first and greatest consideration.

P. W. Popp reported the death of Mrs. H. Darlington, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., which occurred, May 26. For the past 12 years he has been superintendent of her estate and he spoke with feeling of her kindness, charity and philanthropy.

J. S. Fenrich, chairman of the committee for the collection of flowers for the hospitals, reported that 20,000 blooms had recently been collected and turned over to the ladies of the League for Women's Service. The club voted $25 for vases for the hospitals.

Adolph LeMoult, New York, and Henry Butterwick, Jamaica, L. I., were elected members. P. W. Popp exhibited four vases of fine blooms of the rose Frau Karl Druschki, also vases of spurred hybrid columbines.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE DISAPPOINTING.

Memorial day business in this city was by no means what the florists had anticipated. Several things conspired against it. One was that a heavy thunder shower came up in the early morning, the very hour that all societies and organizations had planned to visit the florists' establishments and get their flowers and then go to the cemeteries and decorate the graves. Immediately after the weather cleared it grew intensely hot, and many put off their decoration of graves until evening or late in the afternoon. Then, again unfavorable weather conditions developed—and the bulk of the decorating simply was not done. One florist said that while last year they sold 2,000 peonies they this year disposed of only 500 for Memorial day. This seems to be about the average of the difference between last year's activity and this. Some other flowers, however, sold better than the peonies and to some extent averaged up the general day's business. The peonies this year were not up to standard in this section, partially owing to the long dry spell, which, when broken, was followed by rains which have poured every day for the past 16 or 18. Thus the plants were retarded by the drought for a time and then forced along too fast by too much moisture. The celebrated Rosenfield peony farm, west of this city, which was sold last year, did not produce as many peonies as usual this year. One of the Rosenfield sons has returned to the farm to superintend the peony activity, with a view to bringing the fields back to standard and making them produce as of old. Though the peonies were not so numerous this year, the growers got $1 a dozen for them, as against 60 cents a dozen last year.

NOTES.

The practice among private individuals of raising cut flowers in their gardens for the trade is growing rapidly here. Many of the florists bought as many peonies this spring from the private growers as they did from the large peony farms or from the greenhouses. This practice has occasioned quite a stiff demand for seeds among the private growers. There are as many as a dozen retail florists in this city who depend entirely upon these private growers for their supplies of cut flowers.

The rumor is persistent that The Fernery, a retail florist shop operated by Mrs. Baldwin, has been sold, but thus far no official confirmation of the report has been made. It is rumored also that several other changes are in immediate prospect in this city, involving the going out of business of one or two florists, but the negotiations have not developed far enough to become matters of public information.

Roy Wilcox has returned from California, after spending a year there for his health, and will again assume active management of the extensive greenhouses and florist business of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs.

O. H. Herman, of Council Bluffs, Ia., is looking for a foreman for his greenhouses, as his man in charge has resigned.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-sixth annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

TOLEDO, O.—King & Co. report clover seed prospects are 102, compared with 84 last year.

CHICAGO.—The government opened bids here, June 1, for 10,800,000 cans of navy beans.

READING, ENG.—Out of five members of the Sutton family, who were in the British army, four have died.

SLIGO, IRELAND.—The Gore-Booth bulb acreage has been plowed up and will be devoted to food production.

THE federal government has begun to prosecute those who fail to report enemy property in their charge.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The rainfall for the season to June 9 was 13.83 inches; last season, 15.26 inches.

VISITED CHICAGO.—H. A. Johns, of Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia.; W. B. Gray, Billings, Mont.

CINCINNATI, O.—Alfred J. Brown, of the Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., is visiting J. Charles McCullough.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade June 12 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.00 per 100 pounds.

THE following industries will receive preferential treatment in the distribution of coal, raw materials and supplies: Fertilizers, insecticides, plants producing feed, and seedsmen, producers and wholesalers, except flower seeds.

OF the Long Island cabbage for seed which went into the trenches in very limited quantities, but few withstood the severe winter, so the growers are all short and many kinds are entire failures. For 1919 delivery $1.25 is being offered, but farmers are not keen for growing.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—In comparison with May, 1917, counter trade in flower, field and vegetable seeds during April and May this year has not been up to standard, according to the St. Louis Seed Co., due doubtless to cold weather and continued rains during this month. The general demand has been good, however, during the past few weeks, and the volume of sales for the season have been as good as in former years. If the weather does not become too warm, it is expected the loss suffered in April will be made up.

American Seed Trade Association.

All indications point to an unusually large attendance at the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association to be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, next week, June 18-20. The local seedsmen will entertain the ladies, Tuesday afternoon, June 18, for tea at Marshall Field's and to a matinee, "Friendly Enemies," at the Woods theater, on Wednesday afternoon, June 19. Visiting seedsmen should keep these events in mind.

Pea and Bean Crops.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 7.—Alfred J. Brown, of the Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., says that very good reports regarding pea crops in the west, as well as in this state, have been received and with favorable conditions between now and harvest time a good average crop is expected. The weather has been favorable for bean planting. Probably half of this firm's crops in Michigan are in by this time, and in the west the planting is about completed. The beans are going into the ground under very favorable conditions, and consequently the outlook to date is very promising. The acreage in both peas and beans is about 40 per cent greater than last year, and with a good yield the supply will be ample to fill all future contracts, with probably some to spare.

Solicited.

Sheboygan, Wis., June 5.—The John H. Allan Seed Co. reports as follows: "In a general way, the planting of beans has progressed very satisfactorily in both the east and west. The sowing of peas was also accomplished under favorable conditions and the time would average early. In the middle west we have had too much rain, but cannot say at this time whether damage has resulted. In the west several beneficial rains have covered the territories, obviating the necessity of irrigating."

California Seed Crops.

Los Angeles, June 2.—John C. Bodger, of John Bodger & Sons Co., reports that, although the season is at least two months late, due to lack of rain, it is expected an average yield of flower seeds, excepting sweet peas, will be harvested—this crop being behind the normal season, and during the past 10 days the aphid has been destructive, some fields being a total loss. It is feared that, unless a change comes soon, the crop will be very light, as the vines are too small to resist the ravages of this pest in such numbers.

In vegetable seeds, the prospects for beans are good at this date. Most of the acreage was planted in good season, and there is a satisfactory stand, and with increased acreage it is hoped to make full delivery on all contracts. Salsify and parsley are failures, but lettuce looks well. The fields of the latter have been irrigated and should produce good crops. Regarding other vegetables, much depends upon favorable weather to carry the crops through owing to lack of spring rains in the sections where these are grown.

Gunner Lawrence S. Payn.

Gunner Lawrence S. Payn, soldier in the First Regiment of Artillery of the French Army, takes pleasure in sending greetings to all his American friends and correspondents. He regrets to inform them that this year he will not be able to undertake his annual trip to the United States and pay them a visit, as he had the pleasure of doing for several seasons past, representing Simon Louis Freres & Co., Bruyeres-le-Chatel, S. & O.,

The "Clipper" Cleaners

are used by all large seedsmen in the United States, also in many foreign countries.

The No. 147 Cleaner shown herewith is equipped with our new Variable Air Regulator. A perfectly uniform air blast, absolutely under control and entirely free from fluctuation is one of the most essential and important considerations in cleaning seeds and grains.

Different kinds of seeds and grains, and, different conditions of the seeds or grains, call for varying strength of the air blast used in separating the dust, chaff, and light shrunk seeds or grain from the heavy, perfect seeds and grain. The Clipper Variable Air Regulator gives exact control of the air blast at every desired point. "From a Zephyr to a Hurricane" exactly describes the range of air blast that can be secured by this mechanical device. We can produce a blast strong enough to blow out the heaviest grain, or peas or beans, and by an adjustment requiring but an instant reduce the blast sufficient for handling the lightest seeds such as timothy, red top or blue grass.

France, a firm which for the fourth time since its foundation in 1666, in Metz (Lorraine) has suffered through German invasion.

Although absent from business, Mr. Payn still remains connected with the firm, and his American friends will be informed in due time concerning crop conditions and they will receive prices for the seeds of the 1918 harvest, which promises to be quite normal. He regrets, of course, to be away from business for the time being, but his spirits are heightened by the thought of his doing his duty as a soldier, and serving the red, white and blue flag, the emblem of right, courage and liberty. He sends his heartiest wishes to all his friends, and all those who have joined the allied troops, and calls out to them, "To the end and to victory."

Omaha Seed Trade.

Henry G. Windheim, president of the Nebraska Seed Co., has passed through a federal grand jury investigation with clean hands, following the attempt of a local newspaper to have him indicted for throwing away onion sets, on the alleged grounds that he was unpatriotic. Mr. Windheim showed clearly that there was an immense surplus of red onion sets in this city this year; that he had hundreds of bushels which he could not sell after the season was over, and, although admitting that he had thrown fully 100 bushels in the sewer, he said they were the culls which had rotted on his hands, and the storage room was badly needed for other stocks. The newspaper made much of the fact that some of the onion sets had been thrown away and sought to represent such action as a waste of food, but it was clearly shown that the sets, even when sound, are not food, but seeds, and it was also made evident that the Nebraska Seed Co. had sold all the sets it was possible to dispose of and the balance must either rot in the store or in the sewer, as there was no further demand for them. When the newspaper notoriety started, Mr. Windheim offered to give away hundreds of bushels of the sets, but insisted that people take them from the sidewalk, as room for them could no longer be spared inside the establishment, and quantities were accordingly dumped on the curb for people to pick up. Some of the newspapers took wagonloads to give away, but the rush was not unusually heavy. The attention of the grand jury was also called to the situation in which the firm would be placed if, after selling all the sets possible until the retailers were loaded up, the balance of the company's stock in the warehouses was offered free to the public, an injustice to the retail seedsman, who, after buying full stocks, hoped to sell the same.

Seedsmen are complaining of the fact that so much of their line of business is handled nowadays by the department stores that the store specializing in seeds and plants finds it harder and harder to meet the competition that is thrown in its way everywhere. It is an established fact that 80,000 rose bushes were sold through the department stores here this spring. Along this line, it is noticeable also that not all of these rosebushes grew and produced flowers. This is not displeasing to the seed houses, for it is an evidence that the public cannot well depend upon the department store, the "jack-of-all-trades" store, to handle first-class stock in this line. Even the 10-cent stores here have handled lines of this kind. It was also noticeable that they frequently sold bushes the roots of which had apparently been dry for many moons, and the average buyer who thought he was getting something cheap did not know the difference until he found that his plants did not grow. Some of the seed houses are planning an active campaign of advertising next year to bring out the fact that the public, in these matters, cannot afford to be satisfied with anything but the best; that they must cultivate the habit of coming to the seed stores, to the specialists, who know how to handle these things, instead of to a store where the shopgirl sells you socks with one hand and rose bushes and shrubs with the other, and knows as little about one as the other.

The Late William C. Beckert.

In the death of William C. Beckert, which occurred May 11, announcement of which was made in our issue of June 1, page 1,000, the seed trade of Pittsburgh, Pa., feels the loss of one of its best known and respected members. He had been ill for several weeks, but the family had hopes for his recovery. Up to that time he enjoyed the best of health and was at his business every day.

Mr. Beckert was born in Allegheny county in 1853, and his early days were spent in the trucking business with his parents. When 23 years of age, he traveled considerably, visiting the western part of the United States and Australia and Honolulu, where he gained much experience in the seed line. He entered into the business with his brother, Theodore, in 1860. The firm continued several years under the name of Beckert Bros., when Theodore withdrew and the firm was known as W. C. Beckert until 1914, when it was incorporated, changing the firm name to Beckert's Seed Store. Several faithful employees were taken into the firm at that time.

Mr. Beckert is survived by his widow, one son and three brothers, all of Pittsburgh. He will be sadly missed by all who associated with him.

Puget Sound Cabbage Seed.

Seattle, Wash., May 29.—The Chas. H. Lilly Co. reports that while the acreage of cabbage seed in the Puget Sound district for 1918 is somewhat larger than in any previous year, the yield will not average over 25 per cent of a crop, due to unusual weather conditions last winter, the most severe in the 15 years that the firm has been growing this item. There was considerable damage from excessive rainfall, and thaws which brought the snow down from the mountains and flooded the valleys, after which the land on which the crop was planted froze. This condition was repeated with greater severity than the first time, and much of the stand was completely destroyed, the balance left standing was weakened, and the crop as a whole cut down materially. The fields on high land, which were fortunate in escaping the flood, are looking well at the present time. The company reports a much larger acreage for 1919 than was ever planted in this section, but it will all be needed, as there will be very little carried over from the small crop this year.

Iowa Seed Dealers' Association.

Owing to heavy rains, resulting in washouts and lack of power on many of the interurban lines, the meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association, at Des Moines, June 4-5, was not largely attended, but the business session at the Chamber of Commerce, which was called on the second day was, nevertheless, an interesting event. An absentee who was much missed was President Frank Page, now in the United States service and stationed temporarily at Ithaca, N. Y. One of the most prominent speakers was Charles Page, the first president of the association, his remarks being listened to with much interest, as were those of Mr. Redfern, of the state dairy commission; Messrs. Jarnegen and Clark, of the Iowa Farmer; F. J. Wright, of Successful Farming, and others, many of them members of the association.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: C. E. Atherton, Deep River, president; O. Lorenz, Des Moines, vice-president; A. M. Eldridge, Shenandoah, secretary; Hon. John T. Hamilton, Cedar Rapids, treasurer.

Canary Island Onion Seed.

Regarding shipments of Bermuda onion seed from Tenerife, Canary Islands, Frederic C. Varela, at that place, writes, May 13, that transportation of the crop this year is almost impossible, due to the activity of German submarines, and the Spanish Mail Co. has decided to stop further sailings to Cuba and the United States until absolute assurance is given that they will have nothing to fear from U-boats. Last year, according to Mr. Varela, under less aggravating conditions, Secretary of Agriculture Houston told Senator Garner of Texas that "the onion seed from Tenerife would be forthcoming as usual, even if necessary to send warships to bring it over." The moment for action of this patriotic decision has now arrived, Mr. Varela says, and appeals to congressmen are urged, supporting the petitions that are now being made by Texas and other states for aid in transporting the crop not later than August 5-10. It is estimated the crop of Bermuda onion seed in July will be 80,000 pounds less than in 1917.

New York Seed Trade.

The stock and fixtures of the store of William Elliott & Sons, 42 Vesey street, were sold at public auction, June 4, William Elliott acting as auctioneer. The firm is retiring from business. Representatives of practically all the seed stores of the city were present, and the results of the sale are said to have been satisfactory. Various stock and fixtures went to Vaughan's Seed Store, W. E. Marshall & Co., Burnett Brothers, Joseph A. Manda, a florist of West Orange, N. J., and others.

During the past week, Peter Henderson & Co., have had at their store a fine exhibit of peony blooms. Their "Peony Guide", which lists 450 varieties, was in demand, and many copies were given away.

Burnett Brothers, having bought the building at 92 Chambers street, will remove to it, from Number 98, about September 1. A. F. F.

Beans Nutritious.

The protein content of beans is large, being about 22 per cent, and twice that in the soy bean, with which we are just becoming acquainted. Measured by calories, one pound of the ordinary beans is equal to two pounds of round steak or 18 eggs. It would take five pounds of potatoes to balance one pound of the beans.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Celery (Florida), per crate, $1.00 to $4.50; cucumbers, 50 cents to $4.00 per basket; mushrooms, 60 cents to $4.00 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 30 cents; lettuce, per package, $1.50 to $2.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Seedlings and Fungoid Diseases.

During the discussion of Edmund A. Harvey's very excellent paper on "Coal Conservation and Greenhouse Crop Rotation," at the recent meeting of the Florists' club of Philadelphia, some valuable cultural points were brought out. Otto J. Thilow spoke of a lettuce disease, which had baffled the best growers, a scald or sloughing of the outside leaves, just as the head was finishing. This, after a number of experiments was found to be due to sowing the seed and growing the young plants in very rich soil. Seed was sown and young plants raised to good size in sterilized soil, without manure. They were then planted in pure manure, came along rapidly, and headed perfectly without a trace of the disease. Mr. Thilow said seedlings were plant babies, and should not be given rich stimulating food until they were able to digest it. Much of the trouble of seedlings and young plants rotting off in the infant stage was caused by too rich soil. Such stock would contract fungoid diseases that would perhaps not develop until the blooming period, which after infancy, is its most strenuous time, then if anything latent is in its system, it will make its appearance. Seed and seedlings should be planted in sterilized soil or at least that which is free of manure or other fungi producing material.

Mr. Harvey said he had found tomatoes, planted in the house March 1, after peas a very good crop; these had come into fruit the last of June and had brought 25 to 30 cents a pound, lasted until the middle of August, and then sold for 10 to 12 cents. Arthur Niessen knew of quite a few grower retailers, who found a good summer demand for hothouse tomatoes in their stores.

The fuel and labor problems were discussed freely, but until the situation crystallizes, no one seemed disposed to say just what they would do. Mr. Thilow thought it would be safest considering labor and coal prospects, to shut down 50 per cent of the place farthest from the boiler. Robert Craig spoke of the difficulty of getting bituminous coal at the legal price of $3.20 per ton, plenty at $4.10 at the mines and immediate delivery. They would have to grow fewer of the tropical plants such as crotons, dracenas and pandanus, which took a temperature of 70 degrees, and devote their available space to stock which could be grown in 60 degrees. This would save half the coal.

Greenhouse Insects.

By the careful use of hydrocyanic-acid gas, practically all insects infesting the foliage of ornamental plants in greenhouses may be controlled more cheaply and effectively than by any other means, according to a bulletin just issued by the United States department of agriculture entitled "Fumigation of Ornamental Greenhouse Plants with Hydrocyanic-Acid Gas," by E. R. Lasscer and A. D. Borden.

It is pointed out, however, that in fumigating a greenhouse containing a large variety of plants, even when using the correct quantity and under just the right conditions, there is risk that the tender growth of some plants may be injured. This injury is not permanent, however, and such plants will show new vigorous growth in a short time. The growth of many plants is stimulated by hydrocyanic-acid gas.

The chemicals required for the fumigation are sodium cyanid containing not less than 51 per cent cyanogen, or potassium cyanid containing not less than 38.4 per cent cyanogen, sulphuric acid 93 per cent pure, and water. Cyanid for fumigation purposes should be practically free from chlorin.

PRECAUTIONS TO BE TAKEN.

Fumigation should not be attempted in daylight, the department warns, or when the temperature in the house is below 50 degrees F. or above 70 degrees F. Cyanid is one of the most poisonous substances known and extreme care must be used in its handling. The chemicals must not be within reach of those unacquainted with their nature, and must always be plainly labeled. Among other measures of care are the following: Chemicals should be handled preferably with old gloves used for no other purpose; the acid must not touch clothes or skin. The water must not be poured on the acid; put the water in the generator first and then the acid.

The person who places the cyanid in the water and acid must leave the greenhouse immediately, and persons must never enter a fumigated house until it is thoroughly aired. To insure this, some arrangement must be provided by which the ventilators can be opened from the outside. Danger signs must be posted at all entrances, and the house tightly closed before the fumigation begins, and a greenhouse adjoining a dwelling should not be fumigated without previously notifying the residents of the dwelling.

These precautions and others, together with a fumigation table which tells of chemicals to be used for various insects on a great variety of plants, are given in Farmers' Bulletin 880, which will be sent free on request from the United States department of agriculture at Washington. The bulletin is of interest only to those who own or operate greenhouses.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President; J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-third annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 26-28, 1918.

Ellwanger & Barry to Dissolve.

The Ellwanger & Barry Nursery at Rochester, N. Y., the oldest nursery in that part of the country is to be dissolved according to report. The firm was organized in 1840 by George Ellwanger and Patrick Barry, both of whom are dead. When the concern was established, apple growing in Western New York was undeveloped. Appreciating the possibility of soil and climate, the company organized, and was one of the principal factors in developing the fruit business in that section.

Continued encroachments of the city on land used for nursery purposes are given as the reason for dissolution. William C. Barry, for 25 years president of the Western New York Horticultural Society, was president of the company at the time of his death, about two years ago.

American Association of Nurserymen.

CHICAGO CONVENTION PROGRAMME.

As announced in our issue of June 8, page 1048, the forty-third annual convention of the above association will be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 26-28, the business sessions in the Crystal room, with the exhibits in the West room, adjoining.

The opening session will be called to order at 10 a. m. Wednesday by the vice-president in the absence of President Lloyd C. Stark, now serving with the colors as major of field artillery at Camp Lee, Va. Following the invocation by Rev. C. S. Harrison, York, Neb., the "Glad Hand" will be extended by George M. Spangler, Jr., of the Chicago Association of Commerce. A message from Major Stark will be read, and the balance of the session will be devoted to reports of chairmen of various committees, closing with an address by Dr. E. C. Stakman, of the United States department of agriculture, on "Banish the Barberry and Save the Wheat."

At the afternoon session, Secretary-Counsel Curtis Nye Smith and Treasurer J. W. Hill will present their reports, and L. D. H. Weld, of Chicago, will address the meeting on "Marketing Methods." The special order of business for the afternoon will be the presentation of the resolution and amendment to the constitution. At 7:30 in the evening, there will be a meeting of the state vice-presidents, which will be followed at 8:30 by a "get-together" reception and banquet.

Thursday's programme will be devoted to a number of papers and discussions on timely topics, among them the following: "Market Development," report of temporary committee; report of publicity committee, by F. L. Atkins, chairman; the booklet, "Home Grounds," from the publisher's standpoint, presented by J. Horace McFarland, and from the user's viewpoint, by O. Joe Howard, Pomona, N. C.; "Costs, Profits and Income Tax" by Alvin E. Nelson, Chicago, followed by a discussion led by Arthur H. Hill and Guy A. Bryant. Following the election of officers, the morning session will adjourn. The afternoon meeting will be featured by a paper on "Fuel Conservation" by Osborn Monnet, of the United States fuel administration, and there will be four-minute talks by E. C. Hilborn, W. H. Wyman, R. D. Underwood and J. R. Mayhew on "Wartimes and the Nursery Business." In the evening there will be meetings of the American Nurserymen's Protective Association and the Retail Nurserymen's Protective Association.

The Friday morning programme consists of addresses by E. P. Bernardin, Parsons, Kan., on "Standardizing and Bunching of Nursery Stock" and by E. H. Smith, York, Neb., on "The Retail Salesman."

The entertainment committee has arranged for a number of interesting and enjoyable features, including a theater party, trip to Great Lakes naval training school, and a visit to the Art Institute among others.

New Chinese Lilacs.

Many of the lilacs discovered by Wilson and other travellers in the recent explorations of western and northern China are now so well established in the Arboretum and in a few other American gardens that it is possible to form an opinion of their value. Observations of the living plants show that too many species were made when botanists had only the dried specimens sent home from China to work with. Now that most of these plants have flowered in the Arboretum and have been again studied it appears that Syringa Wilsonii and S. Dielsiana are the same as S. tomentella; that S. Sargentiana is a variety of S. Komarowii with a pubescent calyx; that S. tetanoloba is S. Sweginzowii, and that S. Rehderiana is probably only a pubescent form of S. tomentella. S. Komarowii Sargentiana is not in the Arboretum collection and probably has not been introduced. S. Rehderiana, S. Potaninii and S. verrucosa are still unknown in gardens. As a garden plant the handsomest of the new Chinese lilacs is Syringa reflexa, which Wilson discovered in western Hupeh. This is a tall broad shrub with leaves resembling in size and shape those of S. villosa. The flowers have long slender corolla-tubes and are borne in long, wide branched, open, drooping clusters; the flower-buds are red but as the flowers open the corolla becomes dark rose color except the inner surface of the lobes which is white. The wide drooping clusters, and the contrast in the colors of the inner surface of the corolla-lobes and its tube, make S. reflexa one of the handsomest and most interesting of the new Chinese lilacs. Next in merit probably as an ornamental plant is Syringa Sweginzowii. This, too, is a tall shrub but the branches are not as stout as those of S. reflexa, and the leaves are narrower, pointed at the ends and pale on the lower surface. The flowers are produced in broad erect clusters and are pale rose color and half an inch long. The flower-buds are of a peculiar brownish green color, and as the flowers open gradually from the bottom to the top of the cluster the contrast between the open flowers below and the closed buds above give this plant a peculiar appearance during the week or 10 days the flowers are opening. This lilac was first made known through plants raised in the Arboretum of Max von Sivers at Riga in Russia from seeds sent from some place in Mongolia or northern China, the name of which is not recorded. Later it was found by Wilson in western China, but the plants growing in the Arboretum were obtained from the nursery of Regel & Kesselring in Petrograd. S. Komarowii has leaves which resemble those of S. reflexa but the flowers are produced in short, compact, nearly cylindrical clusters nodding on long stems. The flower-buds are bright red and very conspicuous, and the open flowers are deep rose color. This lilac sometimes blooms profusely when still a small bush. Syringa tomentella promises to grow taller than the other new Chinese lilacs for some of the plants in the Arboretum are now nearly 10 feet high. The leaves resemble those of S. villosa, and the flowers are pale rose color or white, and are borne in narrow erect clusters. None of the Arboretum plants have ever produced many flowers and S. tomentella promises to be one of the least desirable of the new lilacs as a garden plant. Syringa Julianae flowers earlier than most of the new Chinese lilacs and the flowers are already fading. As it grows here this is a compact low shrub nearly as broad as high, and for several years has covered itself with short clusters of rose-colored and white fragrant flowers. Related to the Chinese S. pubescens, it blooms much later than that and other related species, and is an excellent addition to the list of lilacs which can be grown in our gardens. Syringa Wolfii, which has dark violet-purple flowers in short compact clusters, is another good garden plant in this climate. This species, too, was first cultivated by Von Sivers at Riga, who obtained it from some place in northern China which is not known. The other new Chinese lilacs in the Arboretum, S. Meyerii, S. microphylla, S. pinnatifolia and S. yunnanensis have comparatively little decorative value and are curiosities rather than good garden plants.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, June 5, 1918.

WEDDING DEMAND UNUSUALLY BRISK.

June weddings are a strong feature, the season in this respect being an exceptionally good one. Roses, sweet peas and carnations make up the bulk of stock. There is no lack of them, and carnations are near the glut stage. Indoor gladioli are the chief novelty. No varieties grown outdoors have reached the market yet. Garden flowers of various kinds add to the attractiveness of florists' displays. Firms which do bedding, report that this has been a record-breaking season. Much work had to be delayed because of the scarcity of labor. Fern leaves are still scarce. Awaiting receipts from the new crop in the northwest, dependance is being placed on ferns that grow in the Hocking valley hills of Ohio. They sell from $2.25 to $2.50 a dozen. Florists, who have little to complain of the year so far, look forward to a good summer, but are apprehensive about the coal situation later. The inroads being made upon help by the war is another source of anxiety.

NOTES.

Louis Elsass, a Chillicothe, O., florist, was in Columbus the past week looking for greenhouse help, for which he seemed willing to pay almost any price. During the past year he has enjoyed the unique experience of having his business grow from country town volume to one of metropolitan proportions. This is due to the cantonment, known as Camp Sherman, with 40,000 to 50,000 soldiers, having been located at Chillicothe. There are a large number of social functions among the officers which make liberal demand for flowers, and telegraph orders are also very heavy. One difficulty of securing help from out of town, lies in the fact that living expenses in that military city have reached an extravagant point.

W. B. Huddleson, of the T. J. Ludwig store force, was ordered, June 8, to report to Washington, for assignment in the civil division of the ordnance department. Mr. Ludwig's son, Edward, who is stationed in Columbus in the same branch of service, has been

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Pot Grown Roses.

The hybrid perpetual or rambler roses after blooming, if desired to force another year, in order to bloom them early should be grown in pots during the summer. They can be pruned back after blooming and lifted, or if in pots should be repotted. This will require a good, strong soil, composed of two-thirds loam and one-third manure. When potting be sure to give good drainage and pot firmly, ramming the soil down hard. It is impossible to grow roses successfully in a loose soil. The plants should be plunged to rim of the pot outside where they can be freely watered. Avoid, if possible, placing them against the greenhouse or other building or against a fence, but plant them where they will have a free circulation of air and can be sprayed from either side. If planted against a building or in close quarters, they frequently become infested with red spider during the hot weather and it is nearly impossible to get rid of them.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

It is a good time now to plant, reset or renew the soil of asparagus beds, either plumosus or Sprengeri. If the beds are to be set out with young stock preparation should be started at once. Asparagus plumosus does better in solid beds, well drained, with a good rich compost about two feet deep. The plants should be set 12 to 15 inches apart and the shoots be given strings upon which to climb as soon as they begin to grow. But little cutting should be done the first year, as it is necessary that the plants become well established. The old beds should be given a good mulch of half-decayed manure, and if possible, without injury to the roots, removing the top soil. Asparagus Sprengeri can be successfully grown in the bench, but also requires a good rich soil. The young stock the first year should be planted 10 to 12 inches apart, and will produce many stems that can be cut. The beds that have produced this year will require a renewal of the soil. It is better to replant than to try to renew the soil in the bench. The plants are great feeders and the bench is generally full of roots after a year's growth, and it will be found difficult to keep the bench watered during the spring of the second year. If the plants are too close together, they can be given more space in resetting. Good large plants will do better if set about 15 inches apart. If a mulch is attempted, care should be taken to use no fresh manure, but manure that is well rotted. The ammonia that arises from fresh manure will affect the plants, turning the foliage light and in severe cases the foliage will become nearly white, making it worthless.

Mignonette.

To be able to cut fine spikes of mignonette in early winter will require an early start, and although it demands care and attention to germinate small seeds during hot weather, yet it will be necessary to sow seed early in July in order to have a cut in by the holiday season. A north propagating house is one of the best locations for the sowing of seeds in summer. Mignonette does not transplant from the seed flats successfully, so it is better to sow it in 2½-inch pots, five or six seeds to a pot, which can be thinned out to one or two plants as soon as they are large enough to select the strongest. Some growers prefer to sow the seed in hills in the bench, but to grow the large spikes of this flower requires a soil very heavily manured, and the constant watering often sours the soil before the plants have pushed out roots enough to absorb the water. As soon as the plants have attained a height of two or more inches the tip should be pinched or rubbed out, in order that the plant will branch, and again later these branches will have to be pinched off, until there are six or eight good strong shoots. The plants will grow in most any kind of good soil, but to get the best the compost should be about one-half partly decayed manure well mixed in the soil, and this will produce splendid spikes of bloom. After the plants begin to form their leaves, a careful watch must be kept for the cabbage worm; these worms are very fond of mignonette, are voracious eaters, and soon denude the plant. They are a little difficult to find, being of the same color as the leaf, but are generally found along the midrib of the leaf or on the stem. Growers who cultivate large quantities of this crop screen their ventilation with mosquito netting to keep out the moth which lays the eggs. The plants should be set about one foot apart in the bench and staked or tied in some suitable manner to keep the stems straight and erect.

Cyclamen.

The plants of cyclamen should now be growing rapidly, especially those which were grown from seed sown last fall. These plants should now be in four or five-inch pots and the foliage growing full and strong. If the plants are plunged in a frame, they should be lifted out of the soil occasionally to see that the drainage is not stopped up. There is nothing that will ruin a young growing cyclamen any quicker than to have the drainage get closed and have the soil become sodden with water. Angle worms will often cause this and, if they are detected, should be removed. It is very easy to find whether they are in the pots. If the soil on the top of the pot is rolled into small lumps, it is a sure sign that there are worms in the soil. If there are but a few, the plants can be knocked out of the pots and the worms removed; if there are many, a watering of limewater will soon rid the soil of the worms. The plants that are in small pots should be potted up as fast as they require it, that they may be as large as possible for the holiday season, but do not go to the other extreme and pot in too large pots. As soon as the roots get around the side of the pot, shift them into the next size larger. If the plants are in the greenhouse, a close watch for thrips must be kept during the summer. If the foliage is twisted when the leaf begins to unfold, it is sure to be caused by insects, and the plants should be sprayed with a nicotine solution. To have good plants for the holidays in full bloom, they must be constantly watched and well grown.

Hutchins Memorial Cup.

The Hutchins Memorial Cup, as shown in the illustration herewith, an appropriate tribute to the memory of the late W. T. Hutchins, the great influence of whose writings helped so much in popularizing the sweet pea in America, is the outcome of a thought first suggested by the late J. Harrison Dick and made possible by free offerings of firms and individuals. The cup, which is of solid silver, 24 inches high, is valued at $250 and will be offered in Section A, Class 1, at the tenth annual exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, to be held in Wanamaker's Greek hall, Philadelphia, Pa., June 25-26, in the competition for the finest 12 varieties, 20 sprays to a vase, correctly named. Under the provisions of the award, the contest is open to private gardeners and amateurs only, the cup to be held for one year.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Summer in the Flower Shop.

The retailer, particularly in the city store, finds the summer lethargy the bugbear of the business. Rent, labor and a number of other expenses, go on almost the same as in the busy season; the overhead piles up and up, until with but little business to offset it, a large deficit is created which requires as many months of good trade to even up.

While this is the vacation season, and a general let up or decrease in business is to be expected, one must not despair and just drift along, being satisfied to take what offers. The "What's the use" attitude never gets one anywhere, but the man who says, "I can and will," is always found in the front rank, prepared, ready to go over the top at the first opportunity.

In this wide awake dealer's shop, the seasonable stock that is offered will be found displayed to the best advantage. If there is a hurried order for funeral flowers, the stock is pretty sure to be on hand to fill it. Made-up wreaths of all kinds are ready for instant decoration, with suitable boxes for immediate delivery or shipment. Many an order of this kind is lost at this dull season on account of lack of the proper flowers or material. A large assortment is not necessary, but there should always be a few vases of roses, gladioli, Easter lilies and some seasonable outside flowers, together with green. To have nothing to show to prospective customers, is poor business policy, which gives a bad and, too often, a lasting impression.

The store, from the windows to the rear, should always present an inviting appearance such as one would find pleasure in showing to a brother craftsman who happened along. This is the crucial test. Keep the shop always up to such perfection and trade is bound to increase.

Anniversaries, birthday, wedding and other events even at this season, are more or less frequent, and ideas as to what is best in connection with the available stock should be in readiness to meet each case. A few choice plants in palms, ferns, dracenas and aspidistras, help in the decoration of the store, and are available as gifts for such remembrances.

Even with everything ready and but little demand, time need not hang heavy, and does not to the progressive man, as he can always find work to keep himself and the others occupied. There are busy seasons ahead from which much of the strain is taken by preparing at this leisure time. It may be said to be too early to do this or that, there will be plenty of time later on: but too soon is better than too late. Mossed wreaths and designs will keep, as will also the made-up magnolias and oak leaves; these latter decried at first, appear to have become standard in almost every florist's stock, while many firms find a ready sale for these pieces when decorated with artificial crepe and waxed flowers. Chenille wreaths and stars, as well as immortelle arrangements, can be made up in the idle days of July and August, much better than in the busy winter months. This year, particularly, when transportation is so difficult, all such stock as sphagnum moss, magnolia leaves, immortelles and all bulky material, should be laid in at this time and most of it worked up. It would then be on hand and much of the anxiety of the past year would be relieved.

Wholesale supply men are a unit regarding transportation, and are advising their customers to buy now, stock of all kinds they can find room for, as all indications point to great freight and express congestions the coming winter.

Looking Ahead.

There are many things about the store needing attention, but which one never seems to find time to attend to. There is also scarcely a day passes, when with very little extra pressure, or with just a quickening up in this or that department, more could have been accomplished. A looking ahead and orderly laying out the work of the next day will generally save considerable time. Plants, flowers or supplies that it is found are low in stock, or are wanted for the day's work, can be ordered over the phone. How often it is that just when an order is to be filled, something is found wanting, or the stock on hand is not good enough or will not suit the purpose. Then there is an annoying delay and the added expense and time of a messenger to get the goods desired. It will often be found that long deliveries in the same direction in which the time is marked several hours apart, can be sent by the same messenger, thus saving the expense of another trip.

A run of funeral work develops; if the proper sized frames are not in stock, the order is given at once, and the missing of those on hand seen to. A large piece may need a special box, which is put together and made ready for instant use.

The decoration of the window as planned for early tomorrow is found to need more of this or that stock, which

FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY EMBLEM.

The Design by Herbert Read, Detroit, Mich. was Awarded the Prize of $200 Offered by the F. T. D., Being Unanimously Chosen by the Committee Consisting of F. C. W. Brown, Chairman; E. A. Feters and George E. M. Stumpp, as the Most Beautiful Among the Many Submitted. The Background of the Globe is Pale Blue, the Earth Orange, the Wings and Telephone, Black and White, and the Roses are in Natural Colors. The Lettering is Dark Blue Shaded With Light Blue on the Pale Yellow Ribbon.

is then ordered to be on hand so as to avoid any delay in this important work.

Planning for a busy day is sure to be of great assistance. With all the work as far advanced as possible and the store force on hand sharp at opening time, or often before, each with his work assigned, action begins at once, and with everything to hand goes forward rapidly. Every order, in addition to its specifications, should have a list of flowers to be used. In the case of weddings or other decorations, the scheme should be all laid out, with rough plan of every room, and complete list of flowers and all accessories and palms required. This greatly facilitates the work.

For all funeral work emblems such system will be a great help; the wreath for $20 will require certain numbers of this or that kind of flower. Other pieces also have accompanying lists, according to size and price. With this preparation, the right quantity and variety of flowers are ordered in time and put in condition. Roses a trifle tight are opened up so as to be at their best; in far too much of this work, roses are but little more than buds. For sprays, particularly, flowers should be well advanced; the difference between a dozen American Beauties or other large long-stemmed roses, in bud or nearly full flower, is very marked. The same effect can be made with at least one-third less, if the flowers are well advanced. This manipulation of the stock can all be made, with the flowers on hand the night before, that would not be possible with the next day's supply.

As far as possible, the work of the store should be divided, each clerk or employe having his branch to attend to. Much better order and service with less friction is secured by such regulations.

Follow Up the Trade.

One of the large retail fruit and grocery stores of Los Angeles, Calif., which makes a specialty of fancy boxes of California dried and preserved fruit which are generally sent by tourists to their friends at home, address letters shortly after to persons to whom their products have been sent, inquiring if the boxes arrived in good order, and requesting a reply on the enclosed stamped postal card. This system of follow-up must work greatly to the advantage of the firm in gaining new trade, as many would like to order duplicates of such fine fruits when they find out from whom they were purchased.

Retail florists could use this plan to further their business, as customers and those to whom purchases are sent cannot help but be pleased by this attention and evident desire to see that the goods were satisfactory. With the return of the card, the name should be added to the mailing list, as every pleased recipient is a good prospect. Comparatively few dealers take advantage or avail themselves of this method of increasing their business. Mrs. Smith is a good customer. She sends a plant or flowers to Mrs. Brown, who must know flowers, as shown by the fact of the choice of her selection and solicitousness as to its careful delivery. Mrs. Brown is a stranger to your shop, but the careful delivery and the interest shown in your inquiry as to the plant's welfare creates a good impression. The literature of the store, Easter, Christmas and other announcements, will be better received because of the previous inquiry, and very likely a visit to the shop will result.

The customer whose name has not appeared on the book for several months should be looked up. It must be done in a diplomatic way; there may have been some slight neglect, or the last purchase perhaps was not, for some reason, satisfactory. The sooner this matter is cleared up, the better, as then business relations are resumed. The matter of a wilted fern dish through the carelessness of the maids in watering has caused the loss of customers worth hundreds of dollars a year.

At times of great stress, such as Christmas and Easter, all complaints of plants or flowers received in bad condition should receive immediate attention. "Frozen" plants at Christmas are generally found, on investigation, to need water, but it is better to replace with new plants, particularly if the order was a gift from one of your good customers.

Watering tags, with the name of the firm conspicuously printed on one side, with short cultural directions on the other, attached to all plants save much more than their cost, while the name may be seen by quite a number of people, as the tags are frequently allowed to remain.

It must always be a pleasure to rectify mistakes or call to see what can be done in the matter. To attempt to reason it out your way only makes matters worse. "What would you have us to do in the matter?" is the attitude that holds and satisfies the customer.

FORT STELLACOOM, WASH.—Lucien Le Clere announces the arrival of a baby daughter, Lucille Marie, June 2 at St. Joseph's hospital, Tacoma.

Water Lilies for Commercial Use.

One of the choicest summer cut flowers is the water lily. They first came into fame, as a cut flower, when the pink Cape Cod water lily, Nymphaea odorata rosea, was offered to the trade of the large cities, where it at once commanded high prices. The ponds, from which these were then obtained, have been so cleaned out that no plants or flowers are now available.

Within the past 20 years, there has been much progress made in the cultivation of this class of plants. About 15 years ago, W. B. Shaw purchased a farm at Kenilworth, in the District of Columbia. Some 12 acres of this was swamp land, which he thought might grow water lilies. He made a small pond, procured some plants, which grew and produced an abundance of flowers. Finally, he determined to go into the business of growing of water lilies, and has now the largest collection grown for cut flowers in this country. The various ponds, which adjoin one another, cover a tract of five acres. Several are given to one variety, while in others, the plants are in rows of one or several kinds, according to the demand. Two-thirds of the ponds are filled with hardy sorts, which remain out all winter without any protection, while the tropical or tender varieties, have to be wintered in the greenhouse. These latter are taken up out of the ponds after they have had good heavy frost, enough to kill the leaves. Small bulbs are formed under the summer or parent root, which are broken off, and kept in damp sand in the greenhouse with temperature of 60°. The old summer root is thrown away. Many plants only produce one bulb, some two or three, and as many as nine have been taken, but this is very unusual.

These small bulbs are planted March 1 in four to six-inch pots in soil and plunged in tanks of water on tables, next the light, which is kept at a temperature between 70° and 75°. They are set out in the ponds June 1-10. Each plant is given a space of eight feet in diameter, which by the time the summer is half over, is completely filled with leaves.

The hardy varieties commence to flower May 10-20. The first were sold this year on May 16. There are 16 ponds in which the water is from eight inches to a foot in depth. Nelumbiums, or lotus, are also grown, there being large spaces at the ends of several of the ponds planted with them. These are set out on a board floor to prevent the roots taking too firm a hold in the ground. Here a framework of planks, six inches in width set six inches above the water, through which comes their tall growth gives access to them when the flowers are gathered. All the other lily flowers are gathered by means of skiffs, which are pushed through the leaves, which grow so close as to leave no portion of the water visible.

The flowers are all picked when in bud, commencing at sunrise, or as soon as it is light enough to see in the morning. A force of from six to eight are engaged every morning in this work. Nearly all stock is sold on order. That for out-of-town florists is packed in pasteboard boxes, on damp fresh sphagnum moss, all of which is shipped by parcels post, special. Local stock for the Washington retailers, is carried to them in baskets. When brought in, the flowers are placed in large tin tubs of water. Mrs. L. Helen Fowler, Mr. Shaw's daughter, who had long been of great assistance to her father, has been manager for the past five years. All the flowers for the various orders pass through her hands. Mrs. Fowler has raised several new varieties, which have found great favor with the trade. Eugenia Deland won a gold medal at the Newport, R. I., show. Rose Arey is a deep pink, the best of its color in the market today. Helen Fowler, another fine deep pink, is a winner. A curious and beautiful variety is one of Wm. Tricker's Nymphaea Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, a beautiful blue, which forms a plant in the center of the upper side of each leaf. These grow rapidly and flower, forming a circle of small blooms around the center flowers of the parent plant.

The best hardy commercial cut flower varieties are: N. Marliacea rosea, N. Marliacea albida, N. odorata Eugene De Land, N. odorata W. B. Shaw, N. odorata rosea, N. odorata sulphurea, N. odorata Helen Fowler, N. tuberosa Richardsoni, N. tuberosa maxima, N. tuberosa cornea, N. candidissima and N. Gladstoniana.

The tropical sorts, which are lifted each season, and are best for cut flowers are: N. zanzibariensis, N. zanzibariensis rosea, N. Pennsylvania, N. Mrs. C. W. Ward, N. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. In the tender, night-blooming section, best suited for this purpose are N. devoniensis, N. Geo. Huster, N. O'Marana, N. Bisseti, N. dentata improved. The best of the lotus are: Nelumbium album striatum, N. Shiroman, N. speciosum, N. Pekinensis rubrum plenum.

This garden is beautiful in its natural landscape effects, being surrounded by many weeping willows and other native trees, such as Magnolia odorata, etc. It is at its height of bloom about the middle of July.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Benching the Plants.

The work of benching the plants for cut blooms should be pushed along without delay; the sooner the plants are now put into their permanent quarters, the better is the chance for them to produce fine blooms, and every effort should be made to get the planting finished up before the end of the month. The young plants, now standing in pots, will gradually become hard and weakened as the severe, hot weather comes on, and it is a big advantage for them to be planted while still in a soft growing condition, before the wood has hardened.

The first work to be attended to is the emptying of the benches and overhauling them, fixing up any necessary repairs, both to them and to the house as well; also, do not let up on the painting that needs to be done. If there is any possible chance to do this work, make an effort to attend to it before filling the house again. The scarcity of labor and other conditions are making it hard to accomplish a great deal of work that really needs to be done, but, if at all possible, the painting and repairing should be among the first items to receive consideration. After the repairing has been done, give the inside of the benches and the side walls of the house a good application of limewash. Everything is then ready for bringing in the soil.

Provide a fresh live soil for filling the benches. Chrysanthemums are hearty feeders and need a good soil to produce good blooms. Most growers have their compost pile already prepared, so that when the benches are ready, all they have to do is to bring in the soil. The top sod soil from pasture land, which has been stacked long enough for the sod to have become well rotted, mixed with well-rotted manure in proportion of one part of manure to three parts of the soil, well mixed together, makes a good body for the compost. To this, can be added bonemeal, limestone, or a small quantity of pulverized sheep or cattle manure, in such amounts as each grower has found the soil with which he has to work will stand, but it is not wise to make the soil at the start any richer than is necessary for the plants to make a clean, vigorous growth. After they have become established, any extra nourishment that they may need to get the best results from them, can be supplied by top dressing and mulching. Planted into very rich soil, the plants often lose some of their roots, or else make a long-jointed, soft growth, which in time, causes the foliage to turn yellow. We find it works well with our soil, to spread a thin layer of well-rotted manure over the bottom of benches before filling in the soil. After the plants have become established, the roots work down into the manure with good results, but the manure should what on the build of the benches. If they are so that the plants can be worked from each side of the bench, then they can go a little closer, but where the plants have to be reached from one side of the bench only, they must have more room to properly care for them as regards pinching out the side shoots, staking and tying, etc.

After planting, pay close attention to the watering, to prevent overwaterchance to finish up the planting before they need attention. In this respect again, the success of growing chrysanthemums depends greatly on the close attention of these routine parts of their care as they need it.

A work in connection with the pompon and single varieties that should be attended to closely, is that of topping the plants to encourage them to break away and provide the required number of shoots each plant is expected to carry. This topping should be done gradually while the shoots are in a green state, and not allow the plants to run up to two or three long shoots, and then have to top back to hard wood.

Very quickly after planting, the weeds will begin to appear in the new soil. Allow them to remain long enough to properly handle, and no longer. Clean them out as soon as large enough to pull.

Cat-Tail Preparations.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you inform us how cat-tails may be preserved, dried or cured so that they may be used during the winter without bursting.

Missouri.

K. F. C.

The secret of preparing cat-tails is in the cutting. They must be gathered when they are just right, not before they have attained their full growth or after the seed is ripened. In the first stage they will not shape up properly, and in the latter condition will be sure to burst and scatter the fluffy interior every time they are handled. It is best also that they be suspended by the stems with heads down while being cured. Those who make a business of handling this stock can tell by the shade of brown in the spike just when to cut. The novice will have to find this out by experiment. The ripe or full heads can be held together by a coating of shellac or transparent glue, but they then always have a prepared appearance which is more or less objectionable.

MERIDAN, CONN.—Chester C. Minden, well-known florist, has purchased the stock and range of the Nampa Floral Co., and will conduct it as a branch.

be well-rotted. Never use fresh green manure.

Fill up the benches even full with soil, firming it down so that it is not at all spongy, levelling it off to make an even surface. Everything is then ready for the planting, which is the next consideration. The first thing in order, is to map out a plan of planting, according to growth of the varieties and their time of blooming. As advised through these columns a few weeks ago, the early varieties and the extra fancy or exhibition stock, should have been planted during May, and if this advice has been followed out, it is not necessary to figure on them in the work now, but if all the planting is still to be done, better results will be obtained by planting each section separately where this can be done. By this is meant, plant the early varieties on one bench by themselves, or in one house if that number of plants are grown, then have a separate space for the midseason varieties and another for the late varieties as well as the pompons and singles. It is then much easier to attend to the plants, and the space becomes available quicker after the crop has been marketed. The pompons and the dwarf growing varieties can occupy the side benches, with the tall growers for the center benches. This plan can be carried out with every section, taking, of course, into consideration the size and strength of the plants at time of planting, it being best to plant the 3-inch pot stock, which have attained a good size, in a space by themselves and another for the 2¼-inch or smaller plants. By doing this, more space between each plant can be given the large plants and less for the smaller ones. The question of the distance apart to plant each plant now arises. The strong growers with heavy foliage should be set 8x9 inches, and those with light foliage 7x8 inches, depending some-ing before the plants have a chance to become established in the soil. Water well at the roots at time of planting, then wait a few days until the soil shows signs of drying before watering again. Give the foliage a syringing morning and afternoon to keep the plants from wilting as well as to provide a moist atmosphere.

As soon as the plants have become established and are in need of supports, attend to this part of the work as soon as possible. Also pay attention to removing the side shoots and keeping the plants free from insects. It is a good plan before planting, to go over the plants and remove the side shoots. This gives the grower a Fuel Economies.

The intensive use of greenhouse space will be tried to the utmost if the order of the federal fuel administration issued April 24 holds good throughout the year. The entire trade are heart and soul in the winning of the war as shown by the great number of men who have joined the colors and by their earnest efforts in all parts of the country in support of the third Liberty Loan. They will no doubt do their utmost to keep up their earning power so as to be able to respond as heartily in the future. To cut off their supply of coal 50 per cent is reducing their producing power to one-half, almost the same as if a manufacturer was only allowed to run his plant three days a week. Necessity, which is said to be the "mother" of invention, will no doubt bring out new and original methods of conserving heat and utilizing greenhouse space such as have never been dreamed of.

Coming at this early date, greenhouse men will have time to plan their winter campaign, select and put in order the various houses best suited for their curtailed output, and bring this active section up to its highest efficiency. All greenhouses should be made as air tight as possible. The modern greenhouse is almost ideal in this respect, but the heat holding power of houses of the older type can be very greatly increased by paint and repairs that will make them absolutely water and weather proof. The addition of only one thickness of tarred building paper to the outside walls of a frame house, has been found to be a great conservator of heat. Outside doors should be made to fit tight, not only at sides, but also at top and bottom. If vestibuled, with an additional outside door, so much the better. Ventilators should shut down tight; far too much heat is lost through loosely fitting and warped ventilators.

The heating plant is very important. Many boilers are entirely unprotected, their outside surfaces exposed to cold drafts that take away much of their efficiency. Even when bricked in, a coating $\frac{1}{2}$ inch in thickness of some mastic preparation fills in the pores of the bricks and adds 10 per cent to the power of the boiler. Many boiler houses are mere sheds; large roomy enclosures that are open at coal chutes, windows and other places, admitting drafts of air in cold weather, that coming in contact with the iron surface of the boiler, absorb much of the precious fire heat. The cost of one or two tons of coal would pay for enough asbestos to cover moderate sized boilers, which amount would be saved in a month. Frequent, almost daily, cleaning of tubes or sections is imperative, the slightest coating of soot rendering the boiler that much less effective.

Much coal may be saved by careful firing; the front fire door should never be left partially open, as is often done to check or hold the fire dormant. This chills the boiler. Air should be admitted by a damper opening into the smoke flue immediately at the rear of the boiler. This holds the fire in check and yet does not chill the hot air and gases which have little draft to carry them rapidly up the chimney, as is the case when the door is open.

Growers have never made such a use of sun heat as they did the past winter. Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa., who found his forcing rose houses would stand a temperature much lower than had been his custom, banked his fires and shut off all steam on sunny days. No ventilation was given, all the sun heat being retained in the houses until it was found necessary to start the fires again.

Carnation growers have found that their plants will retain their vigor and health at a night temperature of 42° to 44°, while the standard has heretofore been 48° to 50°. The Chalfont Carnation Co., Chalfont, Pa., ran their carnations during January and February of last winter just so as to keep frost out of the houses; in fact, a few times the plants were slightly touched. There were not many flowers cut in these two months, but during March, the yield was so large that for the Growers are again urged to put in their supplies of coal now. There will be much difficulty in securing even the 50 per cent allowance later.

The railroads will be unable to transport all the coal needed later in the season.

three months it was even greater than last season, while the saving in fuel was fully one-half.

Sifting the fuel of the smaller grades, using the coarse at night, and the fine to bank or feed the fires during the day, has also been found by some growers to be well worth while.

Self-Dependent Growers.

There is a class of greenhouse men in the neighborhoods of the larger cities who are satisfied to grow but a few things that they can do well. With the assistance of an extra man, and possibly a boy, together with being constantly on the job themselves, they manage, with their 7,000 to 10,000 feet of glass, to turn out enough stock each year to provide a comfortable living and a little something over.

A successful grower of this class is Charles Hartley, of Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa. He specializes in snapdragons and calla lilies, both of which are grown so well that his only problem has been how best to get them to his customers. Two years ago he bought a Dodge car and now beats his old conveyance, the railroad train, in his round-trip journey of 25 miles by a large margin. His snapdragon plants for the coming season, cuttings struck about March 1, are now in 2-inch pots, nice, stocky plants that have been topped twice. The first of these will be planted inside about the middle of June, one house in benches, for early sales. The bulk of his crop is grown in ground beds. July 1, when the old beds have been cleaned off, the soil is given a top dressing of well rotted manure, dug in, and replanted with the stock from 2-inch pots. The colors are a rich bronze, pink, yellow, and white. All of these are selected strains of their respective colors, with other good qualities of close-set flowers, good stems, etc.

The ends of the tables or ground beds next to the shed, which are shaded a portion of the day, are planted with callas, as spider and thrip appear to like and thrive in these darkened spots. The best remedy for all insect pests here is found to be a good strong stream from the hose. Rust has appeared in this stock for the first time late this season; when a spot or two was noticed here and there, the infected leaves were instantly removed wherever seen.

The plants in the ground give the largest cut, with a longer season than those on tables, which, however, can be cut as early as October 1. The crops are regulated, or timed, partly by pinching, the experienced man being able to command crops for all busy seasons. A house planted August 1, in ground beds, which had been cut freely through late winter and spring, is now in full flower, while the earlier houses are nearly over. This latter is the outside house of the range, only 12 feet in width. The wall is of wood, with tarred paper covering. Posts that had rotted out have been replaced with $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch iron pipe set in cement, a flange at the upper end screwed into the sill, which makes a very firm and lasting job. The pipe posts that support the ridge-pole, set in cement at the outside of the walk, are straight three-fourths of the way, then curved over, and, by means of a threaded cross-iron, are screwed to the ridge. In this placing they are out of the way and appear to hold the house quite rigid.

Too much feeding is not good for snapdragons, inducing a rank, spongy growth.

Godfrey is the only calla grown. These are planted in ground beds, three feet six inches in width, four rows to the bed, about 12 inches apart in the rows. The beds are dried off after Memorial day and lifted about the first of July. The bulbs are cleaned off, all young stock removed, the beds well manured and dug in, and then replanted after July 4. The same soil has been used for three years, and they have done as well the last year as the first. They average three good flowers to a plant. Mr. Hartley has heard of growers who claimed four, but they had never been able to prove it when he called. He has found snapdragon a good outside summer crop. A large field bed, planted May 1, is getting away nicely, and he will cut the first flowers early in July. A later bed to be planted June 1 will come in August 1 and last until frost.

Giant marigolds and two rows of salpiglossis will produce flowers during July that are always in good demand.

Lower temperatures, from 50° to 55°, is the rule during the severe winter weather, but did not appear to save much coal. No air is given at all during the winter months. A scarcity of coal late in the season, when danger of extreme cold weather was over, compelled him to let the fires go. He then aired the houses night and day, leaving it on when the glass showed 30° outside at night. Nothing froze, and the stock finished the season in good shape. Temperatures inside, reduced from 50° to 40°, would save much more coal than when higher, as they were so near that of the outside weather. Mr. Hartley feels there is an advantage in delivering one's own flowers, as in this way he keeps constantly in touch with the market, and can retard or increase his crops according to demand.

Hospital Flowers' Soothing Influence.

There may be a well meant tendency throughout the country to cut out unnecessary expenditures, and in some cases flowers have been placed in this category, it being even suggested that they be eliminated in commencements and funerals. What would the soldiers say if they were required to march without music? It helps them in their duties and cheers them, and even so must flowers bring cheer to those away from the battle lines. The tender influence of flowers on the inmates of the hospitals for the insane is well known. We have been informed that the florist at one such institution has to keep a most vigilant watch on his flowers, otherwise they vanish and he later finds them in the different wards, soothing and giving the comfort for which God intended them. Of course the patients are supplied with their flowers, but they always clamor for more. To prove that flowers are a necessity, I am making the suggestion that florists at hospitals, state institutions for the insane, etc., give the readers of THE AMERICAN FLORIST and the public in general their experiences along this line. Express Your Personality.

How many florists throughout the United States and Canada have felt the personality and prestige of our national campaign backed up with the S. A. F.? Just consider our business as a whole before the campaign and since it started. Do you think with the present war conditions during the past year if we had not started the campaign and also the optimism to keep maintaining same, we would have held our equilibrium, or would we have drifted backward?

Have you felt the personality the campaign has injected into the florist business as a whole as compared to the manner you would have felt if we had never entered the publicity field? Has it increased your desire to keep up the ideals so as to make further progress when times may become normal again? If so, we will have started the pendulum of publicity going for all time.

How proud must be those members who have participated in this our first campaign, to be a part of what has already proven one of the most original publicity campaigns headed by the wonderful slogan adopted, "Say It With Flowers."

To think of what we have accomplished nationally with so little expense is nothing short of wonderment. Some of the ablest advertising men of the country have already commented on our campaign by mentioning the possibilities in store for us if we continue.

Express your personality by sending in your subscription now, so that the campaign will have the continued support of the craft who have the "finest" product on earth to sell, and yet have failed to let 100,000,000 people know about it.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman, National Pub. Campaign.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The secretary spent last week in New England and added considerably to the publicity fund through subscriptions obtained from florists who now realize the immensity of the campaign work and the great good resulting. He takes this opportunity to thank all those who in any way assisted to facilitate his work and to enable him to make the most of his time. At the present he is working westward with encouraging prospects.

It was confidently hoped at the outset of the campaign that the committees' appeals for funds would meet with ready response if made by mail in the ordinary way. The response did materialize, but it was not nearly large enough to cover the expenditures planned and necessary. The committees then decided that the secretary should make personal solicitations, arranging his itineraries to the best advantage. This he is now doing. It is not a "begging" expedition. Far from it—he is showing florists who are inclined to be incredulous the kind of work the publicity promotion bureau is doing and how results are obtained. He is promulgating the doctrine that "to reap we must sow." With propaganda detrimental to the sale of flowers and plants being freely disseminated through the public press, some of it arising through actual conditions coincident to the times, but much more of it due to maudlin patriotism induced by misdirected imagination, the use of flowers is being assailed as something highly improper. This propaganda can only be combated by publicity for flowers, publicity well directed—organized publicity. This is costly, but if every florist meets his portion of the expense, it is easily met. If you, Mr. Reader, have not yet subscribed, do not delay. The publicity committee should not be hampered in its further work by an insufficiency of funds, but it will be unless greater interest is shown in the campaign. Do not leave it to your neighbor to do what you should do yourself. Many florists have given liberally, and have pledged their subscriptions for four years. No one is expected to contribute beyond his means, but even a little squeeze is warranted in such a cause.

If anyone who has not received a copy of our explanatory broadside will drop us a postal a copy will be mailed at once.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Forcing Freesias.

The custom with many growers is to force freesias planted in pots or flats. At the Floracraft Gardens, Moorestown, N. J., where they grow over 20,000, they are planted one inch apart in rows in a center raised bed or table, five feet across. Every 10 feet a cross-rod on posts, either side of the bed, holds a two-inch mesh chicken wire netting in three strips, which supports the stems, keeping the various plants well separated. The strips of netting enable one to reach under from the center when cutting. Otherwise they would have to be reached under the netting from either side. The netting is placed on the surface of the soil before the growth starts, and is raised occasionally as they grow, being careful not to get it so high as to catch the buds or sprays. It is much less trouble than staking and more effective in keeping the flower stems straight. The first flowers were cut the second week in January, and there being several plantings, the crop will last from a month to six weeks. It looked as if they would pay much better than Paper Whites.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—The premium list of the New Bedford Horticultural Society has been issued, covering the peony and rose exhibitions in June and the dahlia show in September. LEAD has advanced to 7.82½ cents per pound.

THE Christmas rose (Hellebarus niger) in its various forms should do well in those unheated greenhouses.

ADAM's profession is now and always has been the giant leader of the arts and sciences. The present war, probably the greatest upheaval of the human race, is backing hard and fast upon the land and the grower. The mighty laggards in all other branches of industry have thus far failed to properly distribute what the growers of America have produced.

THE call is out for Commodore Westcott's beach party at Waretown, N. J., June 21.

Bulb Embargo—Official.

Supplementing the communications under this head in our issue of June 15, page 1064, Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, transmits the following:

June 14, 1918.

Mr. W. F. Gude,
Care of Gude Brothers Co., 1214 F Street, Washington, D. C.
Dear Sir—Following up our letter of June 11, in regard to the restriction against the importation of bulbs, plants, trees, shrubs, and vines, it should be added that these commodities can be imported when coming as a return cargo from Europe, and then only when ready at a convenient port, and when loaded without delay.

Under these conditions, you will apply for licenses to the Bureau of Imports, War Trade Board, who will issue same in due course.

(Signed) THOMAS M. SLOCUM.

Division of Planning and Statistics.

Another letter on the same subject is as follows:

Washington, D. C., June 17, 1918.
Vaughan's Seed Store,
31 West Randolph Street,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen: Your letter of June 14 regarding the importation of bulbs, etc., duly received. As we have previously written you, bulbs can be brought in from Europe from a convenient port if ready to put on board without delaying the sailing of a vessel.

As you state, there is usually plenty of room for such merchandise on what is called the "back haul" from Europe.

Division of Planning and Statistics.

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION, AUGUST 20-22.

Interest is now centering upon the forthcoming convention, to be held in St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22.

The trade exhibition will, as usual, be a prominent feature of the convention, and, despite these wartimes, bids fair to equal, if not surpass, any previous exhibition. All who contemplated making exhibits last April, when the national flower show was expected to be held jointly with the convention, are bestirring themselves with preparations for the August dates, and Moolah Temple will, it is assured, house a most comprehensive exhibit of the various lines of florists' supplies, plants and auxiliaries. The plans which were issued early in the year are still effective, and will cover the layout of the exhibition. The rate for space is 40 cents per square foot, and the choice of location hinges upon the recognized rule of first come first served. Anyone desiring a plan should make request of the secretary for same.

The local committees in St. Louis are busy with convention arrangements, which, it is safe to say, will be perfect, as St. Louis is familiar with our requirements through previous experience.

As the railroads are now under government control, the flat rate of three cents per mile for transportation will, of course, be in effect, but this is not expected to have any deleterious influence upon the attendance as, this year more than ever, florists feel that the opportunity to meet trade conditions as an organization must not be missed.

American Sweet Pea Society.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society to be held in Philadelphia in Wanamaker's Greek Hall, June 25-26, is looming up to be quite a successful affair. The Sweet Pea Bulletin and schedule of the exhibition, which has just been issued, is a most complete and interesting pamphlet containing much valuable information together with special articles on this subject. Contributions of $250 have been received which enabled the purchase of a memorial cup of this value in honor and memory of the late Rev. W. T. Hutchins. Exhibits preceded by entries, marked "American Sweet Pea Society Exhibition," care of Wm. Gray, secretary Wanamaker's Greek Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., will be received and properly staged.

The Hutchins Memorial cup is a challenge trophy to be competed for year after year. Atlee Burpee Co.'s $25 silver cup and a $10 cash prize will be added. There are also a number of other valuable cups, medals, certificates, and smaller cash prizes, not the least of which are the silver and silver gilt medals of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain, for amateurs only.

The business meeting will be held June 25, at 3 p. m. in a room adjoining that of the exhibition.

BUSINESS IS SOMEWHAT BETTER.

Business is somewhat better at this writing and stock is not as plentiful as it has been. The market was cleaned up pretty well the end of last week when one department store gave away 25,000 peonies, one dozen to each customer who purchased at least $1 worth of goods which was prominently featured in all their advertisements in the daily papers. Another large concern bought 72,000 carnations which it distributed free to all its customers who visited the chain of stores that it opened to the public June 15 which also had considerable to do with strengthening of the market on that day. Roses are in good supply and some particularly fine Mrs. Chas. Russell are now to be had. American Beauty roses are none too plentiful and continue to clean up nicely right along at the advertised prices. Columbia is arriving in fair supply and is in good demand. Champ Weiland and My Maryland are attracting the attention of the city buyers and are having a good call. Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia, Sunburst and Ward are plentiful enough to supply the demand as are the other varieties grown for this market not already mentioned. Orchids are scarce and the same holds true for lily of the valley. Peonies are in large supply and are having a good call. A few good lilies are seen at some of the stores not to mention a very limited supply of callas. Daisies, pansies, snapdragons, calendulas, pond lilies and feverfew are among the offerings. The wholesale stores will close Sundays commencing July 7 so all buyers in this market will govern themselves accordingly. They will remain open until 9 o'clock Saturday evening for the benefit of both the local and out-of-town trade.

Poshlmann Bros. Co. is experiencing a splendid demand for young own root rose stock which is of the same high quality as the cut roses they are now supplying their customers with at the store. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia of extra fancy quality are in particularly good supply together with all the other varieties that they grow and will be in good crop with them all through the summer months.

Herman Schiller, manager of Schiller's north side store, has joined the colors after being rejected several times, and is now receiving training for the new merchant marine fleet. George Asmus will look after both stores in the future and while it will mean added duties he will be found equal to the occasion owing to his wonderful executive ability.

Wietor Bros. report that the demand for chrysanthemum stock continues to be exceedingly brisk and judging from the many orders that are being filled they will be grown in quantity again this year which means plenty of cut stock for the early fall trade regardless of the 50 per cent fuel restriction.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, is satisfied with the amount of business enjoyed so far in June notwithstanding that the total sales were not as large as those of the same period in 1917. This house is now cutting from a large crop of splendid Mrs. Chas. Russell roses.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are handling a fine line of stock including roses, carnations and peonies and report business as good. The shipping trade is holding up well at this establishment and the city trade has shown much improvement the past week.

The Ernst Wienhoeber Co., Paul Blome & Co., and Walter W. Adams, all on the north side, have agreed to close their stores on Sundays during the summer months regardless of whether the other florists in their vicinity keep open or not.

Zech & Mann are strong on Mrs. Chas. Russell roses this week and are receiving a good supply of Columbia regularly. The demand for Columbia is exceptionally good and this variety is rapidly making friends with the best buyers.

Adam B. Kirscht, of Niles Center, was killed in action recently in France. He was 22 years old and a son of Theodore Kirscht, who has been custodian of the Glen View Golf grounds for the past fifteen years.

Percy Jones, Inc., reports a great improvement in trade this week both in the local and out-of-town demand. Particularly fine carnations are seen in quantity here.

The body of Miss Gertrude Jansen is reported to have been found in the Chicago river June 17. Miss Jansen was one of Peter Reinberg's greenhouse employees.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Can., arrived here this week and will devote his time to looking after his interests in the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette.

Stielow Bros. Co., of Niles Center, is cutting quite heavily in Columbia roses which they are consigning exclusively to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

James M. O'Neill, better known as "Micky," formerly with W. H. Kidwell, is with the colors and when last heard from was at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner report that the demand for peonies is considerably better at this writing and that the call for this item was very good June 15.

Charles Erne's son-in-law, Max McSweeney, is with the colors at Macon, Ga., and is slated for promotion in the near future.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a good supply of roses including Champ Weiland which is proving to be a good seller with them.

A. T. Pyfer, of A. T. Pyfer & Co., is planning on taking a couple of weeks' vacation in the near future.

F. M. Dubois, formerly with George Wienhoeber, is now with the colors at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Pa.

Havighurst of the First Methodist church performing the ceremony in the presence of a few immediate relatives and friends. The couple will make their home with the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. William Hahn, 2029 North Water street. Mr. Daut expects to enter the radio department of the government school at Plattsburgh, N. Y., in the near future.

STOCK SUFFERS FROM WARM WEATHER.

From the looks of the counters at the various wholesale markets, one is convinced that the summer season has set in in earnest. The weather has been excessively hot the past week, and flowers have suffered in consequence. Carnations are still hanging on and keep surprisingly well, but they are very small and off color. Sweet peas are fairly good, but another week of hot weather will put a crimp into them. Gladioli have not begun to come in quantities as yet; another week or 10 days will see a lot of them. Roses, with the exception of Russell and a few Columbia, are getting poorer daily. Lilies have been in good supply and are of good quality. Lily of the valley is not in steady supply, and this causes some inconvenience at times.

NOTES.

The florists' club journeyed to Edwardsville, Ill., June 13, to hold the meeting at the Woodlawn Gardens at Mr. Blixen's invitation. About 40 members went over in a special car, and very few of the local florists had ever seen Mr. Blixen's plant. It is a modern range, well kept, and a credit to the craft in every way. Mr. and Mrs. Blixen are very genial hosts and entertained the visitors royally with refreshments, lunch and the smokes. It was an enjoyable trip, everybody had a good time, and host and hostess were the recipients of the thanks of all present. The coming picnic was discussed, the trustees reporting they would select the place within a few days and the date would more than likely be some time during the third week of July. It was unanimously decided that all florists and employees of florists who had gone into the service during the war be awarded an honorary membership in the club. After the meeting a number of the "Pep Gang" took a little side trip to a neighboring town where a convention was being held and made a real day of it.

At last it has been discovered why Oscar Ruf attends only the outdoor summer meetings of the florists' club.

LITTLE GOOD STOCK AVAILABLE.

The market has been rather brisk the past week. What few weddings there are call mostly for garden flowers. There is very little good stock of any kind on the market, except in roses, which still continue to arrive in good quality. Ophelia, Prima Donna, Russell, Shawyer and Ward are the best obtainable. Garden flowers of all kinds are in large supply, much earlier than in former years. Gaillardias, phlox, campanulas, delphiniums, larkspur, coreopsis, sweet williams and candidum lilies are seen every day in the wholesale houses, also in the country markets. Carnations are still offered but are very small and if the hot weather continues, they will soon be off the list entirely. Good lilies have a fair demand, and there is enough for everyone. There is also a good supply of lily of the valley and orchids, which move slowly. There is plenty of all greens, except smilax. The local crop of ferns are now on the market and are very fine.

NOTES.

At the luncheon of the retail florists' association, held June 11, Mr. Miller, of the local fuel administration, addressed the meeting in regard to the use of fuel among the florists for the coming year. His talk was principally on the order issued by like authorities at Washington, and was explained in detail. Fred Burki and Mr. Meuschler, who attended the meeting at Washington, D. C., also spoke of what they had heard while there. All who were present heard a very interesting talk and agreed to help the administration in every way they could.

Jos. Seaman is now connected with the Davis Enterprise Co., and is an able assistant to Jas. Higgins, the manager, of the new flower department.

Nearly all of the retail stores are closing at 5 p. m. The wholesale houses have been closing at that hour since the first of June.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has a very attractive window each day of garden flowers.

Geo. Frank has returned from a visit to New York.

SUMMER QUIET FOLLOWS ACTIVE SEASON.

Business during the past week has taken on a real summery aspect, with cut flowers of all kinds swamping the market. Roses and carnations are both good, with peonies now at their best and very plentiful, but the demand has slackened, causing an oversupply. The bedding season is about over, and most of the florists report the season better than last year. Stock was none too plentiful, and in most cases a cleanup resulted.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY SUMMER SHOW.

The state horticultural society, in conjunction with the Northwestern Peony Society and the Garden Flower Society, will hold the regular summer meeting, June 21, at the state agricultural school at Hamline, the same to take the form of a state flower show for the benefit of the Red Cross. More than $200 in premiums will be awarded for seasonable flowers, including peonies, roses and a large list of perennials. All flowers and fruit displayed will be sold, and a good sum should be realized. The annual picnic dinner will be served on the farm school campus.

CLUB MEETING.

Two applicants were elected at the June meeting of the florists club: Charles Ford, of West Park Station, Philadelphia, Pa., and Louis Handling, of New York. Both are well known in the trade as commercial travelers. They attended the May meeting of the club and their names were proposed by Morris Cohen, of New York, who was present. The invitation of Frederick Goldring to hold the July meeting of the club at his place at Font Grove was accepted. On account of the fact that July 4 will fall this year on the meeting night it was decided to change the date to July 11.

NOTES.

With the encouragement of the city administration, many residents have gone into gardening on a more or less extensive scale. Mayor James R. Watt has named a war garden committee with headquarters in the city hall. The committee is made up of Frank R. Lanagan, city engineer, chairman; Mrs. James Q. Barcus, Mrs. Frederick D. Bidwell, Mrs. Otto E. Eichle, Wallace Greenalch, the commissioner of public works; Miss Virginia Hastings, Samuel Hessberg, Prof. C. Edward Jones, Henry H. Kohn, Mrs. John H. McElroy, Seth W. Morton, Mrs. George C. Treadwell, Henry B. Winters, and Mrs. Asa Wynkoop. The committee has received responses from over 200 owners of vacant lots in the city who are willing to loan their land for the cultivation of vegetables. To encourage the amateur gardeners in their efforts to add to the country's food supply during the war, the committee has laid out two triangular plots in Washington park, near the King memorial fountain. One plot is 43x46 feet and the other 55x63 feet. The ground is planted with vegetables such as can be grown in a good sized yard, tomatoes, peas, corn, snap beans, lettuce, radishes, parsley, and endive. Later in the season, these will be followed by cabbage, squash, celery, and turnips. On Saturday afternoons an expert is stationed at the plots to explain to inquirers how the vegetables are grown and how to overcome difficulties that the amateurs meet in their work. The committee has given to Italian residents permission to lay out gardens near the new sewage disposal plant on Westerlo island, south of the city. Thus far about 25 have received permits, and the allotments have been based on the size of the family of the applicant. The workmen at the city filtration plant, in the northern section of the city, have undertaken to cultivate a plot of three acres in the vicinity of the water works. The men work the land after their regular day's labor is over. About 22 young women employed in the state department of education have taken over a large vacant lot at Elk and Dove streets, and they may be seen there any evening working with the hoe and sprinkler over long rows of vegetables.

Thirty men from the state conservation commission, during the last week in May, were employed in the town of Corinth, Saratoga county, to destroy all the current and gooseberry bushes they could find. The object is to prevent the spread of the white pine blister rust, which has become a serious menace to forests in western Massachusetts and this section of New York state. The commission compensates owners for the bushes destroyed.

Three century plants at the north end of the flower plot in Washington park are in bud and expected to bloom this month. Superintendent Philip Bender, of the park department, says that the plants have been in possession of the city for 30 years and he estimates their age at 45 years. So far as known, this is the first time they have been in bud. The stalk that will bear the flowers rises above the plant for about six feet.

At the last meeting of the board of contract and supply, no bids were received for bulbs for the park system for fall of 1918. The board had decided to spend $1,000 on this item and had advertised in the local newspapers for bids. As none were received, the board decided to use the money in other ways. The old bulbs will be taken up carefully and replanted for next year's flowers.

FUNERAL WORK STRENGTHENING FACTOR.

Trade during the past week has been unusually heavy, augmented by a brisk call for funeral work. Sales of cut flowers continue to hold up well and everybody manages to keep busy. The peony season is now at an end, and lasting but two weeks, it is about a record for shortness. Carnations are coming in with small flowers and the call is limited. Roses are good however, and several growers are cutting heavily at present.

NOTES.

This vicinity was visited with one of the most severe hail storms in several years on the evening of June 12, East Providence, Seekonk, North Scituate and parts of Pawtucket, suffering the most damage. Considerable glass was broken and the loss to growing vegetables was considerable.

Salesmen representing New York supply houses, in this city last week, report business throughout the country generally satisfactory.

JUNE FUNCTIONS BRING GOOD TRADE.

June weddings and commencements have been the features of the business during the week and the volume has been good. Peonies are still flooding the market, but the supply has not been as large as in former years. Carnations are very plentiful although the quality is deteriorating daily. Roses are good, favored by the cool weather. The supply however is meager. Sweet peas are very scarce and the quality is poor. Harrisii lilies are plentiful and ferns and asparagus are showing improvement in form.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the florists' club was held June 13. Wm. Pitkin, who was to address the meeting on the subject of the proposed federal legislation to prohibit the importation of nursery stock into the United States was unavoidably detained, and the secretary, Ambrose Secker, was also held up in Clyde, N. Y.

N. Tsikafoto, of Kobe, Japan, commissioned by the mayor of that city to inspect parks in this country, was a recent visitor the guest of Commissioner of Parks Wm. S. Riley.

Miss Rose Brown, formerly with Colatos Bros., has taken a position with H. P. Neun on Main street. She is succeeded by Miss Florence Inglesby.

Oliver Boucher, who has been at Mt. Clemens, Mich., for six weeks taking treatments for rheumatism, has returned to this city.

The peony show at Highland park was unusually good this year and attracted thousands of visitors.

Geo. T. Boucher had an unusually large number of orders for an out-of-town funeral, June 12.

H. E. Wilson arranged an elaborate church decoration June 9 for a special festival.

This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

GOOD STOCK COMMANDS HIGH PRICES.

Business is fair for the season; in fact, for the men who have any good stock to sell, there is presented an opportunity to cash in at top figures. Anything of prime quality in roses is quickly grabbed up. Russell, Prima Donna, Hadley and September Morn being particularly in demand. American Beauties are very poor. A few Victoria are coming in, and when carefully handled, are much the best white. Gladioli are now a factor there being some very good cold frame stock. There are plenty of Easter lilies; if the war continues, and no more bulbs come over, there will be a chance for something else that will shorten up the general supply. The cool weather of the past week has been good for the outdoor sweet peas, the stock from cold frames meeting with a ready sale. Candytuft, feverfew, and gaillardias, together with plenty of larkspur, are seen in all the stocks. Dorothy Perkins sprays have been at their best this week, and have helped out in many funeral sprays, wreaths, etc. There are still a few cold storage peonies, which seem to find a stage for their short career.

THE FUTURE.

With the coal and labor situation so unsettled, each branch of the business is in a waiting state, the growers working hard to get their plants into shape so as to have good fall crops and stock to fill all the houses that they can operate under the government ruling. The labor situation is very unsettled and will be until after July 1, when the various announcements or orders of the government have crystallized into something tangible that all can understand.

WITH THE WHOLESALE.

"Not a great deal doing, very little good stock and about the usual conditions for this time of year," is a summary of last week's business by Leo Niessen. Easter lilies, Russell roses and gladioli were prominent features.

The Jos. Heacock Co. is gradually moving to its new location, 9 Mole street, the building recently occupied by the Floral Nurseries. A fair week's business is reported.

The Florex Garden leaders, Prima Donna and September Morn, are good summer roses. Eugene Bernheimer finds the demand better than supply for these varieties.

At Berger Bros.' market they have a good demand for all kinds of flowers that will grade extra or above. Easter lilies, gladioli and Maryland roses are specials.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange finds a good demand for all the best roses, as crops have shortened up the past week. Prices are a shade better.

NOTES.

Edward Reid, in sizing up the situation, said: "I think this curtailment of production will be a benefit all around. There has in the past few years, been a great overproduction of stock at all favorable seasons. With the exception of a few weeks, the quantity of flowers is so great, and the market so continually filled, that, conditions distinctly favor the buyer; in fact, it is nearly always a buyer's market. Cost of production and handling the stock, are nothing to the dealer, who does not order until he feels sure he has secured the lowest price. With a third to a half less supply, prices will advance, there will be very little waste, cost of production and handling will decrease with net results quite as satisfactory to the growers as before."

Henry J. Miller, 1416 South Broad street, had his Ford touring car stolen, June 15, while parked on Sixteenth and Ranstead streets. He was getting his usual Saturday morning's supply of flowers in the wholesale houses, and with the stock ready to load up, found his car gone. Frank M. Ross' car, which was stolen a week ago, was found several days later in Chestnut Hill minus tires and everything removable. It will cost over $400 to replace the missing parts. As it was fully insured, he suffers only the inconvenience of the loss of the car for the week.

The land on which were situated the nurseries of Robert Buist, at 67th street and Elmwood avenue, long before this latter thoroughfare was opened, has been taken by the government. On this is being erected hundreds of substantial dwellings to be rented to the employees of the American International Ship-building Corporation of Hog Island. When at the height of its glory, in the late sixties, this was the most important greenhouse and rareplant establishment in the United States.

It looks as if there would be a bumper crop of chrysanthemums the coming fall, many growers filling the houses that will lay dormant after these are cut out until spring.

BUSINESS FAIR CONSIDERING CONDITIONS.

There was a slight improvement in business in the wholesale district during the latter part of the past week. There have been numerous weddings, and though wedding decorations are not what they once were, some flowers are used in most of them. The weather has been unseasonably cold and rainy, which has to some extent reduced the supply of stock, but of certain kinds there is more than enough. Of all the tea roses that arrive, a large proportion are poor and go cheap, but good special stock, which is scarce, sells well. Many American Beauties are also poor and go slow. The best feature of the market for those who have them—are orchids. C. gigas are selling, wholesale rates, for $1 per flower and upward; C. Mossiae, 75 cents. The peony situation has cleared, as the supply is greatly reduced. There are quantities in cold storage, but it can hardly be said that they are disturbing factors in the market. Field grown sweet peas are now arriving in considerable quantities and the best go fairly well, for if there is any business worth while, good sweet peas will sell. Carnations, so to speak, are "dead ducks;" most of the stock is poor and the retail stores will not buy it, the main outlet being the push cart. In larkspurs, gaillardias, coreopsis and various other minor stocks there is an abundant supply. The quality of the lily of the valley is generally poor, but there is always a demand for the best. It looks as though there is hard sledding ahead for lily of the valley as well as bulbs. The growers who specialize in roses and carnations, and their commission men, cannot be expected to worry over it and the others will have to try something else. While a moderate quantity of such flowering stock has always been desirable, it is the opinion of some that in the past, the Holland bulb business has been overdone.

June 17.—There is a cheerful tone to the market this morning, and stock is moving. The weather has cleared, but is not hot.

NOTES.

The Holland-America liner, Nieuw Amsterdam, arrived from Rotterdam June 12 and anchored in the North river for inspection by American and British naval and intelligence departments. She carried 612 passengers, many of them Dutch citizens on their way to their nation's possessions in Java and Borneo, via the Pacific. The Nieuw Amsterdam received a safe-conduct from the German government for passage through the North sea, only on condition that no passengers belonging to America or any other of the entente allies should be carried. It is stated that this was strictly obeyed. The ship brought no cargo.

While the people of this city are not getting excited over the presence of German submarines along the coast, the gravity of their menace to shipping, particularly coastwise, cannot be denied. If it should grow more serious, it will be bad for getting coal to New England points. Of course, the depredations of the submarines have been no surprise. The Hun has become so accustomed to pillage and the slaughter of women and children, and nameless crimes, that he doubtless considers it great sport.

Again referring to bulbs, it would seem unlikely, that even if our shipping board should consent to let them in, any would be shipped from the Netherlands; that country seems perilously near to becoming a vassal of Germany, as witness the recent refusal of a safe conduct for the Nieuw Amsterdam, if she carried American or entente passengers. Of the 20 ships recently sunk off this coast by piratical U-boats, six were those of Norway, a neutral country.

A special to the "Sun" from Lenox, Mass., states that, June 14, a severe hailstorm stripped trees of their foliage and did much damage to flowers and vegetables. So much hail fell that the boys enjoyed snowballing matches. No mention was made of damage to glass.

Horace E. Froment, 148 West 28th street, is receiving from L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., fine stock of the new rose, Columbia, of this year's planting. We are pleased to state that Mr. Coddington, who has been quite ill of pneumonia, is improving.

We have heard from H. D. Darlington, formerly a well known grower of heather at Flushing. He is located with his family, at West Chester, Pa., which he says is a nice old town, the only fault being poor fishing.

"Jack the Florist" who has a store at Broadway and 149th street, was recently quite pleased by receiving an order for flowers from a soldier "somewhere in France," to be sent to his sweetheart in this city.

William Plumb is elated over the receipt of a cablegram from his oil company in Cuba, June 14, saying that at a depth of 850 feet they had struck oil, and by going 1,000 feet they expect a gusher.

The Fordham Florist has a neat retail store at 421 East Fordham road, near Fordham University, and is doing a good business. This firm has another store at Seventh avenue and 116th street.

Extensive improvements are being made in G. E. M. Stumpp's store, Fifth avenue and 58th street. Business is said to be good at his other store at Southampton, L. I.

Joseph A. Millang, of the New York Cut Flower Co., is receiving fine stock of the rose, Francis Scott Key, from F. R. and P. M. Pierson.

A feature of the market at present is gypsophila, which is arriving in quantity and sells well, being useful for mixing in bouquets.

Peter F. McKenney, Fifth avenue and 42nd street, is displaying in his show window, exceptionally fine stock of the rose, Columbia.

William Mackie, 105 West 28th street, is receiving fine lilies and yellow daisies.

The above named society held an interesting flower show in the Bronx Park Museum, June 15-16. Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. In climbing roses, they exhibited such well known varieties as Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha, Lady Godiva and Dr. Van Fleet. In hybrid teas, they had Lady Alice Stanley, Radiance. Red Radiance and many others. In herbaceous flowers, they made an interesting exhibit of Delphiniums, Polar Star, D. Ceres, D. Formosum and D. Queen of Spain. Digitalis, campanulas, aquilegias, veronicas and other stock were well represented. The Bronx Park botanical gardens made an excellent exhibit of roses. Of these, not the least interesting features were a number of vases of the pernetianas. Los Angeles, Willowmere, Arthur R. Goodwin, Beaute de Lyon and Mad. Edward Herriot being noteworthy. Newark, N. J.

Memorial day business, so far as we have learned, was satisfactory to the retailers, and June business is favorable, a number being busy with landscape and cemetery work in addition to their store business.

The Rosery Floral Co., 167 Market street, has recently arranged a number of good wedding decorations. This firm has a branch store on Academy street, and we found business active at both.

Connelly & Plunkett, Bloomfield and Mt. Prospect avenues, report excellent Memorial day business and are now keeping busy in various lines.

G. E. Davis, 76 South Grove street, who has been working a part of the Hornecker range, is giving it up, as he is in the draft.

At Begerow's, 946 Broad street, there is always something doing in weddings or funeral work, and we found everybody busy.

Philips Brothers, 938 Broad street, report good business. This firm fills many orders from other towns and cities.

F. A. Kuehn, 621 Central avenue, has a good cemetery business and says it is now better than ever.

SHORTENING SUPPLY RAISES PRICES.

The call for flowers the early part of last week was light, although there was an improvement toward the end, which caused the market to shorten and prices advanced accordingly. There is no oversupply in any line, and shortage was noted in sweet peas, Easter lilies and carnations. Roses are plentiful and reasonable in price.

NOTES.

E. E. Fletcher, of Auburndale, is planning to close his range and devote his entire time to his farm in Florida. He is now shipping to this market, yellow marguerites and delphiniums.

Charles Evans reports a good season with peonies, his daily cut averaging 150 dozen, and cleaning up at 75 cents. He is also cutting Sprengeri, plumosus and swainsonas.

Good business continues at the establishment of B. A. Snyder & Co. They carry a good stock, especially peonies, roses, carnations and gladioli.

J. J. Cassidy is having a good season. Four weddings were handled here last week and there is plenty of stock for funeral work.

Houghton-Gorney Co. reports good business. They recently had an attractive window of pond lilies and mountain laurel.

At the two stores of Thos. F. Galvin, although help is scarce, they are handling a good trade satisfactorily.

Thomas Roland is shipping excellent Ophelia, Killarney Queen and Ward roses from his Revere range.

Jack Foote has started his cuts of single bouvardia in red and pink, and white jasmine.

At the store of Penn, The Florist, wedding orders and funeral work have been brisk.

Ithaca Rose Test Garden.

The Auburn Rose Society made a visit to the rose test garden at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., June 15, about 30 members of the society making the trip by automobile. After luncheon the society inspected the gardens of the department of floriculture. Two beds of roses planted chiefly with varieties of hybrid teas comprised one of the notable features of the garden. The variety Crimson Queen with its freedom of bloom, was especially worthy of note. Two beds of Diener's Ruffled Monster petunias attracted much attention and received much favorable comment. Two beds of pansies also were in excellent condition for this season of the year and were much praised, both on account of size and fullness of bloom.

On the arrival of the party at the rose test garden, Professor E. A. White extended a welcome to the visitors on behalf of the department of floriculture, and Dr. A. C. Beal explained briefly the development and purpose of the garden.

Although the past winter proved to be unusually severe on roses, many of the hybrid tea varieties came through in good condition and were showing a fine amount of bloom. Many of the hybrid perpetual varieties were in good condition and gave the visitors an opportunity for observation and comparative study. With a few exceptions, the climbers were not in bloom, but they will make an excellent display a little later in the season. Christine Wright, with its fine, large pink flowers, was the most advanced of the climbing roses and was highly praised. The visitors spent considerable time in studying and comparing varieties and it is certain that if the Auburn enthusiasts purchase plants of all the varieties whose names were recorded in the numerous note books, Syracuse will have to look to her laurels, otherwise she will no longer be "The Rose City of the Empire State."

The peonies, of which the department of floriculture has a large collection, were just about in full bloom and were greatly admired by the visitors. Three varieties which were noticed especially were Asa Gray, Felix Crousse, and Albert Crousse.

LIMITED SUPPLY SELLS READILY.

The market is rather short on stock and everything that is coming into the wholesale houses, when at all good, cleans up readily. Prices are reasonable. But few good roses are available. Those that do arrive are selling readily. The carnation supply has shortened greatly and is of a poor quality. Easter lilies are short, but according to advices from the growers this is only temporary and by next week we should have a good supply on hand. Rubrums are fairly plentiful. Gladioli are available each day, but the cut is rather small.

NOTES.

Mrs. Dameron has purchased the Klein Flower store in Bellevue, Ky.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some excellent hardy hydrangeas.

W. Ray Murphy and wife are on an auto trip through the northern part of the state, Cleveland is their destination.

E. G. Gillett has been getting in some excellent Russell roses that are selling well.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Thirty-Sixth Annual Convention, Chicago, June 18-20.

The Opening Session.

With a large and representative attendance from all sections, the thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association opened at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, at 10 a. m. June 18, the three-day programme promising to be one of the most interesting in the history of the organization in view of the conditions now affecting the trade.

The first business Tuesday morning was the president's address, which, in a review of the work of the year, including the valuable services of Counsel Curtis Nye Smith, the war service committee, and other important details, called special attention to the urgent need for the importation of Oriental farm labor. The address was referred to a special committee composed of Watson S. Woodruff, S. F. Willard and E. L. Page, all ex-presidents of the association. Secretary Kendel presented the report of the executive committee, and also his own reports as secretary-treasurer, showing a net gain in membership during the past year of 25, and a healthy balance in the treasury. The financial portion of this report was referred to the auditing committee, consisting of Edward Leonard, F. C. Stokes and David Burpee.

W. F. Therkindson, chairman, presented the report of the committee on postal laws, which was accepted. In connection with the report, he read a letter from Hon. J. C. Koons, first assistant postmaster-general, and, on motion of Mr. Therkindson, a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered the Hon. Mr. Koons for his courtesy and co-operation with the seedsmen. S. Phillips Landreth, chairman of the committee on nomenclature, made report by letter that, owing to present abnormal conditions, nothing had been done by this committee during the past year.

On suggestion of Secretary Kendel, a motion was passed in line with the action taken by the market gardeners' association, recommending to the United States department of agriculture that it is advisable that the time of one man in the department be devoted exclusively to placing the work of nomenclature on a permanent practical working basis, in order that some effective work may be accomplished along this line, this man to co-operate with the vegetable growing interests, the vegetable seed interests and the seed trade interests generally in the various states. The committee on resolutions was instructed to prepare and report later suitable resolutions in conformity with the above. R. P. Steckler, of the committee on Oriental farm labor, reported nothing had been done by this committee during the past year. President Bolgiano deplored that such was the fact and expressed the hope that next year's committee would make better progress.

W. A. Wheeler, in charge of the seed reporting service, bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, delivered an address on "Seed Reporting as a Public Service." Mr. Wheeler was asked numerous questions, to which he courteously replied and assured the convention of the desire of the bureau to co-operate with the seedsmen at all times. He was especially solicitous that it be thoroughly understood that all communications to his bureau would be treated in the strictest confidence and no improper use made of the same.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.
President American Seed Trade Association.

On motion of Secretary Kendel, an amendment to the constitution and by-laws was adopted, increasing the annual dues to $25 and the initiation fee, including first year's dues, to $50.

A pleasing feature just before the close of the morning session was the rising, in Rotary fashion, of all attending and announcing their names and firm connections.

At the afternoon meeting, before going into executive session, L. L. Olds, chairman of the committee on experiment stations, presented the report of his committee, which included the joint work of the entire committee, the plan adopted having been to assign duties to each special territory and bring their combined work into one report. The length of the report forbids a full abstract, but some of the interesting points were the following: Canada reports that a new variety of wheat, called "The Marquis," is displacing all others, principally because of its earlier yields. The Pennsylvania experiment station has entered a decided protest against the practice of listing the same varieties of vegetables under different names and urges seedsmen to condemn this practice. Iowa has discovered a new annual white seed clover, which in three and a half months grew to a height of four and a half feet. Montana has carried on some experiments with the germination of grains, showing that with wheat, for instance, 75 samples showed an average test of 27 per cent one week after threshing, while the same samples tested 94 per cent two months after threshing. Some of the states, particularly Kentucky and Wisconsin, are making a strong plea for the observance of their state seed laws on the part of non-resident seedsmen. Minnesota reports a new oats, called "Minnesota," which will be available in small quantities for the trade next spring. The Tennessee experiment station reports a new winter beardless barley, as hardy as winter wheat. In Kansas, a new winter wheat, the "Kan-red," has averaged four and a half bushels per acre more during the last seven years than other standard varieties and is displacing everything else. Rosen rye is a new winter rye that is ahead of everything else in Oregon. The report was accepted on motion of J. T. Moreland.

Secretary Kendel, in the absence of Dr. Tracy, read the paper on "Persistent Varietal Character in Garden Vegetables," by Dr. W. W. Tracy, of

important considerations in cleaning seeds
and grains.

Different kinds of seeds and grains, and, different conditions of the seeds or grains, call for varying strength of the air blast used in separating the dust, chaff, and light shrunk seeds or grain from the heavy, perfect seeds and grain. The Clipper Variable Air Regulator gives exact control of the air blast at every desired point. "From a Zephyr to a Hurricane" exactly describes the range of air blast that can be secured by this mechanical device. We can produce a blast strong enough to blow out the heaviest grain, or peas or beans, and by an adjustment requiring but an instant reduce the blast sufficient for handling the lightest seeds such as timothy, red top or blue grass.

the United States department of agriculture. On motion of J. T. Moreland, the paper was received with thanks, and ordered printed in the proceedings. W. R. Beattie, extension horticulturist, of the United States department of agriculture, delivered an address on "The Home Garden as a Means of Increasing the Food Supply," stating that the home garden is being promoted by the department of agriculture through the extension divisions of the state colleges, county agents and the county farm bureaus. Its purpose is to give the information that the people need to produce their living at home. The department at Washington is furnishing literature, with working plans, both for the production and conservation of garden products. The address was of some length and covered the subject in an exceedingly full and comprehensive manner.

A. K. Ovrien, of the Agricultural Publishers' Association, Chicago, addressed the convention on "Community Building in War Times." His address was intensely interesting, as showing the great progress in community co-operative work in farming sections, and the stimulation of interest through fairs, clubs, co-operative warehouses, live-stock breeding associations, grain growers' clubs, horticultural associations, potato growers' clubs, cow testing associations, and so on in great profusion, all tending to the betterment of the farming and agricultural communities, helping to keep boys and girls on the farm, and arousing ambition and energetic effort in all directions.

The convention then went into executive session, and adjourned at 5:30, to reassemble at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday. Notice was given of a meeting of all commission men and outright packet commission seedsmen, to be held at 9:30 Wednesday in the convention hall before the regular convention session.

Wednesday Morning's Proceedings.

At the Wednesday morning session following the election and installation of new members, John L. Hunt, chairman of the war service committee, presented a report of his committee which was unanimously adopted and the committee was given a vote of thanks. At this point Kirby B. White made an eloquent plea for the payment of his back salary before any further appropriations were made, but failed to get the support of the meeting. Counsel Curtis Nye Smith also presented his report, which was accepted with thanks, and on the motion of J. M. Lupton, following his report as chairman of the legislative committee, which was received with thanks, a compilation of the state and federal seed laws were authorized, copies to be supplied to the members of the association at cost. R. A. Oakley, chairman of the committee on seed stocks, United States department of agriculture, not being present, sent a letter thanking the association for its invitation and forwarded his paper which was read. It was strongly commended to all members by President Bolgiano and Vice-President Scarlett. The local seed trade entertained the visitors at luncheon at the Hotel Sherman at 1 p. m.

The convention will close Thursday with the election of officers for the ensuing year.

David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa.
Second Vice-Pres. American Seed Trade Ass'n.

President Bolgiano's Address.

President Bolgiano said in part:

"In accepting the presidency of the American Seed Trade Association last June, I fully appreciated that to the American seedsmen, this association would mean more in the months to follow than it had ever meant before, yet I never dreamed what was in store this year for the organization. Believing that this association while in the past has done wonderfully good work, yet I think that the coming year will eclipse all others and the in-coming president will find he will be called upon to give brains, time and strength to the affairs of the association beyond all that has ever been required of the office before, and I am going to make several recommendations which appear to me as being expedient.

"Before any business is taken up, however, it behooves us to turn our thoughts to the vacant places in our midst, left so by the call to give an accounting before the great throne where each shall receive his just reward; and for one moment I shall ask you to remember Ludwig Teweles, Oscar H. Wills, Frank Reedy, Edwin Haven and L. L. May. A committee will prepare resolutions, which I trust may be spread on the minutes to remind us of our departed friends.

"It can hardly be possible that our members generally have not prospered fairly well during the past year; yet I doubt, except in rare instances, if the material interest of our members is as great as it was a year ago. What with short crops, income profit taxes, excess profit taxes, and the increased labor cost, the drain has been very great and serious. There have been the numerous bills by the various legislative bodies. J. M. Lupton, with our ever-ready and valuable counsel, has handled these so that nothing very serious has gotten through. There never was a time when it was more necessary that the association have a level-headed attorney associated with your executive officers than during the past year; and I wish to thank Curtis Nye Smith for the manner in which he has always willingly taken from the shoulders of your president, the burdens that we asked him to assume, and in his able manner gave sound advice at all times.

"Early in the fall, the food administration invited a number of seedsmen to Washington to discuss the situation on peas and beans. At this meeting, we were told that the government must have information regarding the supplies available for the season of 1917-1918 and the absolute necessity of the conservation of food supplies was pointed out, together with the fact that the American seedsmen were expected to do their bit.

"In June, 1917, the crop situation was what might be called normal or an average prospect, but as the weeks went by, we began to realize that the situation was one that we must consider with increasing alarm. The early crops were injured by the lack of rain; the late were nearly all caught by an early frost which in many instances wiped out all or nearly all of the prospect. Many seeds advanced to values never dreamed of before, and which we trust will never again be equalled. We of course suffered greatly, because we could not get the crops from Europe intended for this country; yet had they been available, there would still have been a great shortage in this country's supply. Our forage crops have been woefully short in seed supplies. Clover has never been so fully out of the hands of the dealers, good seed corn was never as scarce, and other farm seeds have been badly affected by the general situation relative to supply.

"All of these considerations made it seem necessary that your president have the advice of competent men, and at the suggestion of several in the trade he called the executive committee together in New York, November 21. After consultation, and going over the ground most carefully, the executive committee authorized your president to name a war service committee, which he did, appointing John Hunt, chairman; Kirby B. White, Wm. G. Scarlett, Howard M. Earl and C. C. Massie as members. They have done valuable work that can never be too highly appreciated. This committee was almost immediately called to Washington to meet with Mr. Burden. It sat in session the greater part of two days, discussing the prospective crops of peas and beans, and the amount and character of information Mr. Burden, with the help of the department of agriculture, obtained, was surprising. I think it was due to this meeting that we were able to convince the food administration that it would be extremely unwise to take any drastic steps toward fixing the prices of peas and beans. Your committee demonstrated clearly how easy it would be to destroy the production end of the seed business and what a serious condition would ensue. During all this time, freight conditions, had been going from bad to worse. The war service committee, by appointment, met again in Washington, regarding preference in shipments of seeds. While that committee accomplished something along these lines, yet I consider the greatest good was accomplished by Charles Boyles, who being a railroad man, got right down to the foundation. This association is extremely fortunate in having Mr. Boyles to call upon in such an emergency, and I think a vote of thanks is justly due him.

"We scarcely emerged from one trouble before we were confronted with another. The fuel administration, seeing the danger of a fuel shortage, promulgated the Monday closing order. We deemed this of such serious importance, coming as it did during February and March, our rush season, that I again called the war service committee together in the latter part of January, and the matter was placed before the department of agriculture in such a light that we were able to announce that the trade need not observe the closing days. On May 28, we were again invited to Washington, meeting there the board regulating the importation of seeds from foreign countries. I have no doubt that J. L. Hunt will give you full information regarding all these meetings. I have simply touched on each one in passing. I want to say that while we have not always been able to accomplish all that we wanted at these meetings, we feel that we have succeeded in bringing about an understanding between our trade and those in authority, especially the department of agriculture.

"We have conscientiously fought against the control of our business in the way the grocery business has been controlled. Thus far we have succeeded, but you must live as patriotic citizens, not as grasping profiteers, if you expect this immunity. Do not, because you happen to have stock beyond your wants, and your competitor is short, try to extort a usurious profit, and bring disgrace on yourself and hardship on your fellow-craftsmen. Besides, regulation in our business will mean serious curtailment in production, and bring a condition that may be fraught with serious consequences to our country.

"I now, after most serious consideration, recommend that the war service committee be made permanent during the continuance of the war, and that its personnel remain as it is during that period. I trust for the good of the association that this recommendation will prevail.

"I recommend that the committee on oriental farm labor get extremely busy. It is our opinion that, with the existing conditions unless we are able to get more farm labor within the next seven months, our country is going to suffer seriously from shortage of food. Under no conditions must we in any way withhold the supply of men for the war, but we should have at least 500,000 Chinese imported at the earliest possible moment as farm laborers.

"Our association has put itself on a very high plane regarding government charges. I trust that standard will be kept to the very top notch until there shall be no cause to come before your committee. I want the association to be placed in the attitude of condemning anything that may be disloyal to the Flag, dishonorable to our customers or disgraceful to our association, and that any man who is guilty of any or all of these things be made to feel that he is certain to receive all the punishment he so justly merits, both from his government and his associates in business.

"The Bulletin should by all means be continued, the information contained should be up-to-date, and the crop reports should be of most recent date previous to each publication. This can only be accomplished with the assistance of each member, and if any one withholds valuable information from the Bulletin, he is coming very close to being disloyal to his Flag.

"When I accepted the presidency I said that we had just ended a year when the success of the seed business was phenomenal; I now say that we have just ended a year when the cares and trials of the seedsmen are beyond those of all other years. We have been led by a kind Providence, assisted by the most able committees that any association ever had to assist in keeping away from serious mistakes, and to gain the confidence of those in authority. There is only one way to continue this and that is by being absolutely honest and honorable. I wish to thank you all for your loyal assistance and patience."

Secretary-Treasurer's Report.

The report of Secretary-Treasurer Kendal showed the total membership last year to have been 196, the accessions since that time being 29, losses four, a net gain of 25, bringing the present membership to 221. The finances are also in excellent condition, to the balance on hand last year, $1,527.14, being added initiation fees, $550; dues and assessments, $4,540; special advances, $800, and interest fund, $91.54, while total disbursements for all purposes amounted to $5,280.87 leaving a balance on hand of $2,227.81.

The tenth annual meeting of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association was called to order in the West Room of the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, by President A. E. The report of the committee on trade rules was laid over until the next meeting for consideration.

The following on motion of Charles Dickinson, Chicago, was adopted:

California Seed Crops.

Several growers estimate from present prospects that their deliveries will be as follows and add that some crops are in such a critical condition that an accurate estimate is impossible: Lettuce, 45 to 60 per cent; onion, 60 to 75;
beet, 75 to 85; salsify, 50 to 60; radish, 30 to 45; carrot, 65 to 85; celery, 85 to 95; endive, 75 to 95; spinach, 40 to 70 per cent. Some of the larger growers are much discouraged at the outlook.

Vegetable Markets.

The bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, reports jobbing prices and movements of vegetables for the period June 12-18, as follows: The potato markets were active and weaker, with new shipping sections opening and the total movement showing a continued gain in volume. Florida and southern producing sections are approaching the end of their season. The total movement of new potatoes was 4,188 cars as compared with 2,657 the preceding week. The movement of old potatoes is becoming lighter and prices have followed a slightly narrower range from $1.60-$2. The recent advance has maintained fairly well. The shipment volume of new onions is decreasing and was 25 cars below the previous week. The price at Texas shipping points strengthened to 80-90 cents for No. 1 yellow stock. Sales to jobbers ranged 25-50 cents higher. The general demand was fair to good, but slow in middle west and southwest. The range of cabbage prices in consuming markets was narrower with a moderate volume of trade. General values were well maintained at $2.75-$3.50 per barrel. The movement of tomatoes from shipping points was liberal and prices were lower from 20 to 50 cents on fancy wrapped fours. Florida offerings followed a weak range of from $2.50-$3 per six-basket carrier. As a whole the general carlot movement of vegetables was not large with the exception of new potatoes. The season is generally two weeks earlier than last year both in the east and west.

Sweet Potato Storage.

In Farmers' Bulletin 970, H. C. Thompson, horticulturist, United States department of agriculture, calls attention to the proper storage of sweet potatoes as one of the most important food conservation measures that can be put into effect in the southern states, no perishable product produced in that section being of such great importance, and none so poorly handled. The bulletin describes in considerable detail the types of storage houses that have proved successful and the proper care of the crop, from harvesting to marketing. For those growers who are not able to build storage houses directions are given for saving the sweet potatoes by using outdoor cellars and banks.

The foundation of the storage house may be in the form of pillars or solid walls, and should be of such a height that the floor is about on the level of the bottom of the wagon-bed, while the footings should be carried below the frost line or to solid ground. Girders 6x8 or 8x8 inches in size are usually placed on the pillars. Where cement, brick or stone foundation walls are built, they should extend 18 to 20 inches above the ground level, and plates 2 to 3 inches thick and 8 to 10 inches wide should be placed on the wall. In using walls for the foundation it is necessary to provide means for ventilating under the house. This can be done by placing small windows in the foundation every 10 to 12 feet. Even where solid outside foundation walls are used, it is advisable to use pillars for the center supports; the rows of pillars should not be further apart than 8 to 10 feet.

Sweet-potato storage houses may be built of wood, brick, hollow tile, cement or stone. Wooden houses are preferable, because they are cheaper and easier to keep dry than the other types. It is difficult to keep moisture from collecting on the walls of a cement, stone or brick house. Where such houses are built for sweet potato storage, they should be lined with lumber, so as to keep the air in the house from coming in contact with the masonry walls. It is best to build sweet-potato storage houses on foundations that allow a circulation of air under them. The "dug-out," or house built partly under the ground, is not satisfactory for storing sweet potatoes in the south, because it is practically impossible to keep this type of house dry, and moisture in the storage house will cause the crop to rot.

On many farms in the south there are abandoned tenant houses and various other buildings that could be converted into sweet-potato storage houses at very little expense. In many towns there are warehouses, store buildings and other structures that could be utilized to advantage for storing. Where such structures are available on the farms or in towns, they should be utilized before erecting new houses. The same methods of insulating and ventilating should be used in remodeling old structures as are recommended for new sweet-potato storage houses.

Where only a few bushels of sweet potatoes are to be stored they may be kept in a loft over the kitchen, or in any place in the house where the temperature is quite uniform (between 50° and 60° F.) and the air rather dry.

Potatoes Boiled in Their Skins.

Approximately 20 per cent of each potato pared by ordinary household methods is lost in the process. The loss includes much and sometimes all of the portion of the tuber containing important soluble salts. Potatoes that are boiled and baked in their skins lose practically none of their food value.

NURSERYMEN'S CONVENTION at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, next week, June 26-28.

ROBERT GEORGE, of The Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., will on December 12 have completed his fiftieth year there. This should almost entitle Robert to an above-ground vacation.

AN interesting booklet of 36 pages, with numerous illustrations, entitled "What, Where, When, and How to Plant," by E. E. Bohlender, of Peter Bohlender & Sons, Tippecanoe City, O., recently issued, contains much useful information relating to fruit and ornamental trees, berry plants, roses, shrubs, evergreens, vines and perennials. It has the endorsement of a number of well known authorities.

National Forests Established.

Three national forests have been established in the east by proclamation of President Wilson. One is the White Mountain, embracing about 391,000 acres in Maine and New Hampshire; the second is the Shenandoah, about 165,000 acres in Virginia and West Virginia, and the Natural Bridge, about 99,000 acres in Virginia. The Pisgah national forest, in North Carolina, and the Alabama forest were the only national forests in the east. The new reservations are made under the law of 1911.

Illinois' First Great Apple Show.

A coming event of no little importance is the "Illinois First Great Apple Show," which will be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, November 19-22, under the auspices of the Illinois State Horticultural Society. One of the principal objects of the exhibition will be that of a great conservation educator, both as to production and uses. Carloads of fine fruit will be on display, and a splendid opportunity for manufacturers of orchard machinery and accessories to broaden business relations is offered. Premiums to the extent of $2,500 will be awarded in classes arranged for exhibits on plates and trays, also in boxes, baskets and barrels. The premium list will be ready for distribution August 1, and copies of same and full information may be had by addressing A. M. Augustine, executive secretary, Normal, Ill.

Acorn Flour Supplement for Wheat.

Acorns are reported to be bringing $1 a sack in California for hog food, but a woman investigator, Mrs. Nellie Taylor, of Plymouth, Adair county, Mo., is said to have developed a process for making acorn flour which is declared to be a satisfactory supplement for wheat flour. This flour has the coloring matter and bitter taste of the acorn extracted, and Mrs. Taylor pronounces it superior to wheat flour for making cake, being richer and softer.

Bronx Park Rose Garden.

Having been favorably impressed with the exhibit of the botanical gardens, in the museum, we were interested to see the garden they came from. Bronx park, like the national capital, is a place of "magnificent distances" and in addition to its flora, has a good supply of fauna, such as bears, bob cats, lions and "everything," but bless you, they are harmless. This is a digression, but probably we rambled a little before reaching the rose garden. We found it looking fine, though some varieties had passed their zenith for this season. Furthermore, we would say that the weather of the past two weeks has been unfavorable for roses, but many varieties were in good bloom. Possibly we would have seen less, if the weather had been hot.

In this garden, there are 500 varieties, and a total of over 5,000 plants; therefore, we can but briefly sketch a few of the varieties. In hybrid tea roses, it seems that a number of the well known commercial varieties are among the best for the garden. Radiance, Red Radiance, Killarney, My Maryland, Killarney Queen, Lady Alice Stanley and Indiana, left a good impression. Others in this family that are good garden roses, were Konigen Carola, Lady Ursula, Lady Ashton, La Tosca, Crimson Champion and President Carnot.

In hybrid perpetuals, Alfred Colomb, Marchioness of Larne, Hugh Dickson, Captain Hayward and the old and still popular, General Jacqueminot, were all noteworthy.

We will confess that until recently, we have not given the pernetiana hybrids much attention, but they are beautiful roses and worthy to be included in any fancier's collection. As a garden rose, Los Angeles seems faultless. It has long stems, a glossy foliage and is prolific in large blooms of a beautiful salmon pink. Willowmere is good and somewhat resembles Los Angeles, but we prefer the latter. Juliet also seems to be a good rose. In dwarf polyanthas, Triomphe Orleans and Echo make their beds a mass of bloom.

A. F. F.

Philadelphus Hybrid.

The first hybrid Philadelphus which attracted attention was raised in France before 1870 by a Monsieur Billard and is sometimes called in gardens Souvenir de Billard, although the correct name for it is Philadelphus insignis. This hybrid is one of the handsomest of all the tall-growing syringas, and its value is increased by the fact that it is one of the latest of them all to flower. In a few old gardens in the neighborhood of Boston great syringa bushes, occasionally 30 feet high and correspondingly broad, are sometimes found. These plants are believed to be hybrids between P. coronarius and some unrecognized species. It is called Philadelphus maximus. Another hybrid, P. magnificus, sprang up in the Arboretum several years ago and is supposed to be a hybrid between two American species, P. inodorus and P. pubescens. It is a large and shapely shrub with pure white only slightly fragrant flowers an inch and three-quarters in diameter and borne in erect clusters. Philadelphus splendens flowers very freely, and when the flowers are open it is the showiest plant in the syringa group.

LEMOINE HYBRID.

Several years ago the French plant breeder, Lemoine, crossed P. coronarius with the Rocky mountain P. microphyllus and obtained an entirely new race to which the general name of P. Lemoinei was given. The original bush is intermediate between the parents in size and in the size of the flowers. The flowers are pure white, very fragrant, and produced in profusion. From this plant Lemoine raised many seedlings and secondary hybrids, and these vary from the original P. Lemoinei in size and in the size and shape of the flowers. Taken as a whole, the Lemoine hybrid syringas form one of the most beautiful groups of garden plants that have been created by man. There are a number of these plants in the Arboretum collection, and they have been considered perfectly hardy here, but last winter was too cold for some of them. P. Lemoinei itself and many of its varieties are uninjured, but a few of the second hybrids were killed to the ground, but are now growing again from the roots. Unfortunately, among the injured is the little plant called Conquete, which is usually considered the handsomest of these Lemoine syringas. This is the midseason for Philadelphia. The flowers of the Korean P. Schneekii var. Jackii, which are always the first to open, faded nearly two weeks ago, and the buds on some of the other species and hybrids will not open for nearly a month.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, June 12, 1918.

Flowers Essential.

Paper by Alvah R. Jones, prepared for the Ladies' Library Club of Athens, Pa.

There has been considerable agitation along the line of the elimination of non-essentials, but it seems to be impossible for us to come to the decision as to what constitutes a non-essential, for everything we as individuals care for to us seems most essential, and we unconsciously find ourselves placing in the list of non-essentials the things that do not particularly affect us, but might be considered very necessary to someone else. So today we find people to whom flowers do not particularly appeal placing the same in the list of non-essentials and agitating very strongly for the non-growing of the same. There are two important facts to be considered in connection with this condition, the practical one being that there is an enormous amount of money and many people engaged in the florist's business, both in cut flowers and plants and the raising of flowers for seeds, and as our government depends upon the receiving of taxes from the business people for the money to defray its expenses, therefore this industry plays quite an important part in the raising of revenue for the government. The second view is the message of love and pleasure that flowers convey and the brightening of the dark corners of life, on this earth, for you will all grant me one thing, and that is, that this world would indeed be a most dreary spot with no flowers available.

In the early spring of the year, what is more refreshing than a stroll through the country-side communing with nature, and during the walk, the song of the birds would not be near as melodious were it not for the nodding welcome of God's most beautiful expression to man, namely, flowers. In times of joy, there is nothing that conveys one's thoughts so completely as do a few flowers, and the pleasant memory of them remains for many years after. As time rolls on, the hand of sorrow is placed on our shoulder, and is there anything then that so satisfactorily lets us know that those whom we hold most dear are thinking of us in the dark moments? Word of the orator, brush of the painter, or hand of the sculptor, have never as yet been able to convey to man the message that flowers carry, and yet they are within the reach of the most humble of us all, for the varieties are so numerous that without any effort it is possible to find some of God's messages within the reach of the poorest; and should our efforts only reach the hardier varieties, as found in the gardens hereabouts, we are still fulfilling our mission on earth of making life a brighter place for our neighbors as well as ourselves. For the fact remains that

The roses red upon my neighbor's vine
Are owned by him, but they are also mine.

His was the cost, and his the labor, too,
But mine as well as his, the joy their loveliness to view.

They bloom for me, and are to me as fair

As to the man who gave them all his care,

And I am rich because a good man grew

A rose-clad vine, for all his neighbors' view.

I know from this, that others plant for me,

And what they have, my joy may also be,

So why be selfish when so much that's fine

Is grown for you upon your neighbor's vine?

And in these moments of stress, when the country is becoming deeper and deeper immersed in the great war that is now raging, to the one that is left behind could there be more nerve-resting and helping diversion than the growing of flowers and the cutting of the blooms, sending the same to the hospitals for the brightening up of the sick, and bringing a little sunshine into the lives of the unfortunate; for is there not a feeling of pleasure in this work that words cannot describe, and also the thought that perhaps some one is doing the same for your boy "over there"? And, as time rolls on, there will be brought to our own shores hundreds of men for medical treatment, and flowers when sent to them, will in many cases do as much good as medicine in the much desired recovery. As the United States have ever been a boon to the persecuted, a haven of rest to the weary, so let us continue along the lines of beautifying the community in which we reside, and by each doing his share we shall make of this country a most beautiful place for the newcomer to see, and a source of great comfort and pleasure to us who have always been here.

And so in closing, may I say in the words, of that great writer: "He who has made two blades of grass grow where one grew before, has planted a flower that gives a welcome to the weary traveler along the King's highway, and has paid his rent to the Owner of this universe for the space that he has permitted him to occupy along the pathway of life."

American Sweet Pea Society.

Tenth Annual Meeting and Exhibition, Philadelphia, Pa., June 25-26.

Exhibits Entirely Local.

The tenth annual exhibition and meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society was held in the Greek Hall of the store of Wanamaker & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., in connection with the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, June 25-26, the entries comprising over 250 vases being entirely local, there being no flowers exhibited other than those from that city and vicinity. The quality, however, was quite the equal of former shows. The W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, staged 80 vases including a number of large standards containing small receptacles which when filled were very attractive. This was a magnificent display which richly merited the gold medal of the society for the most meritorious exhibit. The silver cup offered by the W. Atlee Burpee Co., for the best vase of 25 blooms was won by Mrs. S. D. Riddle while Miss Marion Faust won the silver cup valued at $25 awarded by Sutton & Son, Reading, Eng., for the best table decoration.

The annual meeting was called to order in Greek Hall, on the afternoon of the opening day by President George W. Kerr. In the absence of Secretary William Gray, David Rust acted as secretary pro tem. President Kerr made his annual address, a very excellent paper, which was ordered sent to the trade papers. Professor A. C. Beal, of Ithaca, N. Y., made an interesting report on the sweet peas at the trial grounds at Cornell University. This brought out how necessary flowers are at the present time, particularly the garden varieties.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the continuation of the present incumbents as follows: George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa., president; Edward Jenkins, Lenox, Mass., vice-president; William Gray, Bellevue avenue, Newport, R. I., secretary; William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., treasurer. David Don, New York, was elected to succeed the late J. Harrison Dick, on the executive committee. The place of the 1919 meeting was left to the discretion of the executive committee. The meeting then adjourned.

President Kerr's Address.

In welcoming the members of the American Sweet Pea Society to our tenth annual convention, I would explain that but for the generosity of Mr. Wanamaker in granting us the use of the Greek hall it is more than probable that we would not have had an exhibition this season. It will be remembered that at last year's convention it was recommended to hold the 1918 convention in New York, anticipating that the New York Horticultural Society would assist us with special prizes and also provide a hall for the exhibition, as they had done in the past. These embryo arrangements of ours, however, fell through, and I was afraid that at least for this season our annual exhibition would have to be abandoned. In mentioning the subject to David Burpee, he surprised me by offering to provide the prize money in Sections B and C if I could arrange for a hall. Therefore the very apparent fact that we are meeting here today is due to the liberality of Messrs. Wanamaker and Burpee.

Much has been said and written during the past few months regarding the growing of flowers and holding exhibitions of same during these war times. We are all alive to the necessity of growing foodstuffs—the gardener giving first consideration to the necessary vegetable crops—but surely that is no reason why we should put aside all thought of flowers. The more serious our troubles may be the greater our need of flowers to cheer us. Therefore, we should all determine to do our utmost to keep our borders blooming. Great Britain, after almost four years of war, still continues a number of her flower shows, though many of the largest events of the season have been dropped for the time being. Sweet pea specialists there are still developing new varieties, some of which are to be seen on exhibition here. Since the beginning of the war a most flourishing sweet pea society has been organized in Australia, where this beautiful flower is a prime favorite. There fore, with the example set us by these countries which have suffered so much during the past four years, we surely do not require an excuse for meeting here today.

George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.
President American Sweet Pea Society.

When we look back on the varieties of sweet peas exhibited at our first exhibition, which was held in New York, we are immediately impressed with the great development which has taken place in this lovely annual. At our opening show there were very few Spencer varieties exhibited, at least 95 per cent being of the grandiflora type. Today all the vases are filled with Spencers. Then we have the evolution in new colors—practically all shades but yellow. Shall we ever get a yellow sweet pea? Time alone will tell. However, until it does come, we can get along very nicely without it.

During the past few years the new early flowering type of Spencers has been evolved, and this is the type which is grown—almost to the exclusion of the regular Spencers—in Australia. This new early type has been blooming in the open at Fordhook since late April, and I feel sure that they are destined to occupy an important place in all establishments where early outdoor flowers are desired.

It must therefore be admitted that our sweet pea specialists have not been asleep. We are getting something new all the time, the best of yesterday are being eclipsed by the new today, and these again may have to take second place to those of tomorrow. As far as I can see, there need be no end to the improvement in our sweet peas; therefore the enthusiast can always look forward to accomplishing something better than the present-day best.

It is with deep regret and sorrow that I refer to the loss of one of our most energetic officers: namely, John Harrison Dick. A gentleman in every sense of the word and a keen and enthusiastic horticulturist. A sympathetic and true friend, he is greatly missed. I first met Mr. Dick in Scotland some 16 or 17 years ago, and following that first meeting, quite frequently at the London and larger provincial flower shows until I came to the States. It was with mutual pleasure that we renewed our friendship here. Although Mr. Dick had only been in America for a comparatively few years, in that time he made many friends and was a well known figure at all exhibitions and conventions pertaining to horticulture. The sympathy of all our members has, I know, already been extended to his widow and little girl. Yet it is well that an appropriate resolution be drawn up and embodied in our minutes.

I have to thank our secretary, Wm. Gray, and members of the executive committee, for their unflinching assistance during the past season.

Waretown Rod and Gun Club Opening. of the members when talking about the Kaiser. The usual distinguished visitors from a distance were missing. The Brothers Gude of Washington, D. C., were busy there in the interests of the trade, W. J. Stewart was ill, John K. M. L. Farquhar regretted he was too busy, as was Adam Graham of Cleveland. At the opening dinner, letters from these gentlemen and a number of others were read.

This is an ideal spot for recreation, which can be spent in rest and quiet, looking over the library, walks about the shore or beautiful woods, fishing and sailing on the bay, or visits to the mighty Atlantic. The doughty Commodore is as young as ever and always on the lookout for the comfort of his guests. Those present were S. S. Pennock, John Burton, D. T. Connor, George C. Watson, Dr. Lane, D. C. Donoghue, Robert Craig, George Craig, David Rust, Jos. Trainer, Thos J. Grooves, A. B. Cartledge and Robert Kift. The party broke up and departed for home on Sunday afternoon. All were delighted with the outing and wished many more years of life to the Commodore.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

In spite of all that has been said regarding the deteriorating of the business, those who have kept a close eye on details, declare results to be quite encouraging. Many of the retail stores declare that if things get no worse, they feel there will be no difficulty in weathering the storm. The shortage of labor is the most serious matter. In most cases, this is remedied as far as possible, by turning the minds of the customers toward the things or arrangements which call for the least work or attention. Set pieces or designs that require considerable stemming of flowers, are "not nearly as popular as heretofore; the more simple sprays or clusters or wreaths of leaves, decorated with sprays, are now most in demand." Bright salespeople will soon learn to turn customers' minds in the right direction.

There are certain articles carried in all lines of trade, in which there is little if any profit; these should be as far as possible eliminated. Things that are done just for accommodation should be made so difficult of accomplishment, that the practice will become obsolete. This does not cut out willingness to oblige, or when it is seen a package will be burdensome one is not to offer to send it, but when trifling purchases or small packages that can be carried are asked to be sent, then is the time to mention the delay that may occur from the shortened delivery service, which will then likely prompt the customer to take it along.

The Hydrangea arborescens with its conspicuous white heads borne on erect stems, is now in, and will make fine decorative effects in the window and store.

Keep up the stock of water lilies. They are seasonable and give a distinct summer-time appearance to the window. Outdoor sweet peas are now also at their best and should be featured. They are useful for all kinds of spray or basket work. They will be found salable in medium sized bunches.

William Gray, Newport, R. I.
Secretary American Sweet Pea Society.

COMMODORE WESTCOTT AND FRIENDS AT THE WARETOWN ROD AND GUN CLUB

All the supply houses are sending out warnings in reference to increasing difficulties in transportation and the continuous rise in prices, which is in fact, or prospect, as the months roll by. Take a look over the stock, make out a list of all standard articles, including wire designs, which are seriously threatened by the government's metal necessities. Send in your order for the season's supply; it may mean quite a large obligation, but with the stock under your roof, next winter's freight embargoes will have no terrors, and very likely there will be a saving of from 10 to 20 per cent in the prices of that time.

Read Secretary Young's appeals for the publicity fund; also those of that live wire, Henry Penn. If these do not move you, nothing that I can add will have any effect. Prove yourself to be a whole-hearted member of the florists' army, ready to give your last dollar to help your cause, for it is yours on to victory.

"Say It With Flowers."

It is almost inconceivable why so many thousands of the trade have not as yet availed themselves of the use of this handsome gilt window sign, which has been adopted as the national slogan of the florists' trade. This wonderfully effective phrase stands out and almost shouts to the undetermined mind, "Say it with flowers." "Ah! flowers—the very thing, why did I not think of them before?" With its gilt script, but very distinct lettering on a blue ground, it is out of the usual and at once arrests attention. Being of glass, it can always be as bright and new as the day received. It will never grow old or stale, as its words, ever fresh, are suggestive and conclusive, in the social affairs of everyday life.

Window cards calling attention to the ever-changing features of the various seasons, are indispensable, or should be, to every progressive retail florist. The show window and the outside appearance of the store are an indication to the stranger of the character or standing of the business. We all look best in our "Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes." "Clothes make the man"; the well-dressed man makes a favorable impression. This holds good with the well-dressed window; it, too, makes a favorable impression. The advertising value of this publicity feature is in some stores almost negligible, because they do not take advantage of it; they do not dress up and look their best all the time. The flower shop, on account of its ever-changing and beautiful stock, should at all times be the most conspicuous store in the block. Every possible vantage point should be decorated with growing plants until the whole front from pavement to roof is a telling example of the florist's art.

Then comes the window, in which no opportunity is to be lost in featuring the various floral holidays and many other annual popular anniversaries that can be used to advantage by the wide-awake decorator. Appropriate cards should always be used to feature, or call attention to this or than plant or flower, which, while beautiful in itself, is rendered doubly attractive by the information, that it is, perhaps, the first of the season.

Vases of all the popular forcing roses, legibly named with a card "Which is your favorite?" will invite an inspection of every vase. Florist Telegraph Delivery windows are always good business bringers to those who feature this service, which is a great source of revenue to all who connect up with it. The new emblem, recently adopted, should become a great factor in this work.

Passers-by are attracted by window cards, out of curiosity to see what they say. The short, catchy announcements, because of the information conveyed, give a new interest to the display and favorable impressions of the stock and store are carried away. How many florists feature Robert Burns' birthday in a window display? Yet Henry Penn, that Boston live wire, finds it to be one of his best, always attracting great attention.

The busy man looks over his paper in the morning, glancing at the headlines, knowing that if there is anything of importance it will be featured in the heavy type. News, perhaps interesting to him, not being of a sensational character, is missed because it is not featured. All stock, that for some reason does not move off rapidly, should be featured. Get a block of this together and "headline" it in heavy type, with an appropriate card. It is thus brought to the front where, with this publicity, it is just what some people want, and which others with its attractive showing, may be induced to buy.

Go through any of the progressive retail stores in other lines, note the catchy short window cards and others used to feature the various displays all through the departments. These emphasize the weave, the quality, the design, or the price, anything that is likely to attract the attention of customers who know or are looking for such goods. The expense of these cards is trifling. They should always have a fresh up-to-the-minute appearance as if just put up for that day's service.

Slogan is a Scotch word, a war cry or gathering word, used in the calling together of the clans for battle. It should serve as a gathering word for the florists' clan, bringing them together all over this wonderful country, to work as a unit in this great publicity movement which is to educate the people to always "Say it with Flowers."

Wartime Economics at Riverton.

When two such past masters in palm culture as J. D. Eisele and W. H. Taplin, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., agree that kentias can be carried through their dormant winter season at a temperature of 45°, without showing any injurious effects, a new low record is set for this type of palms. In discussing the present trying situation, Mr. Eisele said: "Under the stress of enforced economies of the past year, we are gaining much knowledge that is useful now, and will be more so in the future when normal conditions are restored. Despite the great severity of the past winter, we saved 100 tons of coal, when ordinarily we would have consumed at least 100 tons more. We have learned that greenhouse temperatures can be carried much lower than we thought possible. In some of our kentia ranges temperatures dropped to 42° and remained there for quite long periods, as owing to the continued zero weather, we could not get them any higher. The plants, almost dormant at this season, are usually kept at 55° in cold and 60° in mild winter weather. As the winter wore away, the plants appeared to be in normal condition, and are now in such a vigorous growing state that it would seem as if the enforced rest was beneficial. I feel sure they will make as fine growth during the summer as any we have ever had. Fires in these ranges have been out for some time, although heretofore it has been the practice to carry a little heat until the regular summer temperature set in and all dampness from cool nights was past. Latanias and phoenix will also stand the same low temperature as the kentias. Cocos Weddelliana must, however not go below 60°, and is happier at 65°. The heat is still on in this large cocos range, where the plants appear to be in the best possible condition. Notwithstanding the severe strain of the past winter, the palms in all sizes never looked better. Although there has been a very large demand for this class of stock since the shipping season opened, the houses are still filled with a splendid assortment. Each plant has good and sufficient room to develop, but when they have attained their growth in November, they will have to snuggle close together and hibernate in about half their present space. A number of large houses will be emptied or used as cold storage. In the enforced crowding of stock in the warm houses no use will be made of walks, under the edges of tables, or the space above occupied tables." Mr. Eisele believes all such crowding is at the expense of the plants so treated, those along paths getting bruised, those under the edges of tables too wet, and any encroachment above the tables being injurious to the stock below. Such use would take more labor, and he believes it even more necessary to conserve labor than coal.

Ferns can be carried along with a reduced temperature, but will make little growth. Prices have been advanced; 2½-inch fernery stock, which sold at $3 is now $5 per hundred and $40 per thousand. Palm prices remain stationary, that is the one dollar and two dollar plants, but sizes are retrograding rapidly. Kentias that two years ago sold for $2, are now the high grades of the lots marked $4.

The large lath sheds, usually used for the summer growth of araucarias at this establishment, are now filled with cibotiums. Each plant from the 3-inch stock up to the 11-inch tubs are on ground beds raised in pots. They are watered by the Skinner system of overhead pipes. They do much better here than indoors, as the edges of the fronds do not burn. Toward the end of the summer they become dormant, but when brought inside in September, they at once make an additional new growth.

Roses in the trial grounds, in spite of the severe weather, wintered splendidly. In the late fall, soil to the height of eight inches is drawn up around the plants. This is not taken from the bed, but is brought from outside and removed in the spring. Hybrid teas had successfully stood the bleak weather of the lake shore country in the west, and would, it is believed, resist the extreme cold of the New England states, even that of Maine when given this soil protection.

Packing and transportation problems are almost past solving. Boxing lumber, formerly $18 a thousand feet, is now $58. "With weather conditions and express service, such as that of the past season, we might just as well throw the stock out as to attempt to ship it from December to March," said Mr. Eisele.

The demand for herbaceous stock for the catalogue trade had been as large as ever, but much curtailed from landscape architects, who could not get the labor to carry out any large operations.

Wood Ash as Fertilizer.

Owing to the great scarcity of coal in Italy during the past winter, a considerable quantity of mountain timber was cut and used as firewood in the Turin district, according to Commerce Reports. The lack of chemical fertilizers and the necessity of increasing

American Rose Society.

HARTFORD TEST GARDEN INSPECTION.

Cloudless skies, a brisk, clear atmosphere and most cordial hospitality greeted the members of the American Rose Society in Hartford, Conn., June 20. The local committee, consisting of Messrs. Pierson, Huss and Cumming, had been most thoughtful in anticipating every detail of a plan to make the day an eventful one in the annals of the society. The executive committee of the society held a session in Pond house, Elizabeth park, at 10 o'clock, after which the committee and other guests were entertained at luncheon at Hotel Bond by W. R. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn. After luncheon the party was conveyed to the famous rose gardens at Elizabeth park. The attendance was disappointing, for notices of the meeting had been quite widely distributed, but those in attendance felt well repaid for the trip. The hybrid perpetual, tea and hybrid tea roses were at their best, but the climbers were not yet in their full beauty.

In the older part of the garden, beds of Radiance, Killarney Queen, Miss Cynthia Ford, Frau Karl Druschki, Laurent Carle and George Arends were especially good, while the climbers American Pillar, Christine Wright, Purity, Leuchstern and Excelsa were full of bloom and much admired.

In the newer part of the garden there were 42 beds, each filled with a variety donated by some individual or firm, which in the opinion of the donor was the most desirable of available varieties. The single hybrid tea, Isobelle, donated by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Rosalind and Sylvia, by F. R. Pierson Company, and Mme. Leon Pain and Miss Cynthia Ford by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., were among those especially noted.

field crops (so that imports may be reduced and tonnage liberated) has given rise to the proposal by one of the local agricultural publications that all wood ash be saved in the future and given to the farmers for field fertilization. On a general average, there is between six and 10 per cent of potash in wood ash, and, as potash at present has a value of 31 cents per 100 pounds, the use of wood ash by the farmer as a fertilizer would effect for him a small economy.

In the rose test garden, the judges consisting of Professor Frank A. Waugh, Amherst, Mass.; S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa., and Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., scored the hybrid teas as follows: John Cook's seedling, No. 512, 86 points, which, therefore, received the silver medal of the American Rose Society; John Cook's seedling, No. 561, 82 points, thereby awarding it a certificate of merit; Bertram J. Walker, 74 points, and Mrs. George Gorden, 73 points. Eighty-two points and a certificate of merit were awarded the climbing rose, "Aunt Harriet," introduced by the Conard & Jones Company, West Grove, Pa., and 72 points to Wartburg, introduced by the same firm, by a committee consisting of Professor Frank A. Waugh, S. S. Pennock and W. R. Pierson.

After the judging the entire party were piloted in automobiles through Hartford's splendid park system by George A. Parker, superintendent of parks; Mr. Turner, superintendent of Connecticut state park; Thomas Snell Weaver, park commissioner, and George Hollister, superintendent of Keney park. Leaving Elizabeth park, with its somewhat formal style of gardening, Keney park was first visited. This comprises about 660 acres of natural landscape with open meadows, where grazed herds of sheep, tended in a picturesque way by shepherds and dogs. Here broad vistas were also striking, and the winding drives through deep wooded acres carpeted with rank growths of ferns were most restful. Passing through the city by the Keney Memorial and South Green, Colt park was next visited. Here the spirit of play was most in evidence, and the park was filled with hundreds of boys and girls, young men and ladies engaged in all sorts of recreation. Goodwin park, another area of natural landscape, was interesting because it was used largely as municipal golf links. At Overlook, the party stopped and were treated to soft drinks by the genial superintendent of parks. Pope park, a recreation park with ideal playgrounds in a section of the city where most of the homes are of the poorer class, was motored through on the return to Elizabeth park.

At 6 o'clock the party was entertained at a delightful dinner in Pond House, by the Hartford park department. After the dinner, Thomas Snell Weaver and George Parker, of the park department, expressed in a few well chosen words the welcome of the park department to the American Rose Society and Benjamin Hammond, president of the society, responded, voicing the appreciation of the American Rose Society for the most generous hospitality extended to its members by the flower lovers of Hartford.

At 7:30 the guests and citizens of Hartford listened to a delightful lecture in the municipal building, on "Outdoors Roses," by Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa. Mr. Pyle showed many beautifully colored slides of rose gardens in America and abroad, and also the various types and varieties of roses. The lecturer's personal acquaintance with many of the most noted rosarians abroad made his talk full of interest. Following Mr. Pyle's lecture, Professor Frank A. Waugh, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, gave an interesting and instructive illustrated lecture on "Civic Improvement."

The keynote of the day seemed to be that in these times of strenuous warfare, when all nations are at strife, there is added need of the quieting, restful, recreating influence of roses and natural beauty. Commissioner Weaver expressed the thought that, though the war may go on for years, Nature will again reassert herself, and where all is now turmoil and carnage the poppies and other flowers of France will again spring up, a token of hope, and inspiration for us all.

E. A. WHITE, Sec'y.

FEATURES OF INTEREST.

During the afternoon several hours were profitably spent in going over the rose garden and its annex. President Hammond had brought his camera, and took a number of snapshots. Professor White was kept busy answering inquiries on various matters, as the news of the meeting brought many Hartford citizens to the park.

Ford. Of these Mad. Paine is attractive. H. F. Michell Co. had a collection of hybrid perpetuals. Other exhibitors were: J. W. Adams, Springfield, Mass., a collection of hybrid teas; F. R. Newbold, New York and Poughkeepsie, Lady Alice Stanley and Willomere, both being well known as good garden roses; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., Red Radiance, also quite well known; John JAMES DEAN, VETERAN FLORIST, AND FAMILY AT HOME, FREEPORT, L. I.

In the old, or original, garden the arches of Dorothy Perkins and some others of its type were not yet out, and looked as though it would take them at least 10 days to get in good form, but the Crimson and Philadelphia ramblers were fine. Of the H. Wichuriana roses a number of pillars of Christine Wright were particularly attractive, and we would vote it a fine rose. Both Bridal Wreath and Purity are worthy of note. This garden is extensively planted with hybrid perpetuals, and excellent judgment has been used in the choice of varieties. Of the following list all were good: Marchioness of Lorne, Jules Margottin, Dr. Audrey, Mad. Gabriel Luizet, Mrs. John Laing, Robert Duncan, Suzanne Marie Redocanachi, Ben. Carnot, Hugh Dickson, Paul Neyron, and Pride of Waltham. Possibly some have been omitted from this list that were quite as good as those mentioned; certainly there were other good ones, but the above named made the strongest appeal to us. Prince Camille de Rohan is a large flower and a prolific bloomer, but to our eyes its crimson was too dark. In the hybrid teas, old La France, as a garden rose, will compare favorably with any new variety.

As the annex is the protégé of the American Rose Society, it deserves attention, and when the plants have another year's growth they will be more interesting. A. N. Pierson, Inc., make quite an extensive exhibit. Of their hybrid teas, we will mention Mrs. Glen Kidston, Mrs. Charles Bell and Mrs. Belmont Tiffany. F. R. Pierson had Rosalind and Sylvia. W. W. Hunt & Co., of Hartford, presented Mad. M. Delanney, a light pink, said to be a new production, and looks promising. Henry A. Dreer, Inc., sponsored Mad. Leon Paine, Mad. J. Boncka and Cynthia Coombs, Hartford, Killarney Brilliant, good; Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., Gen. A. Jansen, a hybrid tea, looks good; George McClunie, Hartford, Miss A. Crawford, H. T.; George B. Hart, Buffalo, N. Y., Old Gold, H. T.; Paul Hubbard, Bristol, Conn., K. Augusta Victoria; Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., a collection of hardy teas. In addition to those already mentioned, Henry A. Dreer, Inc., exhibits Margaret Dickson Hamill; like many other varieties in the garden, the plants were small, but the buds noticed were substantial and a good yellow. It must be understood that there is nothing official in the above comments; they are merely our personal views.

We visited the rose garden in Elizabeth park five years ago, in company with members of the American Rose Society; Brother Robert Pyle, who preserves so many good things for future reference and enjoyment, reminded us of that visit when, in his most interesting lecture, on the evening of June 20, the stereopticon flashed a picture of the company at the garden on that occasion. Elizabeth park is more beautiful than ever; the rose garden is larger, and there are more roses than there were on that occasion; the genial superintendent of parks and the people of Hartford in general are just as hospitable as ever, and our only regret on this occasion is that more florists, particularly those making roses a specialty, did not attend. The committee of the American Rose Society and the local committee follow: American Rose Society—John F. Huss, Wallace R. Pierson and Alexander Cumming, Jr. Local committee—George F. Lane, Joseph F. Coombs, W. W. Hunt, Joseph McManus and George McClunie. All were untiring in their efforts to entertain the visitors. After the inspection of the roses, there was an automobile trip through the other Hartford parks, and on the return a bountiful dinner was spread at the Park mansion. The evening was a most enjoyable one, made so by the eloquent contributions of Professor Waugh and Robert Pyle.

THE VISITORS.

Among those present were: President Hammond, Secretary White, S. S. Pen-nock, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; John Canning, Ards-ley, N. Y.; Wm. H. Siebrecht, Chappaqua, N. Y.; Henry Siebrecht, New York; A. F. Faulkner, New York; Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.; Prof. Waugh, Amherst, Mass.; Louis J. Reuter, Wal-tham, Mass.; Fred Green, Providence, R. I.; George Peterson, Fairlawn, N. J.

Many expressions of appreciation were heard relating to the ability—also the hospitality—of George A. Parker, superintendent of the Hartford parks. A. F. F.

Bread-Winning Carnations.

One of the most successful carnation growing establishments in the Philadelphia market is W. & H. F. Evans' Rowlandville nurseries, Wyom-ing avenue and H street. Carnations have been a specialty here for a num-ber of years. The products are, for the most part, high grade, which bring top prices. Their largest range of houses is built on the side of a hill, running northeast and southwest. Very large panes of plate glass, obtained from a number of discarded street cars, are used in several of the houses, giving the maximum of light.

The plants are, for the most part, in raised beds of solid earth, three feet above the walks. Some are on benches, but lumber is so expensive now; what used to cost $19 per thousand feet, is selling at this time for $50, so that old benches are not renewed. The ground beds do not commence to flower so early in the fall, but last longer in the spring.

All plants are field grown, although they believe Matchless will do best if grown inside all summer. Matchless and Belle Washburn are put in the houses as soon after the first of July as possible. They are the earliest bloomers, and should get established inside before the dull fall and winter weather sets in. Matchless is peculiar, in that if left outside after July, its foliage will turn yellow, almost a straw color. It will, however, come around all right in the house and growers need not be afraid to bench such stock.

The year it was introduced, this firm bought enough to fill a house in which lilies had been grown for Easter. With this early start they made a fine growth, and by fall were very strong and flowered splendidly the entire season, averaging 1½ flowers to a plant. They do not believe the average for the entire place is over 10 flowers to a plant, that is good salable stock.

Mr. Evans believes many growers make a great mistake in supposing that the largest of the field-grown plants are the best, whereas the short, stocky plants were much to be preferred. These recover from the moving quickly and soon get down to work, while the long stemmed plants, with many shoots, flopped over and took a much longer time to recover. They always lifted plants when the soil was moist and would cling to the roots.

Cuttings here are always placed in fresh, clean builder's sand, each new batch of cuttings having a fresh supply. When rooted, these are potted in 2-inch pots and kept in a temperature to make stocky plants, which are pinched to break into several shoots. They are set out as soon after April 15 as the weather permits.

The ground is ploughed and har-rowed thoroughly to make the soil as fine as possible, being finished with a drag that helps to level and break up the lumps. They never turn up more ground in one day than they can plant the next, the young stock taking hold much better in the moist, freshly turned soil. They do not water in the field, the plants seeming to come along better without such stimulant, and are all inside before the hot, dry days of August.

The varieties grown are: Matchless for white, the best carnation of any color; Belle Washburn, by far the best red, flowers continuously and never splits; Thenanthos, a splendid grower and great producer, of fine color, one of the best varieties they have ever tried, but many of the flowers split; Rosalia, a winner, splendid in every way, one of the best. Roper is now doing well, but had burst badly in the winter and did not come true to color. It was a good grower and producer with finely formed flowers. Miss Theo is a trifle too small as a market flower, but on account of its free flowering qualities and pretty shade of pink, is ideal for the grower who sells his flow-ers at retail. Cottage Maid is a splen-did market sort. Enchantress Supreme is the best flesh color. Mrs. Chas. Siegwart, a Maryland variety, looks so much like the Supreme that we cannot tell them apart.

But one crop is taken from the carna-tion houses, which are kept going until the middle of June, when the soil is re-newed for the new planting. They have tried using the same soil with the addi-tion of manure two years in succession, but results were not satisfactory. The accompanying illustration of a house of Belle Washburn was taken April 23, just after the flowers had been picked. Mr. Evans has always been able to get good long stems on this variety, al-though he has heard others complain that it came short with them. Their flowers are always kept in water for from 12 to 24 hours in a cool shed be-fore being bunched and sent to market.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Through the secretary's efforts, while on his travels, there is a noticeable stimulation of interest in our publicity campaign. This was to be expected, but there are thousands of florists the secretary will not be able to reach. The campaign must not be allowed to lag. Do not let the summer season furnish an excuse for inactivity. Remember, the committees must put their plans into effect months ahead. Consider-able time was required to launch the campaign properly—it was quite neces-sary. But now that good headway has been made and the work is meeting with undisputed success, there should result a measure of support which should carry the movement up to and beyond the point aimed for—$50,000 for the year 1918, the whole amount to be expended in publicity by December 31.

Again, it should be pointed out that the campaign is not for the benefit of any individual locality. In big towns and small towns, suburban sections, in fact, everywhere florists are situated, they are getting the benefit of this or-ganized effort to increase the demand for flowers; and it must be so, for the committees are considering only such mediums for the conveyance of their floral propaganda that, without the pos-sibility of doubt, reach every district in the country.

It is hard to conceive why any florist who is alive to his personal interests, has not identified himself with this movement. Mr. Reader, if you have not already subscribed, take this little appeal to heart. Just think of the work of the committees in charge of the cam-paign, their time cheerfully given to it, the responsibilities they have assumed; and think also of the confidence which so many of your fellow florists have re-posed in these same gentlemen, by gen-erously contributing, according to their means, to the fund which is to benefit all, and ask yourself whether the move-ment is not worthy of your hearty sup-port—then give what you can, and take comfort from the fact that you have helped to safeguard your business against a condition which in the nature of things, we must in these times ex-pect to combat.

Get Somebody Else.

The following, arranged by Paul Lawrence Dunbar, is being sent out as a card by Penn. The Florist, the prominent Boston, Mass., retailer: The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do.

I said, "You get somebody else or wait 'till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out—no doubt He got along—
But I felt kind o' sneakin' like! I knew I'd done God wrong.

One day I needed the Lord—needed Him right away;
But He never answered me at all, and I could hear Him say Down in my accusin' heart, "Child, I've got too much to do;
YOU get somebody else, or wait 'till I get through."

Now when the Lord has a job for me, I never try to shirk.
I drop what I have on hand and do the Lord's good work;
And my affairs can run along or wait 'till I get through.
Nobody else can do the work that God has marked out for you.

Essential Industry Problem Difficult.

Washington, June 14.—While Fuel Administrator Harry R. Garfield is clamoring for a definition of essential and non-essential industries with a view to conserving the coal supply of the country and fixing a definite supply to carry the country through the war next winter, members of the war industries board to whom he has applied for relief practically admit their inability at this time to frame such a division of industry upon which dependence can be placed. Chairman Baruch, of the board, has made it clear that the use of industry in war preparations is in such a state of flux at this time that it is practically impossible to make a hard and fast rule that will be even approximately permanent.

In lieu of a fixed list of essential and non-essential industries, the war industries board has been forced by circumstances into the policy of announcing, whenever necessary, the demands of the government for raw materials and other supplies, thereby indirectly warning any industry which may be affected of a possible shortage in their materials. Not long ago, when an immense order of shells, involving the use of large quantities of lead was contemplated, the war industries board secured the necessary supply and warned all non-war industries using lead of the exigencies of the situation. By inference, this non-war lead-using industry was temporarily placed on a non-essential list. Shortly thereafter a change in the specifications for shells released the accumulated lead and enabled the war industries board to release a large portion of it to non-war industry, thereby restoring it to life. Under such circumstances it is difficult for the war industries board to say definitely what industry may or may not get raw materials and fuels subject to later priorities.

Large users of steel products, such as the automobile manufacturers, who have to place their orders a year in advance to assure production, have already realized that, in competition with the war needs of the government, they cannot be guaranteed their demands, and they have been adjusting their business accordingly. On the other hand, the small manufacturer who does not need to place large orders in advance is now practically dependent upon the war industries board for his supply of material. When all government needs are met, the board has adopted the policy of making known the fact, together with the available surplus, and of allotting the remainder to those industries which may best serve the needs of domestic consumers. In view of the fact that the war industries board cannot know what the demands upon it will be until the departments inform it what their demands are, this mobile system of meeting the emergencies as they arise has been adopted. As time goes on and American industry becomes established and settled to meet any possible maximum demand, the war industries board will then be in a position to comb out non-essential industry which actually impedes war work when operating subject to its control, in addition to such industry which now would actually impede it if allowed to place large orders in advance for supplies and materials.

In the meantime, however, Fuel Administrator Garfield is face to face with a real problem. It can be already foreseen that, unless economies can be accomplished now and others provided for, there will be another coal shortage next winter. Despite the efforts of the fuel and railroad administrations to get coal out in increasing quantities this year, the demands for fuel for war industries is already so far exceeding the demand of last year as to wipe out the gain. For that reason, Mr. Garfield has set out to accomplish a saving of 60,000,000 tons of fuel which, if accomplished and added to increased output, will leave only a small margin of safety for the entire country.

The situation confronting Mr. Garfield and the war industries board at this time is substantially this: Mr. Garfield can foresee the demand upon fuel with considerable degree of accuracy, while the war industries board is not in a position to foresee all the demands which can be made upon it. While Mr. Garfield, acting on his information, can make suggestions for the saving of fuel by various industries, the war industries board, equally anxious to save both fuel and industry, can only pass judgment with certainty on those forms of industry which recognize, as quickly as does the government, that actual competition exists between both of such a character that industry must give way. Ordinarily such industries as the automobile manufacturers', for instance, enter new fields of war work, with no net result to the fuel administration except to increase its number of priority orders.

In the meantime, the railroad administration is hastening to strengthen its equipment by new cars and locomotives, and the war industries board is endeavoring to relocate war industry with a view to avoiding railroad congestion, and thereby facilitate the movement of such fuel as can be mined. At this time, however, full efficiency for the benefit of the fuel administration has not been attained.—New York Commercial.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The annual outing of the florists' club will be held at the Automobile Club's grounds July 24.

RIDGEWOOD, N. J.—It is reported that Fred Schweinfurth will close all but the houses devoted to roses during the coming winter.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—Walter Davis has bought the range formerly conducted by the late H. A. Jahn and plans to add considerable glass in the near future.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The old greenhouse which was erected over 40 years ago by the late Louis Unverzagt for former governor Matteson, has been torn down and will be removed to Milledale, this state.

OBITUARY.Max Wilhelmi.

Max Wilhelmi, vice-president of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., died at the Research hospital, Kansas City, Mo., June 19, following an operation which was performed with apparent success, but he was too weak to survive the shock. He had been in poor health for some time and spent the winter in Florida.

Mr. Wilhelmi was born near Washington, Mo., November 5, 1852, and at the age of 13 was apprenticed to a tinsmith, working at that trade until about 20 years of age. In 1872 he went to the Dakota Black Hills as a prospector, spending several years in that section as a miner and Indian fighter, and was in that locality during the Sioux uprising and the Custer massacre. In 1878 he located in Lawrence and entered the employ of F. Barteldes, a few years later being taken into the firm as a partner, the other members being the above mentioned and F. W. Barteldes. The business was incorporated in 1906, Mr. Wilhelmi becoming vice-president, which office he held up to the time of his death.

The deceased was married in 1879 to Miss Ella Gallenkamp, who survives him; also six children—Mrs. William Underhill Moore, New York; Mrs. Ray F. Sexton, Minneapolis, Kan.; Mrs. F. E. Doubleday, Pittsburg, Kan., and Max F. and the Misses Irma and Ilsa Wilhelmi, of Lawrence.

An interesting fact is that Mr. Wilhelmi's father, Franz, came to America about 1848 with Carl Schurz as a political refugee from Germany. He was afterward major of a volunteer regiment in the Union army during the civil war and served as lieutenant-colonel and aide de camp to the governor-general of Missouri during the time that state was under martial law.

Charles Harkett.

Charles Harkett, who for the past 20 years has been in charge of the cut flower and shipping departments at Harkett's Floral Nursery, Dubuque, Ia., died, June 17, at the age of 40 years. The deceased, who was unmarried, leaves a large circle of friends and business associates by whom the news of his death will be received with sincere regret. His demise occurred soon after that of his brother, William F. Harkett, associated with the management of the business for a number of years, and one of the most popular young business men of the city, who died February 17, as recorded in our issue of March 2, page 301.

Frank N. Meyer.

A Washington, D. C., despatch, dated June 18, announces that Frank N. Meyer, a prominent explorer of the United States department of agriculture, is dead in China. He disappeared, June 2, from a steamer between Hankow and Nanking and a week later his body was found in the Yangtse river. The deceased gave to the western world many new plants from the Orient, having for 10 years traveled as an agricultural explorer through China, Siberia and Turkestan.

John Satterthwaite.

John Satterthwaite, a life member of the Society of American Florists, and treasurer of the Curtis Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo., died at St. Luke's hospital, in that city, June 9. He was born near Yardley, Bucks county, Pa., in 1842 of Quaker parentage and moved to Denver about 35 years ago. The announcement of his passing will be received with sincere regret by a host of friends.

ARGENTINE FIBRE is used in California as a substitute for raffia.

WM. SWINBANK, of Sycamore, Ill., says that Ismene calathina, potted in January or February, makes a desirable Easter plant.

CAN representatives of the Dutch Bulb Growers' Union, now fixing 1918 prices, give the American trade any assurance that the United States will not again be made the dumping ground for low-grade surplus at auction disposal in New York?

AMERICAN coal production is breaking all records. For the first two weeks of June the output of bituminous mines was at the rate of 12,400,000 tons a week. In the first week of June the daily average production was 2,077,000 tons, compared with 1,789,000 in the same time last year.

Quality Stock Will Win.

These are troublous times, but there is no occasion to become unduly alarmed. The consensus of opinion in all lines of the craft is that the business of the past season was much better than had been expected. Those retail florists who cater to the trade of the middle classes, find their business increasing, the demand for funeral flowers being notably strong. Bedding stock has cleaned up very well. There were too many vegetable plants, as this stock was very largely increased over that of last season, while the newspapers failed to feature the war gardens as they did last year. Those who plan to make the most intensive use of their greenhouse space, will find a good market for all their high grade stock at increasing prices. Enthusiasm, backed with energy, will win out, while discouragement brings one to a standstill. Believe in success, work for it, watch and work for opportunities, and take advantage of them as they come.

Flowers and National Courage.

We are indebted to William C. Gloeckner, well known florist of Albany, N. Y., for the following from the Evening Journal of that city, June 19:

"The more optimism, week-end trips and flowers the better, is the remark credited to a Washington official, whose attention was called lately to the fact that the sale of flowers throughout the country is being pushed by a national publicity campaign for which over $35,000 has been pledged by leading growers and retail florists in the United States. Albany was visited a few days ago by John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, in the interest of the campaign, and Mr. Young reports that every florist in Albany and Troy whom he visited contributed to the publicity fund. One of the slogans adopted by Secretary Young and his co-workers in the campaign is, "Say It with Flowers." The meaning is that when one wishes to express sentiments of friendship, good will or sympathy one of the best ways is to send flowers. With the country burdened by a great war, some of the government leaders see good reason why rational means of keeping up the spirits of the people are to be encouraged. They believe that they who are giving of their blood and treasure to support this conflict must not become hardened, thinking solely of killing and being killed. That is one of the sure ways to take the courage out of the nation and army. The people need a touch of Mother Nature, hence the reason for flower sales publicity and coining the slogan "Say It with Flowers."

Bituminous Coal Shipments Restricted.

The fuel administration issued the following June 19:

"The constantly increasing demand for fuel for war purposes in the east has made necessary further restrictions on the westbound movement of bituminous coal. The United States fuel administration is preparing an order, to be effective June 20, which will prohibit the movement of bituminous coal westbound from coal operations located on the line of the Chesapeake & Ohio railway in Kanawha district east of and including St. Albans, W. Va. The purpose of the order is to allow an increased movement of Kanawha coal to the east to take the place of the so-called "smokeless" coal in Virginia and the Carolinas. Similar orders will be promulgated, effective June 20, prohibiting the movement of any high volatile coal from the Kanawha and Kenova-Thacker districts of West Virginia and the Big Sandy district of Kentucky to any Indiana consumers."

Carnation Year Book.

"The Carnation Year Book, 1918," the official organ of the British Carnation Society, edited by J. S. Brunton, recently issued, contains 50 pages of interest, with illustrations. Included in the contents are the annual report of the society, observations of the secretary, and the following papers: "Carnations: Past, Present, and Future," by Montagu C. Allwood; "How I Raised Marion Willson," by Sam Willson, Jr.; "Smooth-Edged or Fimbriated Petals," by G. C. Price; also a list of carnations registered by the society, and raisers' names, rules of the society, and a list of members of the organization. Copies of the year book may be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, T. A. Weston, Floradale, Orpington, Eng., for 1 shilling 6 pence, post free.

Sow Bugs and "Slug Shot."

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I have been greatly bothered with sow bugs. When I say millions of them in one bench, it may sound like exaggeration, but such is not the case. After trying almost everything, my foreman suggested the use of "Slug Shot," manufactured by Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y., and one application exterminated the pest completely. I had one entire bench of violets that was literally eaten up. I sprayed this but once, and the effects were beyond expectations. Any one whose stock is suffering from the ravages of sow bugs should try "Slug Shot" in a straight solution.

T. J. WOLFE, Waco, Tex.

Personal.

Wm. Legg, so long and favorably known in the florist trade of Buffalo, N. Y., will retire from active business, living at Alexander, that state. We heartily wish him long life, and all the pleasure the world affords in his retirement.

E. C. Vick, horticultural editor of the New York Sun, attended the nurserymen's and seedsmen's conventions at Chicago this week and last week.

Japanese Bulbs.

The War Trade Board Bureau of Imports writes, June 15, as follows:

"In response to your letter dated June 6 regarding the importation of bulbs from Japan, we would inform you that no modification of the import restriction relating to this commodity has been issued by the War Trade Board, nor have we any information regarding the possibility of such modification."

Hail Damage.

Since August 1, 1918, the Florists' Hail Association has paid more than $25,000 for glass broken by hail, and proofs of loss are still coming in.

PERIOD OF SUMMER DULLNESS ARRIVES.

Since Memorial day, trade has been very quiet. The cut of flowers is coming in very freely, and with the large buyers of flowers and plants away for the summer, the trade has to depend upon funeral work almost exclusively. The cut of roses of late has been enormous and it has been impossible to maintain any steady prices. Only the very finest quality finds a market at anything like remunerative figures. In most cases, roses are showing the effect of the hot weather, and there is a great quantity of poor stock coming in. Sweet peas are very plentiful and prices are low for the best stock. Carnations can be had at almost any price offered. Peddlers can be seen everywhere with great bunches of roses and carnations. Some very fine gladioli are arriving and seem to meet with favor. America seems to be the most popular. We noted some excellent pyrethrum hybrids in some of the stores. These are popular, owing to their keeping qualities. Scabiosa caucasica is another popular perennial with wonderful keeping qualities and splendid color. There are plenty of cattleyas and gardenias to be had, with the call for the latter rather slow. Some very fine Japanese iris are also coming in. There are more than enough lilies for the small demand. Such outdoor grown stock as delphiniums, coreopsis and gaillardias, can be had in large quantities and at very reasonable figures. Oriental poppies are very numerous and quite popular. In plants, there is very little doing. Nephrolepis are about the only things that move in any quantity. Ferns and greens of all descriptions are plentiful and cheap.

NOTES.

The funeral work at the Rolph funeral last week was the heaviest done by the local florists for a long time. A great number of large and costly designs were called for and helped to clean up a somewhat overcrowded market. Nearly every store in town was called upon to help fill the large amount of orders.

At the Lynch Nursery Company, at Menlo Park, the planting of chrysanthemums for the coming season is about completed. Many of the latest novelties are being grown outdoors this season under cheese cloth to test their shipping qualities. The planting of carnations in the field has been finished, also.

Many of the prominent growers are in a quandary just now as to the fuel situation. They expect the government to limit the amount of coal and fuel oil to be used for greenhouse purposes. Most of them are already stocking up on these two items, so as not to be caught short if the government does act.

The commissioner of corporations has issued a permit to the MacRorie-McLaren Company to issue 90 shares to Daniel MacRorie, Donald McLaren and Walter A. Hoff in payment of a co-partnership business. The firm says that Memorial day trade was excellent, being much ahead of last year.

Nels Peterson, of San Mateo, still continues to send in the very best carnations to this market, despite the warm weather. All his houses will shortly be replanted, as he does not make a practice of removing his old stock late into the summer.

The Shibley Floral Co., successors to the Shibley-Mann Co., had a very heavy Memorial day trade. Mr. Shibley, the manager, says there was plenty of stock to go around, but the demand for flowering plants was rather light.

Chas. C. Navlet, of San Jose, is a frequent visitor in this city. He says his trade the past season was especially good. The call for vegetable seeds and plants he found very good.

Peter Bisset, chief of the plant introduction bureau at Washington, is on a visit to this city. He is making a tour of the plant introduction stations of the country, and spent some time at the government station at Chico.

The Liberty Flower Shop, on Polk street, is making a very effective display this week, featuring sweet peas and gladioli extensively. They say trade keeps up in an encouraging manner in their neighborhood.

"Shorty" Schreutenhaus, of Mayfield, is sending in large loads of seasonable stock every day. He was probably the largest buyer of bulbs in this vicinity last season, and is now cutting heavily of all varieties.

Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, was a recent caller on the trade here. He says his Memorial day demand was the heaviest he ever handled. He was fortunate in being in fine crop just at the right time.

The sale of flowers at the store of the Francis Floral Co., on Powell street, netted the Red Cross over $1,800. The company deserves much credit for this splendid showing.

P. Laborer has disposed of a half interest in his business. He expects to be called to the colors very shortly and is anxious to dispose of his business entirely.

Albert O. Stein says funeral work has been keeping his force quite busy the past week. He says decorative work is rather quiet at present.

David Goldmann, formerly with the Redondo Floral Co., of Los Angeles, has joined the forces of the Art Floral Co., on Powell street.

George C. Roeding is making a visit to this city in connection with his duties on the national food commission.

NOTES.

Calling recently on a number of the commercial florists of this city, we found them busy and optimistic as to the future. When a man has been in the florist business continuously for 50 or 60 years, he may be said to have experience, and Hartford has two florists who have such records. John Coombs is now 70 years old and has been growing and selling flowers here ever since he was 20. He has a fine range on Benton street, one store on Main street, another on Asylum street. Both the stores are managed by his son, Joseph Coombs. The senior Mr. Coombs is yet active in the growing end of the business, and he talked of past and present conditions. "Win the War" is the slogan throughout the city, and business men are prepared to make sacrifices. Mr. Coombs will shut down his older houses, or a part of them. When asked if he was not the oldest florist in the city, Mr. Coombs replied: "Oh, no; there is another one here who is over 80," so in our rounds we at length reached Robert Marchant, who started business here 65 years ago. He was born in Sussex, England, 84 years ago and came to this country in 1848. Although at the time of his arrival this was an old town, compared with many others, he has lived to see wonderful changes and growth. Where he located is now one of the best residential sections of the city, with fine homes and churches. "When I built my house here," said he, "there was no street in front of it." Since the transformation there has been a good street, named Huntington. Mr. Marchant is yet active about his greenhouses, his trade being local. He is assisted by one son, George, who is 25 years old. Another son, Robert W., 28 years old, is with the army in France. Mrs. Marchant is several years younger than her husband.

Spear & McManus, 242 Asylum street, were found busy and report having a good season. Being a typical American city, there was an excellent Mothers' and Memorial day business.

J. Albert Brodrib, 635 Main street, is one of the younger florists, who has an attractive store.

The long established business of "Welch, the Florist," is prosperous.

A. F. F.

Toledo.

BIG RUSH IS OVER.

Florists are beginning to relax a little after the big rush of the past five months when business exceeded the bounds of their fondest expectations. May, in particular, according to reports of leading retailers and growers, was the best month the trade has ever experienced. Funeral work was heavy during the entire month and the spring planting demands cleaned up the market in fine shape. There has been a slight let up in June, but not as much as was expected. Funeral work seems to keep up well and people seem to be buying more artistic pieces. There is plenty of all kinds of seasonable stock at present and the quality is good with the exception of carnations, which are small. Outdoor flowers are now coming on the market and are enjoying a fair sale. Roses are plentiful, but not quite up to previous quality.

NOTES.

Max Spanner, who had made up his mind to close his business until next fall, and had already disposed of much of his stock to various florists, quickly changed his mind when he saw the opportunity of getting a good location in an old established stand in the Ohio building. After July 1 the store formerly occupied by Metz & Bateman will be occupied by Max. He has been in business in this city for many years, and has always enjoyed a prosperous trade.

Metz & Bateman were so anxious to get into their new store on Superior street that they hurried up the moving operations and were able to take occupancy 10 days ahead of schedule. When the writer dropped into their new place, which is just half a block south of their old store, he found everything still topsy-turvy. However, both Earl Metz and Miss Bateman, his partner, are enthusiastic about the change and expect to prosper.

A. E. Warning's business on Broadway has enjoyed a steady and wholesome growth, which has come as a direct result of his efforts to please his patrons. Starting in a small way, he has seen his business grow from day to day until it is now in a prosperous condition.

When Miss Helen Patten is not busy at her store on Madison avenue, she is occupied with Red Cross work, and between the two she has no time to worry about the future. Wherever patriotic women are called upon to back the boys at the front, Miss Patten plays a leading part.

Mrs. E. Suder, one of the oldest and most popular florists in this city, whose splendid greenhouses and conservatory are located on Cherry street, reports a heavy call for funeral work, weddings and graduation bouquets. Her bedding plant season was extremely prosperous.

Among the latest improvements at Schramm Brothers' Cherry street store, are a new refrigerator and a cash register of the very latest and improved type. This firm reports the best May that it has ever experienced. Bedding plants are still selling.

The Mussbach Sisters report a lively demand for funeral work and graduation bouquets. They have purchased a fine lot of baskets and other floral stock from Max Spanner, with whom they were formerly associated.

STOCK IS NOT AS PLENTIFUL.

Stock is not as plentiful as it has been, consequently prices are somewhat higher and the market is steadier than it has been for sometime. Carnations are selling at better figures, but receipts are considerably smaller, and the demand is now about equal to the requirements. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in good supply and clean up nicely each day at very satisfactory prices. Columbia is more plentiful, but there is no surplus of this variety to speak of. Champ Weiland is moving nicely and is considered an essential variety by the leading buyers. Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney and Double White Killarney are in good supply and the same is true of Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Milady, Shawyer, Hoosier Beauty and Richmond. Peonies are plentiful, but command good prices and clean up nicely. Gladioli are quite a factor in the market and seem to move right along at very satisfactory figures. Lily of the valley is none too plentiful and the same is true of orchids. Sweet peas are about done. Water lilies are seen in large numbers and are moving better this week than they have at any time this season. Lilies are not as plentiful as they have been, and but very few callas are included in the shipments. Calendulas, white and yellow daisies, feverfew, stocks, candytuft, pansies, delphiniums, gaillardias, coreopsis, gypsophilas, larkspurs and other miscellaneous outdoor stocks are included in the daily offerings, which give the buyer a large assortment to select from. Green goods are in large supply with the exception of smilax, which commands the top market prices. All buyers in this market should bear in mind that all the wholesale cut flower and supply houses will close all day Sunday, commencing July 7, and govern themselves accordingly. The wholesale stores will remain open until 9 p. m. Saturday for the convenience of the trade.

NOTES.

Frank Farney has resigned his position with the A. L. Randall Co., to go into business for himself with headquarters in room 710 Kesner building. His specialty will be nursery furniture and he will not only produce goods but will represent several manufacturers in this line. His many friends in the trade wish him every success.

Peter Vasel, formerly with the Alpha Floral Co., has been notified by his draft board to report for military service this week. He is an ambitious young man and will make a mark for himself very quickly, as he believes in democracy and is anxious to do his bit to bring the big struggle to a close as early as possible.

Jas. Follett, of Webster City, Mo., accompanied by his son Lester, who is in the express business at Ft. Dodge, Ia., were visitors at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store, June 22. Mr. Follett is one of the oldest customers on Kennicott's books, not to mention one of the most valuable.

Fred J. Krauss, formerly with the E. F. Winterson Co., who left for Macon, Ga., with the drafted men from his district several weeks ago, has been transferred to the 7th division of the 7th Trench Mortar Battery now stationed at Camp McClellan, Anniston, Ala.

John Broadbeck, son of Philip Broadbeck, who is with the 14th Infantry, now stationed at Ft. George Wright, Spokane, Wash., writes that he is in the best of health, and is loud in his praises of the western country.

Henry Kruchten, of the John Kruchten Co., is helping out his father at the greenhouses, where his services are badly needed owing to the present extreme scarcity of labor.

Tony Rocca, who has had charge of John Mangel's office for many years, is now with the colors, and is serving in the intelligence department with headquarters in this city.

Mrs. Frank Ayres has recovered sufficiently from her recent operation to leave the hospital and is doing as nicely as can be expected.

George Nepper has resigned his position with A. T. Pyfer & Co., and leaves this week for American Falls, Ida., to seek employment.

The next Florists' Club meeting will be held at Nic Karthausers grove, 6656 Ridge avenue, Thursday evening, July 18, at 8 p. m. T. E. Waters, chairman of the Good-of-the-Club committee, has arranged an elaborate program for the occasion and it is expected that everyone in the trade will attend. A special invitation is extended to all the retail florists.

It is understood that Jens Jensen, a millionaire architect of Highland Park, is among others offering objections to the annexation of Ravinia Highlands, a new suburb, on the grounds that the exploiters of the new territory neglected to look after the artistic sense of the people when laying out the grounds and houses.

A. L. Vaughan, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., reports that business so far during June this year is ahead of the total sales for the entire month of 1916 but will fall behind those of the same month of 1917 which is the report the majority of wholesalers have to make. June last year was an exceptionally good month.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a good supply of roses from young stock particularly Killarney and White Killarney. The demand for chrysanthemum stock is keeping up remarkably well at this house and a grand cleanup in this line is expected before the season is over, many varieties being already sold out.

Herman Bauske, of the A. L. Randall Co., who left several weeks ago for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., with the drafted men from his district was rejected and is back at his old job.

Ed. Goldenstein, formerly manager of the bulb department at Vaughan's Seed Store, who is with the national army at Rockford, visited his many friends here, June 21.

The Misses Nettie Parker, of A. T. Pyfer & Co., and Olga Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, spent June 23 at Starved Rock and report a most delightful time.

William Schupp, brother of Philip Schupp, manager for J. A. Budlong, left with the drafted men from his district for Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., June 24.

Andrew McAdams and his daughter Miss May E. McAdams, the landscape architect, returned last week from their winter home at Melbourne, Fla.

Fritz Bahr, Jr., who has been with the colors for sometime, is home on a furlough. His company is stationed in California.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting from a splendid crop of summer roses particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia. The supply department reports business as good for June and the plant department at Morton Grove reports an exceptionally brisk season.

Allie Zech received a letter this week from Jack Byers who is now with the colors in France in which he asks to be remembered to all his friends in the trade. He wrote a long letter but a large portion of it was deleted when it reached here.

Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, reports a brisk demand for Columbia roses which Stielow Bros. Co., one of the stockholders, is growing in quantity.

Fred Krell left for Camp Grant with the drafted men from his district this week.

The American Bulb Co., reports a good demand for California freesias.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The North Shore Horticultural Society, Lake Forest, Ill., held its monthly meeting June 7, President Thos. H. Head occupying the chair. Mr. Elliot, of Park Ridge, gave a very interesting talk on behalf of the American Sweet Pea Society. He gave an account of their work in the east and urged the affiliation and co-operation of all local horticultural societies and also a larger individual membership, especially in the middle west. He was given a hearty vote of thanks. A paper prepared by Mr. Head was also read, the subject being, "How an Acre of Ground Can be Used to Best Advantage as a Garden." This paper was greatly appreciated by the members present and a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Head. The monthly exhibits were a splendid plant of Cattleya gigas, exhibited by Thos. Head, awarded 95 points; collection of pot grown fruit, exhibited by J. H. Francis, 95 points; specimen begonia, exhibited by George Wilson, 95 points. The judges for the evening were E. Benson, A. Petersen and K. Lofing. The attendance at the meetings continues to be very good and this speaks well for the success of the society. J. H. FRANCIS, Cor. Sec'y.

LIGHT SUPPLY AND SLOW DEMAND.

The local market has been dull during the past week. A real spurt in business would find the supply hardly in a position to take care of such a call, as a limited quantity of stock is seen daily. Gladioli are of very good quality, and command a fine price. Carnations are still lingering, and that is all. Sweet peas also are going fast. Lilies are fine, but the supply is limited. Roses of the shorter grades are plentiful. Fancy stock is very scarce. The bulk is Russell, Milady and Sunburst. Ophelia has been a bit of crop in this territory. Outdoor stock such as delphiniums, gaillardias, etc., are in ample supply for the local demand. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

The writer has noticed a marked increase in the varieties of outdoor cultivated and wild flowers the local growers are bringing into the market. This is to be encouraged, as the up-to-the-minute retail florist can find a world of uses to put these outdoor flowers to. Another reason is, that it creates a great interest among the buying public as to various wild flowers and names, and consequently publicity. Last, but not least, it gives a financial return for the mere expenditure of a little energy.

Mrs. H. G. Berning, secretary of the Ladies' Florist Club, has called a meeting of the ladies at 2 p. m., July 3, at the music pavilion in Tower Grove park. It is hoped all interested will be on hand, as subjects of vital importance to the coming convention of the S. A. F. will come up for discussion. Those with babies should bring them along, as there is no finer place for the kiddies to enjoy themselves.

Messrs. McCabe and Nichols of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, spent a few days in St. Louis the past week. Frankie McCabe is a great favorite among the St. Louis florists, because, wherever he lights, he radiates sunshine with that good old Irish blarney of his.

V. J. Gorly left on his vacation June 23. He says he is going to Kansas City first, and then to some Michigan lake resort to spend the month of July. He expects to be back in time to take a hand in the coming convention.

Al Gumz, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., is sporting a new five-seated Moon touring car. He says he is "off of John Henrys" for life, since he has to have a "self-commencer."

The local joint publicity committee, at its last meeting, decided to hold but one meeting monthly during July, August and September.

Geo. H. Angermueller has been getting in some very nice rose shipments, which are usually sold before they are unpacked. J. J. W.

Earl Poehlmann at Officers' Camp.

T. J. Wolfe, the well-known florist, of Waco, Tex., in a recent communication, says:

"It has been my good fortune and pleasure to meet Earl Poehlmann, son of August Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, now at one of the officers' training camps in the south. He is a fine young fellow—the true type of Americanism. He has not a moment to spare other than for study, and when I first met him he hardly had time to talk to me for there is nothing but continuous work and study for the student officers. He cannot say how long he will remain. The time may be short or long. I have just seen 10 trains leaving, going I know not where."

EVERYVILLE, ILL.—Walter Adams, a well-known Chicago florist, was a recent visitor in this city, spending a few days with his parents.

SHIPPING DEMAND GOOD.

The market during the past week was well supplied with all kinds of stock, and owing to the very satisfactory shipping business, plus the extra local demand due to the commencement exercises, a fair cleanup at moderate prices can be reported. Due to the falling off of elaborate weddings and funeral work, everything in white, including Easter lilies, suffered for lack of demand; the colors, red, yellow and pink, had the preference. Local peonies were at their height the fore part of last week, and did not move as readily as expected. With the closing of the schools and the exodus of the summer resorters, we now enter into the two months when little can be expected outside of funeral work.

NOTES.

President Kennedy, of the local florists' club, has appointed Wm. R. Schroeder, Art Leidiger, Gust. Rusch, H. V. Hunkel and C. C. Pollworth on the committee to work out suitable plans to organize a state florists' association. Nic. Zweifel, who returned from a 10-day auto trip through the upper part of Wisconsin and Michigan, says that the idea of organizing a state association had been voiced by quite a number of florists whom he met during his travels. The proper slogan from now on ought to be co-operation if we want to hold our own, is the writer's opinion.

While the coal proposition is the main thought in the minds of the local growers, they all are figuring on shutting down enough glass so as to make the 50 per cent allowance see them through the coming season. At this writing a good many here have their share on hand, while the rest are busy doing likewise.

At the Brown Deer range of the Holton & Hunkel Co. a good many of their rose benches are gradually being dried off, preparatory for the new season's crop. The Heitman-Oestreicher Co. is consigning some long-stemmed hardy delphiniums in two shades to this firm at this time.

Although the committee of the florists' advertising club did its share in the daily press and street car publicity, the results obtained did not come up to expectations. Had the local demand been as good as that out of town, one could have said business was fine.

As the next regular meeting of the local florists' club falls on the 4th of July, President Kennedy has decided to postpone same to July 11, one week later. Several important matters for that meeting are at hand at this time of writing.

Gust. Rusch & Co. state that if carnation growers cease to disbud and otherwise neglect their stock there is no use of marketing them, for from now on only the best grade will hold its own and pay for the labor.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. claims that the call for baskets, etc., for the local commencement exercises did not come up to expectations. All in all, business was reported fair for the past week.

Fred Bliese, proprietor of the Waukesha Floral Co., passed through here, June 24, to the northern part of the state to spend a well earned vacation at fishing. E. O.

Omaha.

FUEL SHORTAGE WORRIES.

If local florists next winter are compelled by the government to close half their greenhouses, as is proposed on account of prospective shortage of coal at that time, there will be a great shortage of flowers here for the retail trade. At the present time, with all greenhouses running, scarcely enough flowers are being produced to supply the local demand. The recent order placing florists seventh in the list of priorities for coal supplies has caused a great deal of activity here.

ERNE & COMPANY

—WHOLESALE FLORISTS—

30 E. Randolph Street, L. D. Phone, Randolph 6578. CHICAGO, ILL.

The local florists and the trade in Council Bluffs, Ia., sought to have the industry placed fifth on the list, but to no avail. A survey of the situation of florists here who will probably come under the ruling that will close half their greenhouses if coal grows scarce, reveals the fact that Hess & Swoboda, Lewis Henderson, Ederer, Al Donahue, and F. B. Floth will likely come in the class of firms who have over 10,000 square feet of glass.

NOTES.

Lewis Henderson bought out The Fernery, Sixteenth and Howard street, and is now operating it. This makes three retail shops he now has in this city.

The Blackstone Flower Shop has been discontinued, and Mrs. Helen Royce, owner and manager, has gone back on the road, traveling for a medical concern.

A. Donahue has opened a branch shop in the new central market, the new and exceptionally classy grocery and meat market on Harney street.

A. E. L.

SUMMER'S ARRIVAL FELT.

The market has started to put on its summer appearance, graduation and social functions being over for the season. Cut stock is quite plentiful but there is a shortage of plants. Roses are seen in abundance and sell cheap. Carnations are on the wane and can be bought for any price. Sweet peas are holding up well at $1.50 a hundred. Outdoor larkspur is about gone. This flower sold exceptionally well. Easter lilies are seen in large quantities, and the quality is very good, selling well at $10 a hundred. Salpiglossis, centaureas and sweet sultans are finding good buyers.

NOTES.

Mrs. W. H. Ward, who for years has been saleswoman at the flower market, has gone to the hospital for a severe operation. Her condition is improving slowly, and she is expected to be home by July 1.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report a good business, with Julius Snyder out on the road, visiting all the stores and greenhouses, and booking good orders for the summer trade.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., one of our largest wholesale houses, reports that business is very good and their florist supply trade has improved 100 per cent over last year.

Welch Bros. Co. continues to be one of our most active wholesale houses as their stock is of the best. S. K. G.

New Haven, Conn.

NOTES.

We found the florists here reasonably busy, and they report excellent Mothers' day and Memorial day business. But here, as well as in the other cities we have visited, we found the florists disposed to be cautious and conservative. With so much uncertainty about a winter's supply of coal—or any supply at all—it is not unreasonable that there is uneasiness in the trade.

The dahlia exhibition which will be held September 11-12 is creating considerable interest, as there are good growers of dahlias in and about this city.

John J. McQuiggan, formerly with the S. H. Moore Co., has recently taken the store at 123 Church street, opposite the park, and is doing well.

The S. H. Moore Co. reports a good season. At this store we noticed fine sweet peas from the Slocombe Brothers garden on Townsend avenue.

Charles Munro is both a grower and a retailer, and we found his store well stocked with all seasonable flowers.

Myer Wilson, who has a neat store at 56 Congress avenue, reports excellent business.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

GOOD STOCK EAGERLY SOUGHT.

The feature of the market is the scarcity of good stock, which extends to nearly all lines. Carnations, so plentiful a couple of weeks ago, are now divided up in small lots, a couple of hundred now having to do where a thousand are wanted. Roses are now grabbed up eagerly that a month ago were not good enough for the street. About the only satisfactory stock are Easter lilies, which are for the most part up to standard nearly all the time. Outdoor sweet peas are also in demand, the cool weather of last week bringing them along slowly and with substance. Centaureas are also good outside stock. Gladiolus is another flower which helps to save the market. Cattleyas are very scarce, as is lily of the valley, which is "lily of the valley" and that is about all that can be said of it. Monday morning opened with the smallest assortment of flowers seen in the market this season. There was a very good demand and not near enough stock to go around. Warmer weather is setting in and there will soon be the usual surplus.

WITH THE WHOLESALE.

Dennis T. Connor, who for 18 years was busy putting the Lord & Burnham standard into greenhouses in this district, is now open for a position, as the company closed its office here not being able to meet the competition of the Kaiser. Dennis thinks it will not be long, however, before the Hun will be put out of business, and he will then be back on the job.

"No great activity, but hard to get good stock," was the report of the Leo Niessen Co. Clarence Watson said that carnations were unusually good for the season. These and Easter lilies were features here.

"Roses that were hard to move two weeks ago are now selling well; in fact, we cannot get enough," said Manager Cortis of the Jos. Heacock Co. The shop is all upside down with the moving.

Frank Miles Day, well-known as a designer of many famous buildings, among others, Horticultural hall, this city, died at his home at Mt. Airy, a suburb, June 15.

Eugene Bernheimer is much pleased with the roses from Florex Gardens. The summer crops in the large houses look very well. The demand for the season is good.

Chas. F. Edgar, retailer, grower and wholesaler, is now with the M. Rice Co. He has a large acquaintance and should do well in his new sphere.

"A better demand than we have stock to fill" was the situation with Berger Brothers. Good outside sweet peas and carnations were leaders.

F. J. Michell, Jr., is to take to himself a bride June 27. Our warmest congratulations.

Jos. Harris, that hustling grower and reailer of Shamokin, was in town last week.

NOTES.

In speaking of the scarcity of flowers, Paul Berkowitz says that florists who do not provide themselves with an anchor to windward in a good stock of magnolia and oak leaves, cypas, crepe and cape flowers, make a great mistake. "We had a hard time to introduce magnolia leaves," he said. "Many fought shy of them for quite a while, but now there is scarcely a store in the land that does not handle these substitutes for galax and find them acceptable to their customers and very profitable. I know of one high class store that makes a specialty of magnolia wreaths, which when decorated bring $25 and $30. They are not just slung together, but are artistic and beautiful, and do not need many fresh flowers to make them saleable for funerals or grave decoration."

The sympathy of the trade goes out to John W. Prince, in the loss of his son, Lieut. Harry W. Prince, who was killed by an accident to his areoplane while getting final instructions in England. It seems but yesterday that he was one of the principal speakers at the flag raising at Wm. K. Harris', where his father is foreman. Then all was bright. He was full of patriotism and anxious to get away to be over there. He was in the aviation corps and said he felt as confident in the air, as on the land, and now he is a martyr to the cause of liberty.

SUPPLY AMPLE FOR LIMITED DEMAND.

There has been little change in the condition of the wholesale market or in prices since our last notes were written. The supply of good stock continues light, but there is enough to supply the demand. The weather continues unseasonably cold and is likely to keep many people in the city that usually go to their summer homes about this date. In ordinary times that would be favorable for the florists—but these are extraordinary times. A number of retailers report considerable doing in small wedding decorations and funeral work, but June business has been far below what it was in former years. The outlook for a continued supply of stock throughout the summer is not promising. Asters in the field are not growing, and unless there is a speedy change of weather, the crop will be almost, if not altogether, a failure.

June 24.—With a June, the coolness of which the weather bureau finds no precedent in its records, it was inevitable that the supply of stock would be greatly reduced. The shortage is very noticeable this morning, and prices are stiffening, but the volume of business is not great enough to warrant a strong advance. The weather continues cool, and as elsewhere noted, the supply of stock is likely to be light for some time to come. Considerable stock of cut crimson rambler roses has been arriving, which to some extent, helps out. Carnations are now quoted at $4 to $6 per 100.

NOTES.

Manager H. G. Perry, of the Dards store, visited West Point, June 19, to witness the drill of the cadets at the military academy. One of the staff of this store went to Newport, R. I., June 17, in charge of a number of fine designs for the funeral of F. S. G. de Hauteville, the descendant of a noble French family that settled in this country many years ago. On June 15, the same store had a house and church wedding decoration at Norfolk, Conn.

Justice Pendleton in the Supreme court has appointed Edward J. Garrity temporary receiver of the assets and effects of the Barney B. Jacobs Company, Inc., flowers and plants, 114 West 28th street, on application of a majority of the directors for a voluntary dissolution of the corporation. The receiver is required to give a bond of $14,000. An order to show cause why the corporation should not be dissolved was set down for July 30.

Thorley's "House of Flowers," corner of Fifth avenue and 46th street, is now particularly attractive and unique. This refers to the exterior, though the interior is at all times attractive. The entire building is devoted to his business and from the ground floor to the roof every balcony and window is filled with tubs and boxes of palms, ferns and a variety of other foliage plants, which make it one of the sights of the avenue that is worth seeing.

J. G. Papademos, of the Drakos Co., in addition to his two flower stores, opposite Columbia University, also conducts a first class restaurant, which helps out during the university vacation.

William H. Siebrecht, Sr., and his son, Henry, were among the visitors to Elizabeth park, Hartford, Conn., June 20.

J. J. Coan is receiving particularly fine stock of delphinium, some measuring 10 feet, with 30 inches of flower.

HEAVY SUPPLY AND FAIR MOVEMENT.

Flowers of all varieties are still coming to this market in large quantities, especially lilies and roses. Business has been better this week than last, although prices are not improved, but almost everything is sold up each day. The weather has been rather cool all week, which has its advantages. Roses are greatly improved and can be held for several days. Ophelia and Prima Donna are the best varieties at present. Carnations are still coming in large quantities, but are very small flowers. The first asters of the season have made their appearance. Gladioli are now coming and find ready sale, as the buyers are looking for something different. Garden flowers are selling very well. They have been used extensively in what few weddings the retailers have had this year. Lily of the valley is not moving as swiftly as in other years at this time. Lilies are coming in large amounts, but have slow sale. Greens are plentiful, except smilax.

NOTES.

Walter Nernberg now has charge of the landscape department of the A. W. Smith Co., and has been busy at the Mt. Washington greenhouses all spring. Oliver Beet is in charge of the buying during his absence.

W. S. Kidd, who conducted a flower store in Beaver, Pa., some years ago, died June 20. Since leaving the flower business, he had been in the steel business in the Beaver valley.

Randolph & McClements will lose four men in the next call of the local draft board, which will leave them very short of help.

Chas. Griffith, of Donora, has discontinued his flower business to enter the employ of the Westinghouse Machine Co.

Edw. Blind has returned from Philadelphia, Pa., with a truck load of palms and decorative plants.

Joe Fineberg and John Kountz will leave soon for military duty at Camp Humphries.

Geo. Wehrheim is receiving congratulations on a baby girl at his home.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

On June 20, Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., arrived in Lancaster and was taken to the home of President Buchanan for an hour's visit with George B. Wilson, the present owner and president of the Wheatland Greenhouse Co. With Mr. Vincent were Elmer Weaver, E. P. Hostetter, T. J. Nolan and the writer. The same party, joined by Ira Landis, Harry K. Rohrer, Chas. M. Weaver, M. J. Brinton and B. F. Barr took dinner with Mr. Vincent at the Elks Club.

The meeting was opened at eight o'clock with the usual formal business and a report from the picnic committee that the outing should be in the form of a basket affair, each family to supply their own basket and eat their lunch under their own separate tree, so that the sociability will have to come with the various games and amusements, instead of with the breaking of bread.

Mr. Evans, chairman of our local fuel committee, kindly came to the meeting on the invitation of the writer, and gave us a very good talk on the fuel question. He put us all on our honor to comply with the laws, and also to report any violation of the law. He also added that any time we were in trouble, to come to him, and while he could not promise to help us out every time, he would do all he could for us.

Richard Vincent, Jr., then gave us his illustrated lecture on "Scotland," and this was interspersed with some genuine Scotch songs rendered by Donald Frazer, who is second only to Harry Lauder. Mr. Vincent is always interesting, and was especially so on this occasion, and his little prelude, in which he gave us a heart to heart talk on the outlook for our business, was a masterpiece of good common sense.

The ladies' auxiliary of the club has been properly started, and we can soon look for results that will put the gentlemen's auxiliary on their mettle. The next meeting will be a picnic at the home of B. F. Barr, July 18.

TROUBLES CONFRONT TRADE.

June closes as a record-breaking month in the annals of the florist trade in this city, and it will go down in history as marking the introduction into modern wedding decorations of "weeds," wild flowers, which no one has heretofore thought fit for the purpose. The first half of the year is at an end and looking back over the six months the local trade find much to think of. Hit by one of the coldest winters in 30 years, unable to get sufficient supplies of coal with which to accumulate a reserve, January 1, brought its worries. The retailers and growers are now facing the troubles that are arising out of the so-called "Work or Fight" order of the Provost Marshall General, requiring all young men in the draft to leave employment in so-called non-essential lines and industry and become connected with other lines of a more war-like nature. This closely follows the draft and complicates to an untold extent the employment difficulties. This city stands out in this predicament of the florists, for being the seat of the national government, the government activities have drawn from commercial life many hundreds of people who would be otherwise available to the stores. The first effects of the fuel-reduction order were felt during the week, when hit by cold weather, the local rose growers were practically compelled to refrain from using coal to heat the houses because of a fear that they would not have enough to tide over a cold spell during the winter when flowers will be more in demand and their production more profitable. The growers sacrificed their roses to save the coal and found substitutes for use in connection with the many fine wedding and funeral orders received during the month. Local business men have been asked by the government to cut down on their deliveries of their wares to patrons, and the florists have, as individuals, done all possible to curtail delivery expense. The trade as a whole is soon to take the problem up for concerted action and the elimination of many special deliveries will follow.

NOTES.

A meeting of the florist club has been called for July 2. At the May meeting, it was decided to hold a picnic-meeting on the Fourth of July to which all of the employees in the stores and greenhouses would be asked to attend. The holding in this city on the same date of a patriotic pageant in which the army, navy, marine corps, diplomatic corps and the national and local government will participate, necessitates the postponement of such an event until a later date. President Z. D. Blackstone has appointed a committee to secure the co-operation of the entire trade in the making of a floral display in this pageant. The members of the committee are George C. Shaffer, chairman; William Marche and G. Milton Thomas. The float will be entered in the name of the club, and all in the trade are to be asked to contribute towards it. The secretary announces that the following men have been admitted to the club as new members: George C. Dalglish, E. P. Rodman, Arthur Shaffer, Harry Payne and J. A. Cohn.

George Gouldman, who has been employed at the Louise Flower Shop on Connecticut avenue, since its opening, has joined the marines. Young Mr. Gouldman has been in the business here for quite a long time, first with the Washington Florists Company and later with George C. Shaffer. He has a host of friends who wish him luck. When he gets to Paris Island he will be able to join Milton Redman, formerly with the S. S. Pennock Company, who has been with the marines now for several weeks. B. F. L.

St. Paul, Minn.

WEDDINGS AND FUNERALS TRADE FACTORS

The market during the past week has shown a little stimulation occasioned by a number of large weddings and the funerals of three prominent persons in one day, which helped local business considerably. Roses and carnations continue of fair quality, but peonies are off the market, their season being much shorter this year than usual, although two weeks earlier than last year. Outside perennials are now arriving and the demand is good.

NOTES.

The stock at Henry Krinke's greenhouses is being sold, his intention being to tear down his range and retire from active business. The past few years he has intrusted his sons with the managing of his business, and now they are participating with "our boys in France." Not caring again to shoulder the burden of the business, Mr. Krinke has decided to retire. The trade in general will miss him, as he was a florist of the old school and was a successful hybridizer. Perhaps his efforts were best rewarded in his production of the Lobelia Krinkii.

H. Nielsen, of the Hazel Park Greenhouses, reports a good season. He has been confining his efforts to calla lilies and fancy annuals and perennials, which he is successfully forcing. He has experienced no difficulty in disposing of his products, as they are strictly first class.

J. Christensen is busy getting his place in shape for next season's planting—Ophelias stronger than ever. He has had good results with this rose, and is now making a specialty of growing it. He reports a successful season and a clean-out of his bedding stock.

E. O. Holm, of Holm & Olson, Inc., is serving on the grand jury. O. J. Olson, of this concern, returned from a fishing trip after a very busy season at the greenhouses. E. W. Reid, also of this firm, is attending the nurserymen's convention in Chicago.

The bedding and floral effects in the parks this year are worthy of mention, a large amount of bedding stock being well arranged, with a good showing of blooms, not only of annuals, but excellent plantings of perennials and showy effects are produced.

The West Side Floral Co. has its houses well depleted. This concern grew an abundance of bedding stock this year; they expect to grow more than ever next year. C. R. F.

New Britain, Conn.

NOTES.

New Britain is a prosperous manufacturing city, and money seems plentiful, a reasonable share going to the florists. A. C. Strom, who has a fine retail store, with greenhouses at Southington, says that he has had an excellent season, and particularly mentions Mothers' day and Memorial day business. He says the plant trade has been excellent.

Most of the growers in this part of the state have, to some extent, gone into vegetable growing. Some have contented themselves with selling young plants, but others who have the land, and most of them have, are planting out vegetable stock.

Although New Britain is a factory city, it has many fine homes with well kept grounds. As at Hartford, the people seem to take pride in their roses.

Carl Lorenzen, 56 Church street, is 70 years old and the dean of the business, but he is yet active in the management of his store.

The Volz Floral Co., 92 West Main street, reports good business. They have greenhouses on Bassett street.

Fred. H. Bollerer recently opened a good store at 4 Elm street, which is managed by Mrs. Bollerer. A. F. F.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The annual rose, peony and strawberry exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the date of which was advanced to June 15-16 instead of June 22-23, due to the forwardness of the season, brought out a splendid lot of entries and was very well attended. There were no cash prizes awarded and the admissions were donated to the Boston Metropolitan Chapter of the Red Cross. In addition, thousands of flowers were sent in each day and sold for the good cause. Among the principal prize winners were the following: T. C. Thurlow's Sons, Inc., R. & J. Farquhar & Co., H. R. Comley, Blue Hill Nurseries, J. K. Alexander, Boston Cut Flower Co., Houghton-Gorney Co., A. L. Stephen, Albert Geiger, Jr., W. C. Winter, Mrs. C. O. Weld, Henry Stewart, A. W. Preston, Seth A. Borden, Miss Cornelia Warren, Mrs. Fred L. Oaks and R. M. Saltonstall. Fruits and vegetables: Louis Graton, H. L. Crane, R. M. Saltonstall, W. C. Cooper, Hillcrest Farm, E. A. Clark and Mrs. Henry Lyman. H. C. T.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Thirty-Sixth Annual Convention, Chicago, June 18-20.

The Officers Elect:

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

(Report Continued From Issue of June 22.)

Wednesday Afternoon's Proceedings.

At the opening of the Wednesday afternoon session Chas. D. Boyles announced that he had been asked by Secretary of Agriculture Houston to present his compliments and greetings to the convention. President Bolgiano in response stated that the convention appreciated the remembrance and regretted that the secretary could not by reason of pressing official duties attend the convention. The auditing committee, David Burpee, Edward Leonard and Francis Stokes, reported the books of the secretary-treasurer in first-class condition and his accounts correct. On motion of E. C. Dungan, the report was received and filed and the committee discharged with thanks. The committee on obituary resolutions, C. N. Keeney, chairman, presented their report which was adopted by rising and unanimous vote.

Seed Wheat Distribution Assured.

Wm. G. Scarlett stated that he had been commissioned by the chairman of the committee on seed stocks to inquire whether the seedsmen anticipate any change in their attitude with reference to handling seed wheat according to the rules and regulations of the Grain Corporation, and if there be any change in their attitude and seedsmen will not handle this commodity properly, the government department will have to take steps to see that seed wheat is properly distributed. Of course, it is the desire of the seed stocks committee and the country at large to see that there is the greatest possible distribution of seed wheat. There are practically no restrictions, and the most favorable rulings have been given to seedsmen so that they may handle and distribute this seed wheat, but the chairman of the committee on seed stocks wants to know whether there are any seedsmen who are of the opinion that they cannot handle seed wheat properly, and he wishes to be sure that they will handle it freely. Mr. Scarlett further stated, in response to inquiry from the audience, that while a dealer in grain could not ask more than 15 per cent profit, seedsmen can ask what they think is necessary to insure reasonable attention. Mr. McCausland, Wichita, Kan., said that under that assurance, Kansas dealers will handle seed wheat. George S. Green, of Chicago, stated that he had a ruling from Washington to the effect that stocks of seed wheat need not be reported weekly and J. H. Withey of Minneapolis, Minn., reported that so far as selling wheat for seeding purposes was concerned his firm expected to engage in this line to even a greater extent than formerly. F. H. Ebeling, Syracuse, N. Y., also reported satisfactory experience in handling this commodity. Mr. Wilson reported difficulty through competition with the county agents buying carload lots. On motion of Mr. Scarlett, it was declared to be the sense of the convention that seedsmen are satisfied with present rulings, and expect to handle seed wheat as they have heretofore, and increase it if possible.

On motion of Kirby B. White, resolutions in regard to need for Oriental farm labor were unanimously adopted. On motion of Waldo Rohnert, seconded by C. N. Page, it was ordered that the authorities at Washington be advised of the action and resolution adopted by the association. Mr. Funk spoke strongly in favor of the resolution, and was supported by G. J. Carpenter, M. A. Wheeler and others. W. E. Stone, of the Wisconsin experiment station, addressed the convention briefly.

W. F. Therkildson wishing to relieve the tension and cheer up the convention, presented a little "skit" of his own composition, which brought forth a hearty laugh. He said:

"Mr. President: Your newly appointed entertainment committee, having met in executive session at lunch hour, begs to submit the following additional feature and attraction: Watson Woodruff, better known as 'Little Watsie,' was accused by one W. D. Ross of Worcester, Mass., of being a 'fat old man.' Mr. Woodruff promptly denied the charges and challenged 'Grandpa Ross' to a foot-race to the lake and back. 'Little Watsie' claims to be able to start from the Hotel Sherman and run to the lake, dip his feet therein, and return in less time than 'Grandpa.' 'Grandpa' promptly accepted the challenge for a purse of $25—the loser to pay. Kirby B. White, the unpaid assistant secretary, offered his services as 'stake holder', and then proceeded to fortify himself for the ordeal by eating four pieces of apple pie 'a la mud,' claiming that he was only demonstrating his recent training as a 'table finisher.' 'Little Watsie,' commenting on Mr. White's (he of resolution fame) capacity, said that one might just as well try to fatten a planing mill by running oats through it, as to fatten K. B. by feeding him. We feel sure all in attendance at the convention greatly appreciate this added feature of the foot-race, and we hope that there will be a large attendance on the corner of Clark and Randolph streets at 6 p. m. to witness this race, and to give the boys a good send-off. There will be plenty of time to attend the banquet, as the contestants claim that they both can return in two hours. We also want to take this opportunity of thanking the Chicago seedsmen for the opportunity of demonstrating K. B.'s

The convention, on motion, then adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Oriental Farm Labor Resolution.

Proposed by Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., and unanimously adopted by the American Seed Trade Association in convention at Chicago, June 19, 1918.

To the Secretary of Agriculture and to the Food Administrator of the United States:

We, the members of the American Seed Trade Association, at our thirty-fifth annual convention, held one year ago, unanimously pledged to the government our support of all reasonable measures designed to prosecute the war with the utmost vigor. Especially did we undertake to carry on, as best we could, the business of producing and distributing seeds to our allies and among the people of the United States. In this undertaking we have been greatly aided by the department of agriculture and by the food administration.

Now, therefore, at our thirty-sixth annual convention we desire formally to express our appreciation of the government's attitude toward us, and to commend specifically the conduct both of the Grain Corporation and of the Department of Agriculture Inter-Bureau Committee on Seed Stocks. These committees, we believe, have been uniformly just and wise in the exercise of the very great power delegated to them to regulate the growing and marketing of seeds.

We believe that, with one great exception, everything that is humanly both possible and practicable is now being done to make America produce seeds in quantity to make up for the deficiency in the European supply. The one obstacle, as yet unsurmounted, is to secure an adequate supply of farm labor in seed growing areas. The remedy for this difficulty appears to lie in the adoption, by our government, of the wise policy, followed so successfully in France and England, of borrowing laborers for the period of the war from our allies in Asia.

We submit that this may be done without injury to any American and with benefit to all. It is not a question now of producing cheaply or dearly—it is a question of producing or not producing the seeds which the world demands.

We would not venture to intrude upon your opinion on the general question of immigration, but we invite your consideration of this subject as being free from all possibility of effect, good or bad of the permanent admission of Oriental labor.

Will not the government of the United States, recognizing a new condition, and subordinating every minor consideration, aid all of its citizens, and all of its allies, by permitting help to be secured?

Thursday's Proceedings.

The closing session, Thursday morning, after the banquet of the evening previous, found the members ready to dispose of the final business, including election of officers. The membership committee, J. C. Robinson, chairman, made its final report, and the following new members were unanimously elected: McVay Seed & Floral Co., Birmingham, Ala.; Phoenix Seed & Feed Co., Phoenix, Ariz.; Fredonia Seed Co., Fredonia, N. Y., and Botzum Bros. Co., Akron, O.

There having been manifested throughout the country a decided antipathy to names smacking of German, on motion, a special committee of five was authorized to look into the matter during the coming year and deal properly with it, the committee to be named by the incoming president. There was no doubt whatever of the temper of the convention in this regard that all names that are German or Pro-German were to be tabooed.

J. T. Moreland stated, that being located at Norfolk, Va., he stood ready and willing, and was very desirous to entertain sons of members who might, either in the army or navy, come to that city or be passing through there and he certainly would make them feel at home if they will only make themselves known, or if their relatives will advise him to hunt them up. On motion of G. J. Carpenter it was voted that a service flag indicating the representation in the service of sons of members be procured and kept at headquarters in order that this permanent record of honor be maintained. M. F. Jobs offered to do at Columbus, O., for the sons of members in the service what J. T. Moreland had agreed to do at Norfolk, through his son stationed there, Corporal A. D. Jobs.

Dr. W. W. Tracy, Washington, D. C.

Elected Honorary Member of the American Seed Trade Association at the Thirty-Sixth Annual Convention, Chicago, June 18-20, 1918.

On motion of Dick O'Bannon, it was voted that although the association is international so far as Canada is concerned, yet as the majority of the members are on this side of the border, it was but right that a special vote of recognition of our Canadian membership be unanimously adopted at this time and the warmest welcome extended to Canadian members present as representing our allies in the great cause of liberty and democracy.

On motion of G. J. Carpenter, the association went on record as unanimously in favor of trade acceptances as a means of facilitating collections and making stronger the financial situation of the country at large.

It appearing that there is a growing movement toward the formation of sectional and state seedsmen's organizations, the question as to the best manner of providing a method for their affiliation with the national organization was referred to the executive committee, with special reference at this time to the application by the Texas seedsmen for representation.

Unfair Practices Condemned.

On motion of George S. Green, the following was adopted:

Resolved: That in line with the purposes of the American Seed Trade Association as expressed in its constitution, we now express our strong condemnation of all unfair business practices, including the use of firm names, trade-marks, or brands, so similar to those of established firms as to possibly mislead buyers as to identity of business connections, products, or merchandise. We believe that any firm making use of such unfair practices should not be eligible for admission to or continued membership in our organization.

Watson S. Woodruff, having undertaken voluntarily to make a census of sons of members in service, gave some interesting details which were received with enthusiasm and increased the general patriotic feeling noted throughout the entire convention. He made a feeling reference to the death in service of Henry F. Michel April 7, 1918, who was drowned in French waters. As further carrying out the spirit of the war service committee, as indicated by their report, Mr. Woodruff moved the adoption of the following resolution, which went through by a unanimous and rising vote:

Resolved: That the American Seed Trade Association in thirty-sixth annual convention, assembled at Chicago, June 18-20, 1918, representing as we do the producers and distributors of the vastly greater portion of seed grown in the United States, realizing the urgent and extraordinary need existing for tremendously increased production of seeds on account of the devastation wrought by the war in the principal European producing centers, and the almost prostrated condition of transportation, preventing distribution; and further, realizing fully the profound obligation thrown upon us, do hereby renew to the President of the United States and to the Secretary of Agriculture our pledge of our entire resources to win the war, and to so increase our efforts in producing crops that we may stay the dread scourge of famine, and we pledge to this end, unreservedly, our money, our lands and ourselves.

J. C. Vaughan of Chicago, an ex-president of the association, made a strong plea for more thorough consecration of every ounce of talent, time, means and energy to the winning of the war, and that the entire membership "carry on" in stronger and more efficient way if possible than they had even heretofore done; that they be ready to endure hardships and sacrifices with patience and fortitude. He called on Kirby B. White to add his eloquence to this plea. Mr. White said that he did not know of a single slacker in the association's ranks. He continued that while the A. S. T. A. is an organization most far-reaching in the spread of its influence and power, yet it is not of so much moment to the United States government, what we do in this regard as it is to ourselves. What we do along patriotic lines makes a great deal of difference to us, whether we are on the right side or not. He urged that the convention adopt the resolution of Mr. Woodruff.

Officers Re-Elected.

The election of officers resulted in the retention of the present officers as follows: Frank W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., president; W. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., first vice-president; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., second vice-president; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., secretary-treasurer and Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass., counsel. The executive and membership committees were also continued as before.

During the nominations for officers Vice-President Scarlett paid high tribute to the work done by President Bolgiano, in which he was joined by J. L. Hunt, chairman of the war service committee. Mr. Scarlett declared that Frank Bolgiano was the man without question who was peculiarly adapted to represent the association as its chief executive at the national capital, and but for his suavity and tact and readiness to come at the call of the federal officials at any time to furnish needed information, many things might have been different during the past critical year, as Mr. Bolgiano had been able to clear up and often prevent serious misunderstandings as to the status of the seed trade with the government, and was a man in whom they placed full confidence and to whose opinion they listened with respect. On motion of Chas. Dickinson the vote to re-elect Mr. Bolgiano was taken by rising and was unanimous, with great applause. Chas. Boyles also added his testimony to the efficient work of Mr. Bolgiano, having had occasion to be often brought in contact with it during the year on his visits to Washington. At the suggestion of President Bolgiano, Dr. W. W. Tracy, of the United States department of agriculture, was made an honorary member of the association by unanimous vote, the audience rising and applauding vigorously.

Amendment to Constitution Proposed.

Upon the suggestion of J. C. Robinson notice was given of a proposed amendment to the constitution to permit of the membership committee being increased to five members in order that it might embrace in its personnel, representatives from every section of the country, broadly speaking. In the meantime pending such an amendment, a motion was adopted authorizing the president to name two additional consulting members on the membership committee, so as to reach the desired result at once. On motion of Chas. Dickinson a substantial increase was voted in the salary of the secretary-treasurer more in keeping with the dignity and importance of the association and in consideration of the increased amount of work in this office. Invitations to hold the next convention were received from Toledo, San Francisco, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago.

Communications were read by the secretary from the National Federation of Shippers, asking the association to affiliate with that organization; from the Farm Journal, urging advertising to resist commercial aggression from unwelcome foreign sources, and to eliminate unfair competitors among domestic firms, etc.; from Acting Secretary Carl Vrooman of the department of agriculture advising, that for reasons enumerated, instructions have been issued to the seed testing laboratory of the Bureau of Plant Industry to make tests of samples of seed subject to the seed importation act, and intended for export to this country when submitted by Canadian seed dealers. This action was taken by reason of a resolution adopted by the association at its Detroit convention, and is an echo of the good work done there last year under the administration of President Kirby B. White. Also a letter from Henry F. Michell Co., urging the importance of a uniform package of seed potatoes. This matter brought out some discussion, but nothing definite was decided upon.

Nomenclature Resolution.

To make more definite the action taken at an earlier stage of the convention proceedings, regarding the matter of nomenclature, the following resolution proposed by Secretary Kendel was unanimously adopted:

Whereas: There is great confusion in the multiplicity and character of names of vegetable seeds on sale in the United States, and it seems advisable to revise and reduce the list of such seeds, now therefore, be it

Resolved: That we seek the co-operation of the United States department of agriculture by having a man assigned to the task of studying and classifying vegetable nomenclature, who should co-operate with the vegetable growing interests of the several states, when such a man is available.

Convention Notes.

T. H. Hopkins, manager of the St. Anthony, Ida., branch of the John H. Allan Seed Co., when asked about the condition of the pea crops in the Idaho district, answered that it was too early as yet to make any reports. He left for home the closing day of the convention with the intention of stopping off at the firm's headquarters at Sheboygan, Wis., for a brief visit.

The suggestion was made that a special report should be secured for the Membership Committee, with the name of each new candidate, indicating the business methods of the applicant. Is he careful in his handling of critical stocks? Are his stock books and testing habits such as not to bring our profession into disrepute?

The Stecher Lithographing Co., Rochester, N. Y., distributed a package of post cards to all the members. The J. Chas. McCullough Seed Co., Cincinnati, O. and the O'Bannon Co., Claremore, Okla., furnished the pencils, and the Huntley Manufacturing Co., Silver Creek, N. Y., the holders.

E. J. Walker, Jr., of the Walker Bin Co., Penn Yan, N. Y., booked several nice orders at his convention exhibit room. Frank J. Rioux, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, western agents for this firm, assisted him as did F. W. Hull, southern sales manager.

Censoring the unpopular names of both vegetable and flower seeds was placed in the hands of a dependable committee whose report should be forthcoming soon to avoid use of undesirable names on seed bags now being printed.

This, the thirty-sixth annual gathering of the American Seed Trade Association, was undoubtedly the largest and included the widest range of attendance, showing strong desire on the part of seedsmen generally to become members.

The Late Max Wilhelm.
(See Obituary Page 1155.)

The problem of financing the harvesting, and payments to farmers of growing crops to be taken in this fall, is a serious one. Many who are already carrying heavy inventory values, feel they have a hard problem to work out.

The Illinois Seed Co., Chicago, presented a handsome leather bound combination card case and writing pad to all the visitors at its convention headquarters. It was greatly prized by everyone and over 400 were distributed.

Ed. Goldenstein, formerly manager of the bulb department at Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, who is now with the national army at Camp Grant, Rockford, visited the convention headquarters the closing day.

The War Committee was continued and effusively thanked for its strenuous efforts and diplomatic effectiveness in many crises. The trade will be grateful for equally careful sailing another season.

Charles D. Ross, of the Ross Seed Co., Louisville, Ky., one of the strapping young seedsmen at the convention, said he expected to enlist with the navy in the near future.

Following adjournment, it seemed to be the desire of many to hold the next convention in Chicago, no city being more generally convenient to the whole membership.

That Nestor of the vegetable seed division, Dr. W. W. Tracy, was by a unanimous rising vote made an honorary member of the association.

There were many expressions of regret and sympathy on receipt of the news of the death of Max Wilhelm, Thursday forenoon.

Those kindly, genial and red-blooded spirits, Northrup, Rice, May, Burpee, and Maule, were absent but not forgotten.

Onion set and theater parties, mari-gold, rainbow and other smaller entertainments were in order and enjoyed.

Captain Ferry, of the Quartermaster's Department, U. S. A., stationed at Chicago, was a dinner guest.

John C. Bodger says the oil prospectors are offering attractive rentals for some of his firm's land.

Scottish members were smiling over the big oat crop prospects, winter porridge in sight.

Grain bags in car lots were in good demand, around 60 cents, and in very short supply.

Frosts of Midsummer.

On the nights of June 19-20, frost worked havoc in the eastern states, from Maine to New York. From Bangor, Me., it is reported that on June 19, widespread damage was done to crops in northern Maine, and that many farmers will be obliged to replant. In Bangor and vicinity, many gardens were ruined. At Plainfield, Conn., the mercury is said to have gone as low as 26, and that beans, corn and vine crops are completely ruined. Young peaches, apples and pears cover the ground in some orchards. Heavy frost is also reported from Vermont.

Frost in Indiana June 23, the latest date on which a "killing" frost has occurred in that state in the history of the local weather bureau at Indianapolis, caused damage to the corn crop which private estimates place at several million dollars. At Laporte much damage to corn was reported, while at Napanee onions were hurt considerably.

From Grand Rapids, Mich., it is reported that in some sections peas were not hurt, while beans were badly damaged. Some crops are a total loss, others but slightly touched.

Holland Conditions.

Passengers arriving on the Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam recently said that conditions in Holland had gone from bad to worse. The ration of bread was still four small slices a day, but now the quality was inferior. No meat was to be had and very few eggs. If Germany attacked the country, they said it would be no use for Holland to try and fight her because the cities like Amsterdam or The Hague would be shelled or bombed in a few hours.

French Bulbs.

Paris concerns that have formerly exported French bulbs will not operate in them this year.

French growers say English seed houses have accepted their advanced prices and placed orders.

Import License Regulation.

In making application for import license, the paragraph number in the tariff regulation act under which the stock is classified, viz., Flower bulbs No. 210, should be stated.

SHALL the fall catalogue include fall bulbs, and at what prices is still the debatable question.

J. B. AGNEW was at Skagway, Alaska, June 12, and expected to see the mid-night sun on the 20th.

ALASKA PEAS, some 400 acres in the west, are reported to have been completely destroyed by hail.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade June 26 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.00 per 100 pounds.

CAMBRIDGE, N. Y.—Mr. and Mrs. Jerome B. Rice, Jr., announce the marriage of their sister, Miss Marguerite Hodges Rice, to Dr. Harry Lambert Collins, June 22.

LIBERAL acreages of seed crops are coming along in many parts of the country. No doubt the independent uncontracted seed crops planted this spring exceed those of any former year, but it is a long way yet to the stock room.

THE Holland-America line, New York office, says: "No one knows whether there will be any steamers in the bulb trade this fall, that depending wholly on Germany granting immunity from sinking." The company has no sailing schedule now. The Nieuw Amsterdam came over recently in ballast and is now taking on a cargo of flour, but the officials here do not know whether she will return shortly.

MICHIGAN BEANS, according to A. J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, have been badly damaged by frost in some sections, some crops total loss. Corn, potatoes, tomatoes and all like vegetation similarly hurt. It will be necessary to replant on a large scale where stock is available.

ONION growers of the Sacramento Valley were scared when the thermometers registered 104 degrees June 20. Fortunately there was a tempering breeze from the south and the temperature fell to 92 degrees the following day. Had the scorching north wind prevailed, the results to the onion seed crop might have been serious.

Seed Potato Experiments.

Seed obtained from northern Maine germinated two weeks earlier than seed grown in Virginia the previous fall, although eventually a slightly better stand was obtained from the home-grown seed, according to Bulletin 24 of the Virginia truck experiment station, Norfolk. Cut seed germinated more quickly than did tubers planted whole. Seed grown in Virginia the previous spring failed to give a satisfactory stand. Maine seed outyielded the fall home-grown seed in every instance at the first harvest; at the second harvest the two classes were nearly equal, while at the third harvest the home-grown seed heavily outyielded the Maine seed, indicating that fall home-grown seed will generally prove satisfactory if the crop can be left in the ground until it approaches maturity. In tests at Tasley with fall home-grown seed, the largest yield was obtained from the 1.8-ounce tubers planted whole, larger tubers appearing to give a diminishing return when planted whole. It was found that plants from whole seed had more stalks than did plants from cut seed, especially in the case of Maine seed; also, that the number of stalks increased with the size of the seed piece. In the test of 29 varieties of supposedly early potatoes only four varieties yielded more than their check of Irish Cobbler at the first harvest. Of these only one, Eureka, gave higher yields than the Irish Cobbler at the later diggings, but several other varieties gave slightly better yields at the fourth digging. While these results are for one season only, 1916, they indicate the superiority of the Irish Cobbler for extra-early and early crop purposes, both in point of yield and in the small proportion of culls.

Kansas City.

OUTDOOR STOCK IN HEAVY SUPPLY.

Market conditions fail to show much improvement with an exceptionally large supply of outdoor stock in evidence, but which works in very well in funeral work, especially in magnolia wreaths. Carnations are very poor with the exception of a few that are being received from Colorado. Roses are not up to standard, being short of stem and small flowers. Lillies are plentiful and enjoy a good call. The usual run of June weddings was not in evidence this year. The reports from the wholesalers indicate that business and supply are fair, about all that can be expected with the present hot weather. Nearly all of the greenhouses are cleaned out and are being made ready for next fall and winter. Storing away the supply of coal is also no small item in the routine.

NOTES.

The Amateur Flower Gardeners' Association held a very interesting exhibition at the Hotel Muehlebach, June 8, at which there were more than 70 awards in 29 classes. One of the most novel features was a trench map of the present war, arranged with blue delphiniums by Browning Fellers and wife, which was awarded a silver cup as a special prize.

The stork paid another visit to the home of H. Kusik and brought a fine baby boy last week. This is the second son.

E. J. B.

Waterbury, Conn.

NOTES.

Facetious persons have remarked that a typical New Yorker never expressed surprise at anything he saw outside of that great city, taking it for granted that everything in New York was superior to anything that could possibly be seen outside of it. The writer is not, and does not claim to be, a typical New Yorker, even though he lives there most of the time; therefore, no ancient custom was violated when he was surprised at the size and business activity of Waterbury. We have no official figures, but it is safe to say that the population is considerably over 100,000, there having been a great addition within the past two years. The hum of industry is everywhere audible, and we noticed more new buildings under construction than in any other place we have visited since our country entered the war. Briefly stated, they are so busy at Waterbury that we doubt if they make any more of the celebrated watches—being a patriotic people, in this great war they know the value of time, so it takes too long to wind a Waterbury watch. In common with the rest of the population, the florists are prosperous and we found them busy. The working people are making good wages and are not slow to spend part of it for flowers.

Alexander Dallas has been a florist here for 40 years, and has built up a fine business, which is now incorporated. We visited their range, on the Meriden road, and had an agreeable talk with Manager Patterson. They grow a great variety of stock, the roses being at present most noteworthy. Good stock of Killarney, My Maryland and other varieties were noticed. They have a fine store in the city, which Mr. Dallas personally superintends.

To western folks, who, it is said, have been suffering from hot weather, it may seem an exaggeration to state that this part of the country is suffering from cold. This refers particularly to tender stock that has been planted out. At Hartford, on the night of June 20 and the following morning, it was cold enough for steam heat and overcoats. Following that night there was a torrent of cold rain.

Albert S. Nodine has a neat range on the Meriden road and an attractive store at 134 South Main street.

GERMANTOWN, PA.—The arrival of a son weighing seven and one-half pounds at the home of E. B. Estabrook and wife, was announced June 18. Mrs. Estabrook was Miss Dorothy Perkins, daughter of George C. Perkins, of Newark, N. Y., and for whom the well-known and popular rose was named.

Rose Los Angeles Bagatelle Winner.

According to cable advices to the New York Times, the well known American rose, Los Angeles, has been awarded the gold medal this year in the famous French trials at Bagatelle. The rose was exhibited by Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, Calif., with whom it originated, a cross of Mme. Segond Weber and Lyon.

Rose Persian Yellow.

This rose is just opening its flowerbuds. It is the last of the yellow-flowered roses which are hardy in the Arboretum and a few days later than the Harrison rose. Rose Persian Yellow is a dwarfier plant of better habit than the Harrison rose, and the flowers are larger and of better color; and when it succeeds it is the handsomest of the double-flowered yellow roses. It is a form of Rosa foetida, a beautiful and too little known rose of southern Russia, the Caucasus and Persia. The so-called Austrian briar, with petals yellow on the outer surface and dark copper color on the inner surface, is believed to be a variety of R. foetida (var. bicolor). The Harrison rose, which was raised in New York many years ago, is believed to be a hybrid between the Scotch rose and the Austrian briar; it is very hardy, flowers freely every year and grows to a large size. Unless, however, it is cut back occasionally it becomes straggling in habit and unsightly. The yellow-flowered forms of the Scotch rose, R. spinosissima, var. hispida and var. luteola, have been flowering well this year; they are handsome and hardy plants, and although the flowers soon drop their petals they are well worth a place in collections of single-flowered roses. R. spinosissima fulgida with single delicate pink flowers is another variety of the Scotch rose which has been covered with flowers during the past week.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, June 5, 1918.

American Association of Nurserymen.

THE OPENING SESSION.

As we go to press, the forty-third annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen is in session at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, the meeting opening June 26 and continuing three days. The programme promises to be an exceptionally interesting one, and the attendance at the opening session was large and representative.

The president of the association, Major Lloyd C. Stark, being now in France, the meeting was presided over by the Vice-President, J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, Texas. A message from Major Stark was read, in which he urged nurserymen to grow crops of wheat and other grains to the greatest possible extent. Chicago extended a welcome to the nurserymen through Mr. Graw of the Association of Commerce and response was made by James Pitkin. Reports of the following committees were read: Arboretum, J. Edward Moon; Distribution and Directory, M. R. Cashman; French Relief, F. L. Atkins, who reported that an unused fund was on hand in Paris for the replacing of trees when there was no further danger of destruction. A lively discussion ensued after an address by Dr. E. C. Stakman, St. Paul, Minn., chairman barberry eradication committee. United States department of agriculture. At the close of the discussion, J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, Ia., presented the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

In view of the information given us by the pathologists regarding the dissemination of black rust, I move that it be the sense of this association that the propagation and dissemination of Barberry vulgaris and purpurea be discontinued, and we appeal to all loyal and patriotic members of this organization to support us in this position.

About 300 members were present at the opening session.

The programme for the Wednesday afternoon session, as announced, includes the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" at the opening, followed by the report of Secretary-Counsel Curtis Nye Smith, and in turn by L. D. H. Weld, of the commercial research department of Swift & Co., Chicago, who will deliver an address on "Marketing Methods." A resolution and amendment to the constitution is scheduled to occupy the balance of the session. The programme for the evening includes a meeting of the state vice-presidents at 7:30 o'clock, followed an hour later by a reception and "get-acquainted" banquet.

PROGRAMME OF THE FOLLOWING DAYS.

The programme announced for Thursday includes the report of the temporary committee on market development which will be followed by a full discussion. The publicity committee, F. L. Atkins, chairman, will also make its report. The booklet, "Home Grounds," will be discussed from the publisher's viewpoint by J. Horace McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa., and from the user's viewpoint by O. Joe Howard, Pomona, N. C. There will also be a paper by Alvin E. Nelson, of Chicago, on "Costs, Profits and Income Tax," followed by a discussion led by Arthur H. Hill and Guy A. Bryant. The morning session will conclude with the reports of state vice presidents and the election of officers. At the afternoon session, the announcement calls for an address on "Coal Conservation," by Osborn Monnet, of the United States fuel administration, and four-minute talks on "War Times and the Nursery Business" by E. C. Hilborn, North Dakota; W. H. Wyman, Massachusetts; R. D. Underwood, Minnesota, and J. R. Mayhew, Texas. In the evening there will be meetings of the American Nurserymen's Protective Association and the Retail Nurserymen's Protective Association.

At the Friday morning session, the features announced are papers by E. P. Bernardin, Parsons, Kan., on "Standardizing the Bunching of Nursery Stock" and by E. H. Hill, York, Neb., on "The Retail Salesman." Following the final report of committees, resolutions and unfinished business, the convention will adjourn.

The entertainment committee has arranged for a luncheon to the ladies in the Narcissus room at Marshall Field & Co.'s, a visit to the Art Institute, a trip to Great Lakes naval training school, a theater party and visits to several points of interest in the city and vicinity.

MAJOR STARK PRESENTED WITH SWORD.

A handsome officer's sword and silver-mounted scabbard, with appropriate inscription engraved on the blade, has been presented to Major Lloyd C. Stark, past-president of the American Association of Nurserymen. The presentation was made by William Pitkin, E. S. Welsh and John Watson as a committee.

Nurserymen's Market Development.

A well attended meeting of the trade interested in the market development campaign which had its inception last January, when a canvass was made to ascertain what financial support might be expected in a national plan to develop the market for nursery products and encourage their more general use, was held at the Hotel Sherman, on the afternoon of June 25. It was suggested that the management of the campaign be vested in 16 directors, eight chosen at large and the selection of an equal number chosen, to be in the hands of subscribers to the fund for publicity purposes, thus assuring adequate representation to all parts of the country. The fund subscribed to June 1 amounted to about $15,000 per annum, representing 126 firms, as shown in the following list, which will no doubt be generously increased during the convention, as it is believed this will be the most profitable investment that can be made, as there is no line of business in which co-operation is so absolutely necessary:

Publicity Banquet Helps Co-Operation.

Just a few days ago we were favored in Boston by a visit from Secretary John Young, of the Society of American Florists in behalf of the publicity campaign. A dinner was given at the Boston City Club, whereupon Major O'Keefe brought together about a score of florists in all branches of the business for a heart to heart talk on the value of publicity on which Secretary Young also gave his views and experiences which were much appreciated, after which everyone was called upon in rotation, and views and opinions on the question were given with intense interest. Regardless of the motive of the meeting, these get-together talks help the craft, and the ideas freely exchanged cement the members so that each one feels the necessity of a spirit of co-operation, and those present that evening will spread the value of publicity broadcast among members of the craft so that its result will be felt later on. Everybody left the dinner with the knowledge that they had a better understanding of the publicity campaign and its purpose.

Let every city and town take up the subject of publicity as an auxiliary to the sale of flowers and you will have a most interesting as well as instructive topic for an evening. Get back of this publicity movement so that the interest is aroused to its proper height, and then we will roll our fund to its proper proportion, and you as well as all connected with flowers will be the benefactors so that you can continue with 100 per cent efficiency on a 50 per cent coal consumption. It is up to each and everyone to do his share.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

A rose show was held in conjunction with the monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., June 19. Among the prize-winners were the following: James McCarthy, Frank Watson, Thomas Scott, Thomas Twigg, William Milstead, William Noonan, Louis Hubbard, Joe Mastroianni, and Frank Petroccia. The judges for the occasion were A. MacKenzie, B. Sutherland and William Churchill.

There was a large attendance at the meeting and six new members were elected: J. H. Frampton, F. Gregg, H. Seers, William S. Gilles, T. Barnett and A. Sutherland. At the conclusion of the session and exhibition the flowers that were on show were donated to the base hospital at Mineola. The shows have proven so popular with the society that it has been decided to hold a vegetable night at the next meeting, which will be held July 10.

GOOD BUSINESS CONTINUES.

Trade during the past week has been good, with floral work plentiful and cut flowers moving briskly. Stock is plentiful. Carnations, while they are small, sell fairly well, and there have been some extra good crops of roses cut during the past week. Sweet peas are poor, and the first gladioli made their appearance the first of the week; they are not very good, except for early display purposes. Weddings continue briskly.

NOTE.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society held its spring and summer show at the Narragansett hotel ballroom last week. It was a success in every way, and was well attended. Several of the retailers had displays and took several of the prizes. T. J. Johnston & Co. and the Westminster Greenhouses took the leading prizes. Strawberries and other seasonable fruits were displayed by both professional and amateur growers.

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION.

President Totty of the Society of American Florists Offers Liberty Bonds in Membership Increase Contest. Large Attendance Urged August 20-22.

The President's Letter.

The convention of the Society of American Florists is rapidly drawing near, and it has been suggested to me that on account of the troubled conditions as well as the increased railroad rates, the attendance will be small from the eastern states. This may be so—and yet in view of the importance of the convention this year, I shall regret it if we do not have a large attendance. Every florist who reads the trade papers must realize the society has had a very busy season in his interest. Our Washington representative, Wm. F. Gude, in particular, has had to spend practically all of his time between the coal question, the cutting off of imports and other momentous problems. Under these circumstances, it is not fair for Mr. Florist to stay at home and let the faithful "few" bear the brunt of the battle all of the time.

It has been suggested that florists and gardeners' clubs, combine their interests and send two or more delegates to the convention. This, I am not in favor of, unless it is shown, that failing this, some particular section will not be represented at all. In an organization such as ours, every member has an equal voice and vote on the floor, and should, if possible, go to the convention to exercise it, but let every section be represented by delegates if no other way seems available.

The society has done, and is doing, a great work for the florists, in Washington, and through the publicity campaign at this time. What other organization has ever inaugurated a publicity campaign and secured the publicity we have received through the splendid work of our committee for the small amount of money invested. It behooves every florist in the country, if he has a spark of pride in his business and makeup, to at least become a member of the society, and yet, strange to say, there are many men who are not on our membership roll. This should be remedied as soon as possible.

When our representative in Washington speaks, he should know that the florists all over the country are back of him, and that he is speaking in their behalf. Considering the membership fee is only $5, and annual dues $3, it is a disgrace to the profession that we cannot treble our membership. With this idea in mind of bringing home to the florists the benefits of co-operation, and the helpfulness of this organization to every individual florist, I want to announce a competition open to all members of the S. A. F., with the exception of the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer: To the member bringing in the largest number of new members for the year 1918, up to midnight of August 20, the evening of the first day of the convention, I will give a $100 Liberty Bond, and to the member bringing in the next largest number of new members, a $50 Liberty Bond.

One man wrote me that he was glad to belong to the society, but always felt it was an exclusive affair, and only open to a favored few. Once and for all, let everyone dispense with this idea and give a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together, so that our organization will have attained the status to which its importance entitles it.

CHARLES H. TOTTY, Pres.

From Secretary Young.

Judging from the reports received from many parts of the country, a more than ordinary interest attaches to the preparations now in progress for the thirty-fourth annual convention of the society, which is to be held in St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22. Quite a number already have reserved space in the trade exhibition, and it is fully expected that this feature of the convention will be as complete as ever. The geographical position of St. Louis makes the city an ideal choice for convention purposes; in fact, it is the hub of a very extended circle of trade area. Moolah Temple, where the convention is to be held, is a most desirable building for the great service expected of it by the society. The facilities for a handsome staging of the trade exhibition are all that could be wished, and, as the official plan shows, there will be no necessity for crowding, aisle room being a plenty.

Vice-President Bourdet and the secretary are now working on the official programme, which will go out to members about 30 days prior to the convention. The subject matter of this schedule of events will this year be of a most important character. Considerable time will be set apart for discussion of the reports of the publicity committee and the finance publicity committee; indeed the whole question of publicity for flowers will be gone into at length, and one or two notable publicity experts will, it is expected, present their views and comments upon the work of the society so far accomplished. The coal situation, too, will be discussed from all standpoints and much information will be evolved from a full and complete presentation of conditions as they are affecting our members in different sections. It is expected that a gentleman competent to speak with authority on fuel matters will be present, and that there will be much enlightenment upon details which at the present time are vexing to say the least.

The secretary reports a large influx of members from various sections; in fact, never before was experienced such a flocking to the standard of the society. The good work which the organization has successfully carried out, and the secretary's personal efforts are, of course, responsible in great measure for this. In order to stimulate effort on the part of our state vice-presidents and others to bring more florists into the membership fold, President Totty is offering a $100 Liberty Bond to the member who presents the greatest number of applications for membership up to midnight of August 20, and a $50 Liberty Bond to the member who presents the next largest number. This very generous offer should be an inducement to many to get busy, for not only have they the power of their own persuasion, but they can point to the most excellent work of the society looking to the betterment of conditions among the whole trade.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Aquatics Furnish Potash.

Announcement is made that the potash shortage will, before long, be relieved, at least to a large degree. For some time the abundance of water plants and sea growth in the Panama canal has been a hindrance to shipping. Recent analysis has shown that this supposed useless matter contains from four to six per cent of pure potash. It is proposed to construct industrial plants in the canal zone which will put forth a substantial yield of potash and at the same time clear the canal of its present nuisance. Another nail in the German potash bonanza.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

A supply of fibre pot saucers in all sizes should be on hand at all seasons. They are especially useful in the store, as it is impossible to care for plants properly without the pots are in saucers to catch the overflow. They also add considerably to the life of the blooming stock, such as spireas, hydrangeas, etc., which, when in full flower, require a lot of water. With the saucer it is possible to provide more than the pot will hold, which is taken up by the plant later.

Workroom Efficiency.

Things that are done in an orderly, thoughtful manner, move along progressively; there is no going back and doing over. The job, whatever it may be, is started right with the various materials and the necessary tools at hand, ready to proceed and continue until the work is finished. Some men can turn out a great deal more work in a given period than others, and at the same time do it with less effort or loss of energy.

Lieut. Walter C. Blackman, U. S. N. A.

Son of George Blackman of the Wm. Blackman Floral Co., Evansville, Ind.

The simplest form of flower arrangement is the cluster or spray. This, with many operators, is a laborious task, particularly when the bunch attains any size. Flowers are added one at a time, each getting two, three or more wraps of thread or string to hold it in place, the bunch being held at arm's length and swung round and round as the wrapping goes on. If any stemming is necessary, it is done one flower at a time, and then tied in. The quick worker selects his flowers and if any need stemming, it is all done before the arranging. Then he starts his spray, getting as many flowers together as he can hold before using the string or wire bobbin, which latter is best, particularly with large clusters. Flowers are added, not one, but two, three or four at a time, fastened with one or not more than two laps of the wire or string, the bunch lying on the work bench or table and the handle or stem end lifted to allow the spool to pass under. By these methods there is no lost motion, no unnecessary handling of flowers, and the work is finished in half the time.

Workrooms should be well equipped with all the necessary stock and appliances, the proper sizes of wire and handy receptacles in which to keep it, tooth picks and stemming sticks, wired and plain tooth picks, shears, light and heavy, knives and sprinklers always at hand. The good workman is known by the condition of his table or bench. Some will not work for 10 minutes, before the space before them is so cluttered up with leaves, stems, cut wire, ends of sticks, etc., that they cannot find their knife or shears. Much valuable time is lost by the careless employee in looking for all sorts of workroom articles that ought to be always at hand. The sprinkler has a way of getting downstairs to the mossing table, also the shears; nobody saw them go, but they are finally found there after a fruitless search in the shop. At times, they disappear altogether, or only make their appearance mysteriously when a new set has been purchased.

The time that could be saved in the manipulation of flowers in preparing, stemming and making up, by using efficient methods, cutting out lost motions, etc., would mean a great saving in the course of a year, and prove most valuable on busy days when every moment counts.

A good supply of various sizes of wire should be on hand at all times, so as not to have to stop and cut it on busy days. This should be kept in flat trays or in jars on end, whichever is found most convenient for use. To have it laying loose on the table, where it gets mixed up with the refuse, leaves and stems, means loss of time in picking it up, and waste, as much of it is swept on the floor with the rubbish from the table. Both the wire or stemming sticks and flowers should be so conveniently placed that they can be picked up at once, with each hand.

It appears natural to some to work quickly; short cuts come to them without effort. A long wire is used, when one, half the length, requiring but half the time to wind, is sufficient. One winds the wire round and round, while another turns the pick or stemming stick with the thumb and forefinger and binds the wire in half the time. The various motions in this work should all be studied out so as to learn to use and adopt the most efficient methods.

Economic use of string or wire and tinfoil in mossing frames should be kept in mind and enforced at all times. Light wire bobbins are best for this work. Beginners should be shown the best way to do this, and the importance of its being well done, as a poor and loosely mossed frame is an abomination.

Careless men will turn the lid of a cut flower box face down on a wet or damp counter, set the empty box on it, and proceed to put up the order. It should always be placed on the edges with the top up, on which the empty box can be rested while being filled. After sprinkling, which is often too heavy, the box should be turned over, so that all surplus water runs off. These are just a few of the many every-day happenings of the flower shop that can be corrected and make for greater efficiency.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY SHOW, PHILADELPHIA, PA., JUNE 25-26, 1918.

W. Atlee Burpee Co.'s Display.

American Sweet Pea Society.

The tenth annual exhibition and convention held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 25-26, a synopsis of which was given in last week's issue, pages 1149-1150, although entirely local, was very creditable and inspiring, alike to the trade and amateur lovers of flowers, who greatly enjoyed the display. The exhibition was given in conjunction with that of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, whose schedule called for exhibits of perennial and other outdoor flowers, as well as sweet peas.

Prizes were offered by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., H. F. Michell Co., Hosea Waterer and the W. Atlee Burpee Co. The exhibits were all of high grade, the sweet peas particularly, although all from outdoors, being much better than the stock offered commercially in the market at this time. George Annand, gardener for Mrs. S. D. Riddle, of Glen Riddle, Pa., staged some very fine flowers which had been grown on vines from seed sown in early March inside and planted out the middle of April. Many of the sprays carried four large flowers. To get such fine blooms, it had been necessary to disbud.

The W. Atlee Burpee Co.'s display, always the feature of the society's annual show, was perhaps the best they have ever made. President G. W. Kerr, who is their sweet pea expert, is a past master in the arrangement of cut flowers for exhibition, particularly sweet peas, which comparatively short stemmed flowers are under his manipulation, worked up into wonderful decorative effects. It would seem that this feature of presenting all exhibits so as to get the best decorative effects, should receive serious consideration by the committee of arrangements at all flower shows. Robert Abernathy, gardener to Mrs. W. D. Ellis, Bryn Mawr, improved his vases immensely by the addition of separate leaves from the vines. This is such an improvement that it should almost be made compulsory.

Milk bottles are all right when found on the doorstep in the early morning, and their contents particularly satisfying, but as vases in which to display flowers, they are distinctly lacking in artistic lines. The Pennsylvania Horticultural society, now that it has come into its own, should provide for its exhibitors the best standard and most suitable vases that are obtainable. The greatest attention should be given to arrangement and decoration of the various tables or spaces selected for the different exhibits, so as to make an appropriate setting, and in this way greatly enhance the artistic appearance of the show.

The holding of the exhibition on the second floor of a department store was an innovation. Greek Hall, in which the show was held, is a beautiful room of just the size for the display. There was rather more than the usual attendance at the society's shows. A large organ furnished music during the afternoon. The displays in the lobby, either side of the entrance, by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., and H. F. Michell Co., were attractive. These were for the most part of perennials, roses and other outdoor flowers, flanked with palms.

Winter-Flowering Sweet Pea Trials.

Paper by Professor A. C. Beal, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., read at the tenth annual meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society, Philadelphia, June 25-26, 1918.

The American Sweet Pea Society is to be congratulated upon its excellent display. In times like these, when make-believe patriots are exerting themselves to discourage all floricultural activities, your results are especially gratifying. Why such persons can see harm in growing flowers as a recreation when the theater, movies, baseball and other similar pleasures are not interfered with is indeed most mystifying. Possibly it can be explained on the ground that powerful, well organized financial groups control these latter things, and therefore they are in a position to control public opinion in their favor. The gardening interest is not thus organized and must make its appeal to the reason and judgment of the people.

War conditions are not to be considered lightly, but there is no reason for wearing sackcloth or going about in a state of perpetual gloom. The more we feel the effects of war the more we shall need some relaxation from the worries and cares of the day. For those who are weary in mind and body, for hearts that are heavily laden, what can be better than the pure air, the beauty, the overbrooding calmness and peace of a garden? The moment anyone discourages gardening he immediately advertises the fact that he does not love flowers and that he knows nothing of the joys of gardening. I am not advising the maintenance of large grounds and gardens, with their great expenditures of labor and money, but I have in mind the small home gardens which some self-styled patriots think should be given over entirely to vegetables. While it is probably true that many people who find their amusement and relaxation in the theater, the movies or baseball would be better off if they took an interest in simpler, more quiet or less obtrusive pleasures, like gardening, no real garden lover would proscribe the amusements mentioned, but would ask reciprocal consideration. Those who oppose ornamental gardening and flower shows in these times are showing themselves to be at least tintured with some of that selfishness that the world is fighting against.

Professional gardeners and florists are asking for no special consideration or immunities, and I feel sure that when the war is ended, no profession will show, in proportion to its numbers, any greater devotion to our cause. The growing of flowers in home gardens, which we all so much wish to increase in this country is not done by those of draft age, but rather by older people, who find their peaceful pleasures in growing things they love. No person is a true patriot who denies them that.

We are all in this war to back our government to the utmost of our ability, but let us realize that each day we must somehow regain strength for the tasks of tomorrow, for only in this manner can we hold to the end.

Although the people have been advised to do this, and to refrain from that, until, in the conflicting advice of many advisers, it would seem difficult to plan a course of action, it is a great satisfaction that the people have not been confused or stampeded. Calmly they have taken up the burdens of war. They have realized the need of greater food production, but in gardens everywhere some flowers bloom to cheer the toiler. The sweet pea, because of its intrinsic merits, has its deserved place in the affections of all war-gardeners. We know that, with reasonable care, it will richly reward those who look forward for the first time to gathering its glorious blossoms from their gardens. May its reward be to gather multitudes of new friends, and may it ever increase in the affections of the old. It was the lovable old bishop in "Les Misérables" who said, "The beautiful is as useful as the useful," and then, as an afterthought, remarked, "and perhaps more so."

In the foregoing, I tried to make plain my belief that the row of sweet peas in the garden has its mission and plays its part in winning the war. Let us not undervalue the beautiful influences of our lives, and especially at this time, when it would seem that we need them so much when men are searching out the eternal verities and casting aside the superficial.

Today, I come before you with only a brief report. This year we are not growing any garden varieties of sweet peas, for we discovered last year that it was impossible to secure the necessary labor to care for all our trials of flowers at Cornell University. We are only caring for the perennial plants, and must defer work with annuals until labor conditions are settled.

We grew 86 varieties of sweet peas under glass, and upon these I shall base my report.

Among the new varieties, Zvolanek's Limit is a true giant-flowered sweet pea. Standards, reddish old rose, becoming paler; wings, creamy white, flushed with pale mauve-pink. An exhibition sort. It does not appear to be very productive, and perhaps will have to be grown as a fancy.

Zvolanek's Rose—A large waved flowered variety. Much more productive than the preceding. Color of the standards, mauve-rose; wings, violet-rose.

The Beauty—A very large waved flower; a warm, glowing color when seen in the bunch. It appears to be a self-color, but really has deep lilac-rose standards and pure mauve wings. There was nothing else like in the collection.

Albury Carmine—This is a fine sweet pea, with old rose wings and sofferino red wings. It holds its color well, and should be a good commercial variety in this color, which is that of the well known John Ingman. Concord Radiance is the same color, but not so good.

Albury Beauty—A beautiful orange-pink, with large waved flowers; similar to Miss Y. Guilbert, and both better than Morning Star.

Mrs. H. C. Mott is similar to Mrs. M. Anderson, but is better fixed and a better waved flower. The standards are the dull garnet, with violet-purple wings, but lose the red tinge, becoming more blue and attaining a lobelia blue color.

These varieties produce fine flowers, but it would seem that they are too much of the Christmas Captain order to be valuable commercially.

Concord Exquisite is a beautiful salmon pink self; a very fine sweet pea.

Zudemore was a mixed lot. A fine winter-flowering May Campbell appeared to predominate in it. If this is the intended variety, perhaps it would be too much to expect it to be absolutely fixed.

Mrs. Ralph M. Ward is a large to very large flower of pale rosy pink, with lilac-rose wings. This is a splendid sweet pea, but perhaps too near other varieties of similar color.

Mrs. P. Dusha is a large hydrangea-pink waved variety; not quite fixed, but, when fixed, will be a beautiful market variety.

Aglai Mott is the finest cream we have yet grown under glass.

Mrs. Charles Zvolanek, Miss F. Roland, Miss F. Pilat and Miss Y. Guilbert are all varieties to be very highly commended. Watchuny Orchid, with us, is the best white variety, but Bridal Veil is a more refined flower.

Albury Maroon has flowers which show less contrast in color between the standard wings than does Nubian Orchid, and therefore it is superior to that variety if one is choosing a maroon. The two varieties are distinct.

Blue Flake is a well named winter-flowering variety; Mott's Grey Flake is a winter-flowering Senator Spencer, and Donald J. Cowgill is a Jessie Cuthbertson in this type.

There appear to be in the trade the following synonymous varieties:

Mrs. Joseph Manda and Selma Swenson; Mrs. Sim Orchid and Rose Queen; Lavender Queen and Anita Wehrman; Zvolanek's Pale Blue and Concord Blue and Concord Lavender; Albury Lavender and Asta Ohn (winter flowering); Albury Maroon and Concord Chief; Mrs. F. Pilat and Miss May Hassett; Concord Crimson, Sensation Scarlet, Ruby and Thalia Mott are also very similar—the latter proved to be the most vigorous. Concord Pink and Concord Countess are similar. Concord Improved is a better strain.

Seeds of supposed winter-flowering sweet peas were received under the names of Hercules, Sensation, Helen Lewis and Wedgewood, together with one lot of Spring Maid and Christmas Pink. This trouble was complained of last year, and seems to be growing. The question is, What are the seed growers, the flower growers or the American Sweet Pea Society going to do about it? It seems certain that those who grow sweet peas will be compelled to seek other sources of seed supply if the varieties cannot at least be fixed as to type.

ELKHART, IND.—Otis L. Bullock, son of Mrs. E. M. Bullock, has joined the colors and is now located with Training Detachment No. 2, Chamber of Commerce, Company C, Indianapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—E. H. Mazey, well known florist of this city, recently contributed 15,000 tomato and cabbage plants, especially grown, for the gardens of the 36th Infantry at Fort Snelling.

PLANT NOTES.

Office Housecleaning.

Nearly all growing establishments at the present day have what is termed the office, and during the busy season, in many places, but little attention is given to keep it in a tidy condition. Now is the time, after the carnations are housed and before the fall work commences, to have a thorough cleaning up of the office and workroom and get them in readiness for the coming season. Get all the papers filed away in proper shape and fix up all accounts as far as possible, and thereby get rid of much of the worry and trouble. Clean up the workroom and give it a good coat of paint, and straighten out the supplies. If the stock of baskets has grown dirty get a little gold paint and give them a coat of this, which will certainly make them more attractive than the dingy supplies too often seen hanging on the walls or standing around. The florist too seldom appreciates how the customer likes to trade in a clean, up-to-date place, and often endeavors to excuse the dirty appearance by remarking: "It is impossible where so much dirt is handled to keep the place clean." Such a one is only fooling himself. The present-day customers, of whom many are ladies, know better; they see other places that are kept neat and clean, and they cannot be imposed upon with such tales. Now is the time to get everything shipshape for the fall and winter trade.

Fancy Leaved Caladiums.

It will soon be found difficult to obtain the quality of flowers necessary to maintain a fine window display, so attractive plants will be required, and the show houses leading from the store or office will need something with bright color to attract attention. The fancy leaved caladiums are beautiful plants for this purpose, and should now be nice plants in four or five-inch pots. Nice plants can be grown in these sizes and they are easily arranged in a bed of green sheet moss and are very attractive. For the young stock now coming on a very light house is an absolute necessity to obtain the highly colored leaves, and almost a full exposure to the rays of the sun. While the plants delight in a moist atmosphere, this must not be obtained by heavy shading, but by frequent syringing and damping down the walks and under the benches. The temperature should be kept warm and close, never dropping below 60 degrees at night, even if a little fire heat is needed. They will require copious watering to keep the beautiful leaves in good condition, and considerable feeding to bring the high colors and large, full leaves. Should flower buds form they should be immediately removed, for they will check the growth of the leaves.

Pansies.

For winter blooming the seed of pansies should be sown early. Procure a strain of seed that will produce large flowers, and unless they are to be grown in considerable quantities mixed colors are to be preferred. To obtain plants enough for winter blooming it will be better to plant the seed in flats and place them in a cool shady location in the house, where they are much more easily cared for than out in the open. If such a location is not to be had they can be sown in a cold frame and a sash that is quite heavily shaded placed over them until the plants begin to grow. As soon as large enough they should be planted in a cold frame until the bench is made ready, about the middle of September, in the house. The soil for winter growing should be good, and of the richest, in order to obtain large flowers, and the house in which they are planted should be maintained at a cool temperature, about 45 degrees at night, after settled fall and winter weather commences. Pansies are not, as a rule, troubled much with insect pests, but sometimes in the fall in the houses they are attacked by green fly and they are quickly checked in their growth if the aphids gets a good hold upon them. A careful watch should be maintained, and if they are found to be infested with aphids constant spraying with nicotine solutions will keep the insects down.

Compost Pile.

The extra help that is so often employed during the spring trade can be utilized for a few days before they are let go, in getting together a good compost pile, and there is no better time of the year than the present to do this. The sod can be taken off now after the mowing with no great amount of grass upon it, and if stacked at this time the warm summer days will soon rot the sod and make the pile fine and mellow. So many growers will spend their money for coal and labor and skimp on that most necessary thing for good product, the soil upon which the plant depends for its culture, and again put the matter off until the fall when the days are cold, the soil too often full of moisture, and the hauling poor, which makes the work more expensive and in the end not having as good an article for the succeeding year. It is not necessary to stack the manure with the pile at this time, but if ground bone is to be used it is better to sprinkle it into the pile now. Bone dissolves slowly and the earlier it is incorporated in the soil the better, and it also helps the rotting of the sod. Take advantage of the slack time with both the men and teams and get the compost pile up at once.

Bougainvilleas.

The plants of bougainvillea that are through blooming should be cut back into shape and potted in preparation for the next season's growth. Much depends upon the summer care of all hard-wooded stock if nice specimens are to be grown. They should be plunged outside in a frame or placed in full sun in a light airy house. Outside culture is far preferable for all this class of stock in order that a good strong growth, well furnished with foliage, may be assured. Be sure that they never get too dry. The great danger of all hard-wooded stock is letting it dry out, for it does not show it as quickly as the softer growing plants, but the check is more severe and the plants seldom fully recover from it. The young stock rooted earlier should be placed in a similar location, and kept well pinched back into shape, until enough shoots have been obtained to insure a good shapely plant, when they can be allowed to grow freely, but any extra strong leaders are better cut back during the season. Any chance flowers that show should be picked off at once, that a good strong stocky plant may be obtained and the strength all retained for that purpose.

Delphiniums.

This perennial has become quite a popular cut flower for summer use and is very decorative and showy. Those that have a stock can increase the plants of the better varieties by propagation at this time. When the plants bloom those that produce the best spikes and are of the best colors should be marked. After the blooms are cut the small growths that break from the stem are very easily rooted. Prepare a bed in a shaded frame and insert the cuttings, watering heavily when first put in. They will need frequent syringing during the hot weather and will root in three to four weeks, when they can be either potted or planted in a frame where they can be given attention. As soon as well established they can be planted in their permanent location, but should be given a little protection during the first winter by throwing a little old straw or some such material over them.

Anemone Japonica.

One of the most useful perennials for the fall is the Anemone japonica. It blooms at a time when flowers are very scarce, and if planted where it can be protected from the early frosts will produce quantities of bloom that can be made of use in all classes of floral work. The successful blooming of this plant depends much upon its summer culture. If the season is dry it will require constant watering, in fact, a good soaking. It is a good plan to place the hose in a bed of this and let the water run until the ground is thoroughly wet, and do this as often as may be required. It will amply repay in the long strong shoots, full of blooms, that will be produced in the fall. The florist not possessing a good stock of this beautiful perennial should procure some of it and plant a bed for fall cutting.

Heacock's Wartime Kentias.

CONSERVATION IN COAL AND SPACE.

With a purely American product grown from seed to salable finish, in their Wyncote nurseries, the Jos. Heacock Co. during the past season enjoyed the greatest business year in their history. Kentias, both Forsteriana and Belmoreana, are the specialties; they are all home grown, cultivated and brought on from the arrival of the seed, according to a schedule, which in regard to quantities, various stages of production, such as times of repotting, etc., has been found to work out perfectly.

Seed is sown as soon as it arrives, generally in June, although last year, owing to war conditions, it was in October before the anxiously looked for cases came to hand. It is sowed in peat on a table on the north side of the orchid house two feet in width by three hundred in length. The largest of these seedlings are now about three inches in height and will be boxed close together in flats, from which, in six months, they are put into 2-inch pots, then threes, fours, fives and sixes. Plants are for sale here in all sizes from 2-inch pots up, but the required quantity of the strongest plants of each grade is always reserved or set aside to enable them to keep up their schedule in specimen and made up combinations. All plants above six-inch pots, are grown on in cedar tubs, from seven to fourteen inches inside diameter, which latter is the largest size they use. These large made-up plants consist of one seven-inch Forsteriana, one six, one five, and one four, all especially strong well-rooted stock. These largest combinations are made up in June and January. All repottings of other sizes are done from early March to last of June. There is always more or less of a check at this time until the roots take hold of the new soil, and then during the summer they get the best growth.

Theodore Shober, who has grown up with this industry since its inception here, has every phase of the business at his finger tips. The new situation caused by war conditions, is being met in a practical manner. The months from November until March are the resting period for the kentia. Although 60° has been their standard winter temperature heretofore, experiments last winter demonstrated that they would thrive, or at least maintain a healthy condition, at 50°. While in this comparatively dormant state, they can also be placed much closer together, almost tub against tub. A section of ground space 7x10 feet, ordinarily holds 30 plants in 9-inch tubs inside measure. When not growing, 60 can be crowded into this space, and still not have the tubs touching. As insects do not breed at this temperature, and the house can on bright days for a little time be brought down to 40° to further sicken them, there is little danger from this source.

The plan is to double up a portion of the place in this way early in November, run the houses at 50°, spread out the stock again and reoccupy the empty space early in March. All stock up to 4-inch, is grown on tables, larger sizes on ground spaces or beds. Here pots are always placed alternately, the second row plants coming into the space between the first, so as to give all the light possible. Kentias are of comparatively slow growth, but increase in size of plants put on from May until November, is surprising. For insects nicotine is used, three ounces to about two quarts of water, evaporated in a Lonsdale pan, attached to a steam pipe, a number to a house, according to its size. It is found a great check to scale.

While the plans we have outlined for the coming winter look practical and efficient, they may have to be changed in some respects, but it is believed they will work out and that it will be possible to get along in the limited space and keep up the necessary heat with the 50 per cent of coal allotment.

Scotti ferns and cibotiums are also specialties here, all grown in the palm houses, hanging separately from the roof. Their shade has no perceptible effect on the stock coming on underneath. The cibotiums are finished in tubs on pedestals set among the palms. Such intensive use of greenhouse space is possible in connection with a number of inside crops, if growers who have initiative enough to plan for them, will give them the extra care and attention required.

Envelopes of Objectionable Sizes.

The post office department calls attention to the fact that many persons and firms are mailing letters and other matter in envelopes which are of such size and shape as to cause serious difficulty in the handling of the matter in the mails. To prevent impairment of the efficiency of the service, it is suggested that not less than 3½ inches of clear space should be left at the right end of the address side of all envelopes in order that there may be ample space for postage stamps, post marking, address, directions for forwarding or return, etc. The use of envelopes which do not exceed approximately 4 inches by 9 inches in size and on which ample clear space is left on the right portion of the address side for the address, postage stamps, etc., will serve to accomplish the desired object and result to the advantage of both the mailers and the postal service.

The foregoing applies with equal force to the use of advertising cards, folders, and similar matter of unusual size or irregular shape, as set forth in the instructions in Article 14, page 4, of the February, 1918, Postal Guide, entitled "Use of Large Advertising Cards Objectionable."

Bituminous Coal Prices Reduced.

The United States fuel administration, in Publication No. 26, dated May 25, 1918, acting under authority of the executive order of the president, orders that all prices for bituminous coal f. o. b. mines in the coal producing districts throughout the United States fixed by the said executive order of the president, dated August 21, 1917, and subsequent orders of the United States fuel administrator and in effect at 7 a. m. on the 25th day of May, 1918, shall be, and the same hereby are, reduced as to all shipments made after 7 a. m. on the 25th day of May, 1918, by the sum of 10 cents for each net ton of 2,000 pounds.

This order shall in no way effect the increase contained in the executive order of the president dated October 27, 1917, adding the sum of 45 cents to the prices fixed for bituminous coal under the terms and provisions set forth in the last mentioned order.

National Publicity for Flowers.

In response to the wishes of Chairman Henry Penn of the publicity committee, and Chairman George Asmus of the publicity finance committee, President C. H. Totty called a meeting for a conference of these officials with the secretary and president to take place at the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., Saturday June 22. It was considered inadvisable to summon the whole committee membership at this time, owing to the mileage expense thereby incurred. The conference was very largely for the purpose of reviewing the campaign work for the past five months, and arranging data which would enable the chairman to make an intelligent report at the forthcoming convention of the society in St. Louis. Buffalo was chosen as the place of meeting for the reason that it was a central point, and the secretary was already there in the course of his western trip. S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, was present as a resident committeeman, and W. J. Palmer, also of that city, was in attendance by invitation. The secretary submitted a report showing what he had accomplished through the trips so far made, and the same meeting with hearty approval he was instructed to continue the work of visiting the trade until further notice. Matters of great importance in connection with the campaign were discussed, but definite action was deferred until such time as a general meeting of the committees could be arranged, when the individual views of the members could be obtained upon various phases of the work, and their votes recorded upon action to be taken.

The secretary in his report made feeling reference to the very many courtesies extended him by the trade in the different cities visited up to the time he reached Buffalo—Bridgeport, New Haven and Hartford, Conn.; Providence and Pawtucket, R. I.; Boston, Mass.; Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Utica, Syracuse, Barnards, Irondequoit, Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y. With the assistance cheerfully rendered him, his work was greatly facilitated, and his time conserved to a considerable extent. Later in Detroit, he received material assistance from Philip Breitmeyer, Albert Pochelon, and Robert M. Rahaley, the latter gentleman devoting practically his entire time to the work during the period of the visit. Besides substantially increasing the publicity fund, these trips have resulted in large and important additions to the membership roll of the S. A. F. They have provided opportunities not otherwise obtainable for exploiting the work of the society and establishing the fact of its great service to the florist industry.

The fact of the great benefit derived from the publicity campaign is becoming clearly established, and florists who have not already subscribed need no longer hesitate to "do their bit." It is only by generally expressed interest on the part of those the work is to help that the campaign can continue. This interest is of the dollars and cents kind, something that can be exchanged for the publicity we are after. The risk of exploitation has already been taken, and doubt as to satisfactory results need no longer exist. Help to make this a whole-hearted movement. Few florists are too poor to give at least a little assistance—"flowerless days" are not yet on the calendar, nor will they ever be if this campaign is rightfully supported. Without this effort to keep flowers constantly in the public mind, the future might be dark for the florist trade? There is hardly a day when the promotion bureau is not called upon to combat some misinformation or misguided prejudice regarding the use of flowers, and it behooves everyone in the business, no matter what his standing, to bolster up the work of the publicity committees with a contribution to the publicity campaign fund.

Get the Habit of Doing Your Share.

Mark Twain said "There are two times in a man's life when he should not speculate: When he cannot afford it, and when he can."

So a word to our brethren who want to play a sure thing. Get the habit of contributing your share to our publicity fund and see it earn the biggest dividends in proportion to your investment that you ever made. So big, that by the profits thereof, you will be enabled to buy Liberty Bonds, contribute to the Red Cross, and have a little for a rainy day. Try it.

It will be a better incentive for more business than anything you have done in a long while, and when all florists, large and small, get this habit, can you imagine the accumulative effect this advertising campaign is going to have on our business? Are you going to help our business grow? Are you willing to let the others do it, and overlook your share?

Send your contribution to John Young, secretary, and the pleasure you will get by so doing will be greater than all else. Get your contribution in now, so that it will be recorded in the booklet ready to be printed now. Do not be left off the list. Do it now.

HENRY PENN, Secretary.

Production of Potash.

The recovery of potash from Alunite is described in Bulletin No. 415 of the department of agriculture, contributed from the Bureau of Soils. The scarcity of potassium salts due to the war in Europe, coupled with the discovery in Utah of deposits of high grade Alunite, which contains considerable potash, has stimulated interests in its profitable extraction. It is thought best to ship the raw material to the east and refine it there, getting the advantage of lower freight rates. The process would show a narrow margin of profit in normal times.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Geny Bros. have dismantled their old range. Their coal allowance will enable them to operate the new establishment to nearly full capacity.

OBITUARY.

John Van Lindley.

John Van Lindley, head of the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., died at his home in that city, June 13, following a stroke of paralysis with which he was stricken several months ago. He was 80 years of age.

Mr. Van Lindley, who was looked upon as one of the most public spirited citizens in the community, was widely known, having long been identified with horticulture, and founded, 40 years ago, what is now one of the most flourishing cut flower and nursery establishments in the state. He spent practically all of his early life in tree growing, his father being a noted fruit grower. He was one of the prime movers in organizing the state fair association, and was its first president. He has also been at all times prominently identified with educational work, and was for more than 30 years a trustee of Guilford College and one of the most liberal contributors toward its permanent endowment. He was connected with many of the leading business interests of the state and at the time of his death was president of the state horticultural society. His gift of 40 acres for park purposes to the city of Greensboro, N. C., in which the greater part of his long and useful life had been spent, an account of which appeared in our issue of May 18, page 872, is an evidence of his love for the community, and in keeping with the generous spirit which characterized his whole life.

Mr. Van Lindley is survived by a widow, one son, four daughters, a brother, sister and two half-brothers. He was laid to rest in Guilford College cemetery.

Mrs. Lena Zech.

Mrs. Lena Zech, wife of the late John Zech, well-known Chicago wholesale florist, who passed away April 29, 1915, died suddenly at her home, June 29 at the age of 56. She had been suffering from high blood pressure and was quite ill several months ago, but recovered sufficiently to be able to be about and was seemingly in good health on the morning of the day she died. At noon, June 29, she was taken ill and died shortly afterward. Mrs. Zech was all that a mother could be and was held in the highest esteem by those who knew her, and the surviving children, Allie, Leo, Carrie and Mrs. J. S. Cunningham, have the sympathy of the entire trade in their great loss and hour of sorrow. The funeral was held Tuesday, July 2 at 9:30 a. m. from the late residence, 1836 Summerdale avenue, to St. Gregory's church, with burial at St. Boniface cemetery. The funeral was largely attended, notwithstanding the heavy rain, and those in the trade who were unable to be present were represented by a floral piece, the number being the largest seen at a funeral for some time. Among the pall-bearers were noted Matt Mann, of Zech & Mann, George Reinberg and Adam Zender, all well known to the trade.

SPOKANE, WASH.—The florists' club will hold its annual outing July 18.

TORONTO, ONT.—The retail florists will hold a picnic at Center Island, July 17.

DELPHINIUM BELLADONNA is fine for forcing in a carnation house temperature.

"Say It With Flowers" Checks.

Henry Penn, Chairman National Publicity Campaign, suggests as a very desirable publicity measure, the use of the legend, "Say It With Flowers," printed prominently in red ink, on all bank checks issued by the trade. The idea is a good one and worthy of trial.

Personal.

John Young, the well known secretary of the Society of American Florists, who passed through Chicago this week on his publicity tour of the trade, enroute to Milwaukee and the Twin Cities, says his trip has been highly successful both in subscriptions to the campaign fund and in new members for the society.

FREESIA bulbs as grown in California appear unusually fine this season and should give exceptional results in the growing.

American Dahlia Society.

Jasper R. Lewis, 736 Riverside Drive, New York, secretary of the American Dahlia Society, announces that the list of special prizes for the society's annual exhibition to be held under the auspices of the American Institute of the City of New York in the Engineering building, September 24-26, is now ready and is being mailed to members. In addition to the special prizes attractive awards are also offered in 18 classes. Copies of the premium list may be had upon application to the secretary.

Our Government.

There is an undercurrent of opinion, expressed mostly by those who are averse to taking any part in public affairs or joining with others in efforts to stimulate or improve conditions, that the hearings in Washington during the past year in reference to the coal situation and other vital topics that affect the trade, did more harm than good. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, said at the recent American Rose Society luncheon, that he had always found the chiefs of departments big, able men who at all times had met him half way in their efforts to be of assistance.

The country at this time is in the position of a man late for his train. We are in the war, but we lost two good years in getting there, and like the man late for his train, we must hurry. The officials at Washington are doing their utmost to speed up every energy. Cutting out the carrying of bulbs, lightens the load a trifle; taking a portion of the florist's coal, helps more quickly to fill the government's bins. Making use of the available help in stores and greenhouses, to enable the government to make immediate use of its vast resources, is of far greater importance than the business itself. The men who have attended these various conferences are strongly impressed with the earnestness of the officials, who while striving to place the burden as equitably as possible, keep the fact that we must win the war, or no business will be worth anything, always to the front.

The department of agriculture, the post office department, in fact, all the various agencies of the government, are always pleased to receive communications from the public, either of praise or protest, as they like to know that the people are taking an interest in what they are doing. Information that has cost the government large sums of money, is to be had for the asking. Pamphlets and leaflets, giving information on nearly every subject of business activity, particularly in reference to plant diseases, insects, etc., are sent free on request, or in some cases, a cost charge is made.

This is our government, in which every man should be interested. The thought that in matters that affect us we should keep very quiet, in the hope that they will blow over, is not patriotic. The laws are not made for one, but for all, and our only care is to see that they are equitable.

Heating Plant Inspection.

The United States fuel administration has announced the appointment of Henderson W. Knott to manage the field force of engineers and inspectors which is at work among the power plants of the country, carrying out a campaign of instruction and inspection designed to bring the use of fuel for the production of power to the highest possible efficiency and economy. The appointment is a part of the plan of the fuel administration to have each of the 250,000 steam plants in the United States visited by a competent man who can make suggestions and report in connection with a questionnaire. This work will naturally require a large number of inspectors devoting their time to traveling among the steam plants. This field force will be organized by states in order to give it greater force and efficiency.

[We assume the inspections above referred to will include those of greenhouse boilers.—Ed.]

Syracuse Rose Society.

About 25 members of the Syracuse, N. Y., Rose Society visited the rose test garden at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., Saturday, June 29. The visitors first inspected the garden of the department of floriculture, in which a large number of species and varieties of annuals and perennials were in bloom. Professor White, of the department, welcomed the rosarians to the rose garden and expressed the hope that their visit might become an annual affair. Dr. Beal outlined briefly the purpose and development of the garden. The visitors then proceeded to study the varieties in bloom, noting more particularly the newer varieties of hybrid teas and of climbers. A large number of the hybrid perpetual sorts were past their prime, but many of the hybrid teas were in excellent condition.

Rubber Hose Trust Dictation.

The news that the rubber trust is to reduce the size of greenhouse and garden hose from $\frac{3}{4}$ to $\frac{5}{8}$ -inch, making this the standard and only size; should be a matter of deep concern to all growers. The use of one inch hose has been found to greatly facilitate and speed up watering and syringing in greenhouses. If this new $\frac{5}{8}$ -inch size is allowed to become standard, it will mean that at least 50 per cent will have to be added to the labor of watering in greenhouses. Energetic measures should be at once taken to combat the arbitrary fixing of this standard. There are various brands of hose, but in over 80 per cent of the output, there is no competition, prices being controlled by the trust.

Crabb & Hunter Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Grand Rapids Trust Co., trustee of the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., in a statement July 1, shows the assets of the firm to be $35,109.50 and total liabilities, $30,254.78. The business in the retail store and the range have both been sold, being losing propositions. The remaining property consists of city lots in a good location but which can not be disposed of to advantage under present conditions. The trust company says that while carrying charges are considerable, there are no operating expenses to deplete the assets.

ROSES ARE IN BRISK DEMAND.

Business has been good for the past week and stock in all lines which was none too plentiful cleaned up at an early hour each day at very satisfactory summer prices. Roses are arriving in fair supply but not in any such quantities that there is a surplus when the wholesale stores close for the day. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are selling exceptionally well and the same holds true for Columbia, which is making new friends every day. Some fine Ophelia, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and Double White Killarney are seen in this market together with Mrs. George Shawyer, Hearst, Montrose, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, My Maryland, Milady, Richmond and Hoosier Beauty. Champ Weiland is in good demand and is one of the varieties that is slowly but surely being recognized as a factor in the market. Carnations are about done and the same holds true for peonies. A few sweet peas are to be had. Gladioli are arriving in a trifle larger quantities but are still in short supply. Daisies, calendulas, water lilies, snapdragons, cornflowers, feverfew, stocks, candytuft, pansies, delphiniums, larkspurs, gladioli, coreopsis, cosmos, phlox, gypsophilas and other indoor and outdoor stock is on the bill of fare. Lily of the valley is cleaning up regularly. Orchids are in short supply. Lilies are seen at some of the stores in large numbers but the demand appears to keep pace with the supply. From all reports heard in the wholesale houses business the end of June was surprisingly good compared to the first part of the month and that while the total sales in general are behind those of last year they are considerably ahead of those of the same period in 1916. The whole-

TO THE TRADE

On and after July 7, 1918, The Wholesale Florists and Florists' Supply Houses of Chicago will not be open for business Sundays. For the benefit of the trade we will keep our places of business open until 9 p. m. Saturdays until further notice.

Signed,

Wholesale Florists and Florists' Supply Houses OF CHICAGO.

sale houses will close on Sunday hereafter, but will remain open until 9 p. m. Saturdays until further notice. A large number of the leading local retail florists have signified their intention of closing on Sundays also regardless of whether their competitors keep open or not.

NOTES.

Ed. Armstrong, who is in the employ of Al. Fisher, well-known North Clark street florist, circulated a petition this week among the north side florists in regard to closing on Sundays during the summer months and met with wonderful success, everyone he called on being in sympathy with the movement. It is expected that all the florists throughout the city will do likewise, for everyone seems to be willing to close and all that is needed to make it unanimous is for someone to start the ball rolling. Now that the movement is well under way it will be a rare sight to find a retail store open for business on Sunday except during the holiday period.

William Reed, who has been representing the A. L. Randall Co. at Kansas City, Mo., and surrounding country, passed through here this week on his way to Canada, where he will join the British expeditionary forces, having selected the observation branch of the heavy artillery.

J. A. Budlong is cutting from a splendid crop of summer roses, particularly Double White Killarney, Sunburst, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Hearst. This firm's Double White Killarney is in exceptionally brisk demand and cleans up early at top market prices.

C. L. Washburn says that business at Bassett & Washburn's store has been unusually good the past week, and that no trouble was experienced in moving their large cuts of roses, owing to the heavy demand.

The John Kruchten Co. is handling a good supply of indoor grown sweet peas which are of splendid quality for so late in the season. Outdoor sweet peas are also included in the offerings at this store.

Joe Erringer, of the Zech & Mann force, will leave July 8 for Lincoln Park to enjoy a two weeks' vacation. When Michael Freres will report for duty at Zech & Mann's after a well-earned rest.

George Ball, of Glen Ellyn, is spending a few days at his old home in Cincinnati, O.

The trade was greatly shocked on June 29 to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Lena Zech, wife of the late John Zech, of Zech & Mann, who died over three years ago. The Zech family has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of a loving mother who was held in the highest regard by all who knew her. Among the out-of-town people in the trade who paid their respects at the home were Fred Holton, of Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo.; P. W. Peterson, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, and H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg, Can. The floral offerings from out-of-town points were numerous, not to mention those from the local retail and wholesale trade.

William F. Schofield, 734 North State street, is confined to the Michael Reese hospital suffering from severe cuts about the head and several broken ribs as a result of an automobile accident on June 27. He was driving northward at Thirty-first street and Cottage Grove avenue trailing a north bound street car. When it came to a short stop he threw on the brakes and skidded into the south bound track, where a street car traveling at a high rate of speed crashed into the machine.

The next Florists' Club meeting will be held at Nic Karthauser's grove, 6656 Ridge avenue, Thursday evening, July 18, at 8 p. m. T. E. Waters, chairman of the good-of-the-club committee, has arranged an elaborate program for the occasion and it is expected that everyone in the trade will attend. A special invitation is extended to all the retail florists.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is disposing of a large quantity of white phlox to the local retail trade which is coming in handy for funeral work owing to the scarcity of good white stock in this market. The stock is arriving from the proprietor's home at Highland Park, where several acres of this variety are under cultivation.

George Washburn, of A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, attended the forty-third annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, held at the Hotel Sherman, June 26-28.

Chas. W. McCauley, of the Riverbank Greenhouses, was badly injured about the head and had two ribs broken one day last week when he opened a car loaded with tile. He is getting along nicely at this writing and expects to be able to be about again soon.

At Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s store the receipts of roses include a particularly fine grade of Ophelia and Mrs. Chas. Russell, which are in brisk demand at good prices. The supply department is having a good call for baskets, especially those adapted for wedding work.

Chas. P. Mueller, Jr., of Wichita, Kan., and wife and baby, were visitors this week. Mr. Mueller, who has been connected with the coastguard service on the Pacific coast, is on his way to the front.

Peter Reinberg will have his usual supply of field-grown carnation plants to offer his trade this season which are doing very nicely and compare most favorably in quality with those of other years.

Wietor Bros. have had such a heavy demand for chrysanthemum stock this season that they are practically cleaned up in all varieties. This firm is cutting quite heavily in roses from young stock.

Percy Jones, Inc., was well pleased with their total sales for the month of June which compare favorably with those of other years, notwithstanding the present existing wartime conditions.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner report that the peony season, which has just closed, has been a very good one with them. Local stock sold exceptionally well this year at very satisfactory prices.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are handling a good supply of summer stock, particularly roses, which are in heavy demand. Miscellaneous out-door stock is in good supply at this house.

Wieland & Risch are growing the rose Mrs. Bayard Thayer quite extensively at their greenhouses and are now featuring a limited supply of this variety at the store.

H. N. Bruns is spending his Sundays at Lakeside, Mich., where his family is enjoying the summer.

Visitors: George Wiegand and wife, Indianapolis, Ind.; Messrs. S. A. Gregg and R. C. Harper, of the Charleston Cut Flower & Plant Co., Charleston, W. Va.; Blaine Wilcox, of J. F. Wilcox & Sons Co., Council Bluffs, Ia.; Chas. Young, St. Louis, Mo.; W. F. Heckenkamp, Quincy, Ill.; J. P. Herzog, Belvidere; John Klaus, manager of Graceland Greenhouses, Greenwood, Mo.; Mrs. Paul M. Paley and friend, Miss Acker, Little Rock, Ark.

Business among the local florists is fairly good, but the greater volume comes in the way of funeral orders. The weather is surpassing all records for heat in the memory of the writer. Trees are defoliating, and it is a wonder how well our soldier boys stand it, so many of them in camp in this vicinity coming from northern climes—a number from Chicago, among them Earl Poehlmann and W. R. Smart, formerly representative of the House of Heather, of New York. The coal situation at present is peculiar, inasmuch as in spite of the warm climate we have been trying to get in our coal supply for the past five months, but so far have been unsuccessful.

T. J. Wolfe, florist, left June 25 for a trip to the seacoast, making the journey by automobile.

St. Louis, Mo.

SUMMER SEASON NOW AT HAND.

The market has assumed its summer lethargy, with here and there a spurt for some big funeral or wedding. The best of the seasonable flowers are gladioli, which are coming in very good, but the past week had only a fair demand. Roses are as good as can be expected for this season of the year; in fact, they are a little better if anything, as most of the thrip has disappeared. Carnations are still hanging on, but that is all. The quality is poor. Sweet peas are done for. Lilies, while not over plentiful, are adequate for the demand, and of excellent quality. Outdoor stock, such as Shasta daisies, delphiniums, etc., are good sellers and take well for the summer trade. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

Wm. C. Smith, of the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., donated thousands of Shasta daisies to the various War Savings Stamp booths, June 28. Everyone buying a War Stamp was presented with a flower by the ladies in charge. So many stamps were sold that the flowers did not last long enough. Whenever there is something to be done for a patriotic or charitable cause, Billy gets all "pepped" up and on the job.

Otto Bruenig, formerly with H. G. Bernning, is now settled at the greenhouse establishment at Olivette, taken over from Chas. Steidle. He is consigning some very nice Ophelia to this market, and with his energy and knowledge of the ultimate markets, he should make it go fine. He has a good start, which augurs a strong finish.

Frank Windler had a team of salesmen selling War Savings Stamps, among them our friend, Sam Seligman. Sam was offering a box of flowers to be sent to the wife or sweetheart of any gentleman who bought $500 worth of stamps. Frank Windler's team scored high at their particular community meeting place.

The trustees of the florists' club have set the coming picnic for July 18 at Romona park. It looks like it is going to be a big time. J. J. W.

Boston.

BUSINESS LACKS LIFE.

Market conditions remain unchanged, although flowers are a little more plentiful, but business lacks the snap of other years. Outdoor sweet peas are arriving in large quantities and bring $1.50 a hundred. Roses are selling well, especially Ophelia, Stanley, Killarney Queen, Ward and Victoria. Panama and America gladioli are selling well at $1.50 and $2 a dozen. Coreopsis, cosmos and salpiglossis are in fine condition and sell easily.

NOTES.

Wm. Elliott is cutting from his Madbury range a good selection of roses, consisting of Christy Miller, Ophelia, Victoria and four varieties of Irish roses; from his Brighton plant, plumosus and Sprengeri.

At Comley's store, on Park street, business has been very good. He has been unable to get errand boys, so has a girl delivery system, which he claims is far ahead of boys.

The New England Rose Conservatories have started to plant Killarney Queen and Columbia roses in place of Double White Killarney and Stanley.

Penn's store was kept very busy the past week with funeral work. His whole force worked all night making pieces for one of our popular merchants.

Maurice Hambro, salesman at the market, has added to his list of growers Mr. Comley, of Bedford, with a stock of good roses.

William Penn has started on a five-weeks' vacation in Maine, where he will spend his time fishing for salmon and trout.

T. Murray H. Spears, manager of the wholesale department of Carbone, Inc., has moved to Hough's Neck for the summer.

Thos. F. Galvin's two stores have had a very busy week, with plenty of funeral work and a wedding.

Chas. E. Evans has started to cut hardy gypsophilas, swainsonas, America gladioli and cosmos.

Chester Paine, of Paine Bros., has gone to Union, Me., for a vacation of three weeks.

Welch Bros. still keep up the pace with good business. S. K. G.

LANCASTER, PA.—A ladies' auxiliary of the local florists' club has been formed with the following officers: Mrs. A. M. Herr, president; Mrs. Abraham Rohrer, secretary, and Mrs. Elmer Weaver, treasurer.

PORTLAND, ORE.—The Portland Floral Co. has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: E. J. Steele, president; J. G. Bacher, vice-president; F. A. VanKirk, secretary, and Henry Kahn, treasurer.

NOTES.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., will run his range to full capacity during the coming winter, having contracted for 1,000 large truckloads of wood at $1 per load. This is as cheap as, or perhaps cheaper than, coal, and, with his 50 per cent coal allowance, will maintain proper heat. He recently subscribed for war savings stamps to the amount of $1,000.

Some of the local growers are being troubled with the leaf roller on their roses this season. Others complain of an insect that stings the stems of the chrysanthemums, killing cuttings in the benches and plants to such an extent that a shortage is threatened.

Kentucky coal, up to the present, has been selling at from $1 to $4.25 per ton, but will be advanced $1 per ton during the present week. Those who have not already made arrangements for their supply will have to pay for the delay.

H. G. Walker, who met with a very serious accident seven weeks ago, is now able to sit up, and his many friends will be glad to hear that he will soon be able to be about again. Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley Walker have returned from a camping and fishing trip.

Carnation plants in the field are looking fine at the establishment of the F. Walker Co. This firm expects to grow a larger number than usual for cut flower purposes.

The labor problem is becoming a serious one. It is reported that a $40,000,000 powder plant is to be located here, in which case labor will be scarcer than ever.

John Bettman & Sons will operate but part of their range the coming season. They are known as very successful rose growers.

The Jacob Schulz Co. reports trade holding up well and is pleased with the volume for the season to date.

Geo. Schoenbackler, of the New, Nanz & Neuner Co., is on the sick list.

It is reported that the E. G. Reimers Co. will operate only half of its range the coming winter.

Lewis Kirch is cutting fine Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii. W.

Rochester, N. Y.

GOOD STOCK IN LIMITED SUPPLY.

Trade during the past week has been very good, with wedding and commencement orders making up the greater part of the demand. Roses have been very scarce, as have sweet peas, while the call for both has been unusually heavy. Lilies, Shasta daisies, larkspur and gypsophila are among the plentiful items. Carnations are failing, and the quality is rather poor.

NOTES.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Miss Tess Whitman, of H. E. Wilson's force, who has been notified by Washington that her brother, Louis, was killed in action in France, June 11.

The work of placing flowering plants in all of the small parks has been completed. About 150,000 were raised for the purpose in the greenhouses at Highland Park.

Charles Felton, one of Buffalo's enterprising florists, came here last week and returned with a load of Boston ferns, which are scarce in that city at present.

E. C. Armbrust and wife have as their guests Charles L. Moore and wife, of New Britain, Conn.

Charles Sharp and his two sons are enjoying a two-weeks' camping trip near Hornell, N. Y.

Lester Brown, formerly with H. E. Wilson, has arrived safely "over there" with his regiment.

George T. Boucher had a busy week with wedding and commencement orders.

JUNE BUSINESS SATISFACTORY.

Greenhouse flowers have been decidedly on the short side during the last half of June, but there has been a good supply of all seasonable varieties of outdoor stock which helped out considerably. Summer roses have been of good quality, and the best varieties sell readily. Carnations are very small, but good prices are obtained on account of their scarcity. There are no orchids to be had locally. A fairly good supply of Easter lilies helps out the situation considerably, as these are used both for funeral work and weddings. Shasta daisies are particularly fine this year, and larkspur is used in very large quantities in all of the retail flower shops. Some very beautiful hydrangeas are seen in the pot plant line, in blue, pink, and white. Plants of Easter lilies are also offered. Begonias and caladiums are other plant offerings. Business during June, compared favorably with the demand in 1917.

NOTES.

The New Haven Floral Co., of which Henry Freese, of the Freese Floral Co., in this city, is a member, has moved the stock in the Hale avenue greenhouses in this city to the New Haven range, and will hereafter grow all of their stock at New Haven, both for their retail and wholesale trade. The Freese Floral Co. is receiving good quantities of roses, sweet peas, lilies and carnations from the New Haven greenhouses. They report a fine business during the month of June at their store.

The Flick Floral Co. had a busy month, with weddings creating a fine demand for both greenhouse and outdoor flowers. They are showing some attractive combinations in baskets and bouquets of miniature roses, small garden flowers and Easter lilies and larkspur.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey report business during the last two weeks of June as about the same as the first part of the month, with some quiet days. Their orchids are off-crop, but they are cutting a large quantity of Easter lilies and all summer varieties of roses.

The June trade went far ahead of all expectations at the store of A. J. Lantier & Co. Some fine stock is being sent in from their greenhouses, including Easter lilies, roses, carnations, sweet peas and a wealth of outdoor flowers.

This city and vicinity was visited by a heavy frost June 22, which did considerable damage to the corn, tomato and other garden plants, and much discouragement over the damage is felt in this locality.

Cut flowers have been in excellent demand at the store of Edgar Weninghoff, with but few dull days. Baskets of outdoor flowers have been a specialty and have brought in good returns.

The Doswell Floral Co. reports a good demand for the latter part of June, with weddings in the lead. They are cutting a large number of Easter lilies at their greenhouses at Lindenwood.

SUPPLY SHORTAGE AND PRICES IMPROVE.

There has been quite a change in market conditions since our last report. Stock is now quite scarce and good prices prevail, very few outdoor varieties to be seen at present and indoor offerings are about over with the exception of some very good roses and carnations. The latter are small but in good demand and what few are received each day meet with ready sale at good figures. The quality of roses is good, especially Ophelia and Prima Donna. There is a large crop of lilies which helps out considerably. Delphiniums are in good demand but they are about over for this year. Phlox has been a good seller but the end is near. Good outdoor sweet peas are being received and these bring $1 per 100, a very high figure for the season. American Beauties are done for and the demand is very limited. Gladioli are being received in limited quantities and a few outdoor asters are seen. Business has been good and the outlook for July is favorable.

NOTES.

James Hill has arrived safe in France according to a letter received from his brother, Dave, who conducts a flower shop on Fifth avenue, and who expects to enter the officers' training camp at Carnegie Tech for a six weeks' course. Vacations are now in order and each

BUSINESS SHOWS HEALTHY TONE.

Business has been booming the past week; there was no great hurrah, such as warranted a holiday rise in prices, but just a steady pull that took everything worth while as it came in, each day cleaning up, leaving practically nothing to carry over. All kinds of outside stock, such as feverfew, candy-tuft, hydrangeas and sweet peas, should pay those who had the courage to grow their usual quantity. Everything salable in this line has cleaned up for the past three weeks at top market prices. Roses are scarce, and stock in all colors that grades from firsts up brings very satisfactory prices. Those dormant winter houses of carnations should be catching up nicely now, as all stock is in demand at from $3 to $4 per hundred. Owing to the continued cool weather, the flowers now coming in are exceptionally good. Gladioli sell well; the spikes are fine. Easter lilies are life savers to many retailers, and at $10 to $12 and even $15 per hundred must help considerably to fatten the growers' bank accounts.

NOTES.

The George Anderson greenhouses are being dismantled and the material offered for sale. This strictly commercial place, where stock was grown only for the trade, has been the scene of many successes. Laing and Brunner roses, Perle, Bride and Mermet, all of the highest grade, were grown here in the early days to great perfection. Richmond, Maryland, and the Killarneys followed, and were equally well done. The pot Easter lilies and hydrangeas, as grown here, were always eagerly sought for by the best trade for their Easter stock. Mr. Anderson, who had also great mechanical ability, built all his houses, which structures were acknowledged by growers to be models in economical construction and efficiency. He also planned and installed his steam heating. As an expert, he was often called on by growers to explain and correct irregularities in other heating plants. Two years ago, Mr. Anderson suffered a stroke, which since that time has left him helpless. To be cut down at the time when he could enjoy the result of his life's work, is hard indeed.

Arthur Niessen, in speaking of conditions, said: "It is not so much an increased demand, but owing to the continued and unusual cool weather, the supply was below normal for the season. The demand and the fine quality of carnations now coming in, would warrant asking $5, but we only get $4 for the best, and that is exceptionally good for the season. Last year, we had trouble to sell Hydrangea arborescens at $1 to $1.50 per hundred heads; now we sell over 1,000 a day at $3 and $4 per hundred. Sweet peas sell up close every day, as does all other outdoor stock. The business is all right. With the exception of two or three weeks we have had throughout the season a consistent demand for all good flowers. The men who will stick to their guns and produce medium to high grade stock need have no fear of the future.

hopes that some one will invent or construct a system for watering rose beds, which will consist of a pipe down the middle of each bed within six inches of the ground. This is to have miniature alternate nozzles on either side, which will distribute water evenly over the bed. He does not like the system that showers over the top, wetting the foliage and also forming puddles in the walks.

Florists' supply dealers are finding difficulty to get stock in a number of the standard lines, principally on account of the scarcity of labor at the factories or sources of supply. Already, magnolia leaves are beginning to slow up. If these get scarce, there will indeed be trouble in many retail shops.

Billy Stevens, of the Berger Brothers force, says there is nothing the matter with the business, it is only some of the people who are in it, that tend to make life miserable at times. Easter lilies, gladioli, and Maryland roses are headliners.

J. Otto Thilow is in great demand these days as a lecturer and authority on roses, before the various garden clubs of the country. He is a gifted speaker, who when heard once, is sure of a return invitation. On June 28, he spoke before the Babylon Garden Club of Long Island. On July 9, he is scheduled for the East Hampton Long Island Garden Club at 10:30 a. m. on roses. Had he the time to accept the many invitations received, he would be a continuous performer. These garden talks are not illustrated.

H. H. Battles has closed his Century Flower Shop for the months of July and August. The balance of the force operating here have been moved into his main store next door, to replace, as far as possible, those who have joined the colors or gone into the war through its industries. From the time of the entrance of this country into this great conflict, Mr. Battles has placed nothing in the way of any of his employees, who from patriotic motives, felt they were called to the service.

Stock is very scarce with Eugene Bernheimer. Benny Gibbs reports a good demand for everything salable.

JUNE BUSINESS BELOW NORMAL.

The marked feature of the past week was a scarcity of stock. The volume of retail business was not up to the normal for June, but the scarcity was abnormal, particularly so during the first half of the week. There have been times when good stock was scarce, when there was an abundance of an inferior quality, but everything was scarce last week. Mention was made in our notes of June 29 of the high price of carnations, which took the greatest jump, but all other stocks wholesaled at good prices. Cattleyas continued at 75 cents and $1 per flower, lilies at 10 cents per flower, the best sweet peas $1.50 and $2 per 100. There was the least change in prices on American Beauty roses of any stock, as there was no great demand for them, and the quality was poor. By June 29, there was some increase in the supply, but carnations brought $4 per 100. The fluctuations in this business were never more noticeable. A month ago, carnations were a drug, going to the push carts and dead carts, but the cold weather gave the crop a new lease of life and brought them again to the front, at least for a short time. A few asters are on the market, but we doubt if they will arrive in any considerable quantity for some time to come. Gladioli are now arriving and the supply will be on the increase from now on. The week of the Fourth is always considered slow in this market, so it seems likely that there will be enough flowers to go around. During the past week the school commencements made some business, but much less than in former years. The weather of the past week was somewhat warmer, but yet cool for midsummer.

July 1.—The week and month opens with an unfavorable outlook for the trade. The week of the "Glorious Fourth" has never brought much business to the florists; the supply of stock has increased with no corresponding increase in demand, and a deluge of rain is falling, so it is a bad day. Good lily of the valley is scarcely to be had and the best on the market brings $10 per 100. Good lilies bring 10 cents per flower. Orchid prices are not so firm.

NOTES.

The federal "work or fight" order and the New York state anti-loafing law, went into effect on June 30 at midnight. One minute later, according to the "Sun," "Assistant District Attorney James Smith, hater of the draft dodgers, hove around the corner of Broadway and Forty-second street and proceeded at once to show the leisure class thereabouts just what a disagreeable combination Provost Marshal General Crowder and the state officials have cooked up for them. And the worst of it is, Jim means it. Expert gunmen with political pull must take their chances with manicured cabaret hounds. Everybody must work—including father, if he happens to be under 50. Today, New York's popular lounging places, tea rooms, parks, pool rooms, libraries and other resorts, will be strangely deserted. Romping cubs under 18 and patriarchal gentlemen more than 50 will be their only occupants. Women and children finally may be able to get seats on the park benches in Washington Square." It would thus appear that anyone who evades Jim's net must be like Joey Bagstock, "tough and devilish sly."

P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine, testifying before the Senate Commerce Committee, June 28, made an interesting statement as to coal. He is an authority on all steamship matters. He said in part: "We are going to be very short of coal all along the Atlantic coast next winter. One reason is that every ship leaving port has to be coaled for the round trip. Every ship is being used for war purposes. The two chief problems we have before us are to ship goods and troops to France and coal to New England. That is vitally necessary to provide fuel for the manufacturing plants. There is also considerable coal being shipped to Chile, Brazil, Uruguay, and the Pacific islands. This, too, is for war business. Every bit of the coal shipped to South America is used for fuel of nitrate and other plants absolutely necessary to the prosecution of the war." Mr. Franklin is also connected with the United States Shipping Board.

Of all the florists of this city, Hession, Madison avenue and 76th street, displays a flag bearing the largest number of stars. Eight of his former employees are now in the service, and all of them are believed to be somewhere in France. Their names and units follow: August Halzschmerber, 360th Inf., A. E. F.; Henry Miller, Machine Gun Batt., A. E. F.; Frank Quinn, signalman, United States Navy; Edgar Moore, 305th Inf., A. E. F.; Martin Matthews, Tank Division; John Allison, 27th Inf., A. E. F.; John Dolan, United States Marines; Herbert Rauh, United States Navy. In so far as they can reach them, Hession and his remaining staff, keep these boys supplied with tobacco and other comforts.

"Winning the war" is a leading idea at the Dards store, Madison avenue and 44th street. To push the sale of War Savings Stamps, a clever and unique window decoration has been devised and arranged by F. E. Evans and J. De Vincent, two of the staff. In the foreground is a trench dugout with barbed wire entanglements shown in front. In the background there is a miniature French village. Overhead is a miniature aeroplane, which is so arranged as to fly in circles, by touching an electric button. The electric current also operates a miniature railway which brings up "ammunition" from the rear. Over all is lavish decoration, with the national colors and a card reading: "Buy W. S. S."

James Bruce, who for several years has been with Leikens, the retailer of Madison avenue and 55th street, has formed a partnership with S. C. Gilbert to carry on a wholesale business at 2188 Broadway. In addition to other good stock, they are now handling a fine line of pink, lavender and mauve candytuft.

Here, as in other parts of the country, stealing automobiles and accessories has come to be a highly specialized industry. On the night of June 28, thieves entered the garage of George Snyder, the retailer of 438 Ninth avenue, removed the tires from his machine, and got away with them.

It is hard to teach an old dog new tricks. When John Weir announced he would take a vacation, we were skeptical, as he was never known to take one in the past. Now we find him in a new position, as buyer for the Colonial Florist's chain of stores.

W. A. Bridgeman, late with J. H. Small & Sons, is now in the Leikens

President Totty, of the Society of American Florists, was in the city, June 29, returning from a business trip east. P. Welch, of Boston, was another recent visitor.

M. Sampson, Jr., who represents the Noe ranges of Madison, N. J., in the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co., is receiving fine stock of the new rose Columbia.

The first asters noticed in the market were brought in the past week by Charles Beckman, of Elmhurst. They wholesaled for 50 cents per dozen.

Louis Schmutz, Jr., of Flatbush, who has been in poor health for several months, will take a vacation for the remainder of the summer.

George J. Polykranas, 104 West 28th street, is handling exceptionally fine pink and white sweet peas.

Nicholas G. Pappas & Co. have taken a part of the store of Gunther Brothers at 110 West 28th street.

J. J. Coan, 115 West 28th street, is receiving good stock of the gladiolus, Pink Beauty.

METAL WREATH FACTORY, 709 FIRST AVENUE, NEW YORK.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., 1129-31 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Henry Hart, the retailer at 1000 Madison avenue, is now devoting a large part of his time to his summer hotel, the Lorraine, at Edgemere, L. I. At the store, it was recently stated that they had been quite busy, the only drawback being the difficulty in getting the right kind of stock.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co., 129 West 28th street, has discontinued business. E. J. Van Reyper, former manager, has accepted a position with Riedel & Meyer, Inc., 49 West 28th street.

Maurice Kleinman, buyer for Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, is back on the job after an extended vacation, and everybody was pleased to see him.

Leo Klein, Lexington avenue at 60th street, receives warm letters of thanks from the hospitals and schools to which he frequently donates flowers.

William Mackie, 105 West 28th street, is receiving exceptionally fine Spencer sweet peas and Easter lilies.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, is handling a fine line of Shasta daisies, also helianthus.

John Weir, the oldest buyer of the wholesale district, is taking a well-earned vacation. A. F. F.

Buffalo.

BUSINESS SATISFACTORY.

Florists in this vicinity worked up to the last minute before saying that summer had arrived. Business during the past two weeks was very active in all lines—weddings, commencements, and funerals, the latter being especially numerous. There were three or four elaborate weddings and a large number of smaller ones where the bouquets were the whole decorations. The supply held up well until last week when there was a shortening and roses were the principal offerings. Carnations were scarce. Sweet peas and swainsonas have been welcome flowers for bride's bouquets. The latter will play an important part next year as a substitute for lily of the valley.

NOTES.

E. C. Brucker, of the W. F. Kasting Co., has been a busy man in the war saving stamp campaign. He has acted as captain in the florists' division and results have been flattering. Emil is a hustler when money is in sight for the good cause.

Carl Butz, who has been manager of the S. A. Anderson greenhouses, has resigned. Carl Grooman is his successor. Improvements in the Elmwood avenue store are contemplated, a new modern building to replace the old one.

Conrad Forbush, of Pine Hill, says this has been the busiest year in his history. Help is very scarce.

W. H. Sievers, the enterprising Genesee street florist, is building a new store.

Vacations will be next in order.

Visitors: J. B. Farenwald and Mr. Jones, of S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa. BISON.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The New Haven County Horticultural Society has abandoned plans for its rose show, owing to lack of exhibits.

Toronto.

BUSINESS FAIR, CONSIDERING CONDITIONS.

Considering that there are no decorations of importance, business keeps up fairly well, and there is a fair supply of stock of average quality to go around. At present we are in the midst of our peony crop, and these give the stores a well filled appearance. Some of the newer varieties, which are now being cut in fairly good sized quantities, are splendid acquisitions to any florist's stock and command good prices. American Beauties are now in good crop and some excellent stock is being cut of the special grades. Ophelia, the florists' rose, is also fine, while most of the other varieties show that their season is near the end. Carnations hold up remarkably well. Lilies are fairly plentiful, and there are enough orchids and sweet peas to fill orders. A large number of varieties of outdoor stock are now coming in, so that the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

The outlook for the coal situation for the coming winter is not propitious at present. The fuel controller has sent out circulars demanding the tonnage used the past three years, and, although we are advised that we will be allowed 70 per cent of our former yearly requirements, this quantity is in no way assured. There is very little anthracite coming in at present, and, being a cold, backward season, the supply is used up daily and orders that were placed two months ago have not been filled. A number of growers say they are going to cut down considerably, and as far as the trade is considered this should prove a benefit, as it will stop the cut rates so prevalent in this city.

All are looking forward to the outing of the retail florists' club, July 17, at Centre Island, and to which all the trade and their friends are invited. An interesting programme of 16 events has been arranged, and after the games and refreshments, dancing will be the order until 10:30 p. m. Owing to the regulations of the food controller, there is some uncertainty as to what refreshments may be used, but we will know definitely at the next meeting of the club, which is on July 8. So, all come.

The bedding plantmen have had a record season, and all stock has been cleaned up. There was a decided shortage of geraniums and they commanded good prices; $3.50 per dozen for some of the best stock was had in many instances, and, with the shortage of bulbous stock which is expected for next season, large preparations will be made for another year.

JUNE DEMAND LIGHT.

During June, business has been extremely dull, stock of all kinds being very scarce, prices ranging as follows: Roses, $1.50 to $3.00 per dozen; carnations, $1.50 per dozen; sweet peas, $1.50 per hundred; snapdragons, $1.00 to $2.00 per dozen; gladioli, $2.00 to $3.00 per dozen; dahlias, 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen.

NOTES.

Baum's "Home of Flowers" will begin cutting and making usual eastern shipments of gladioli within a few days. Their very efficient bookkeeper has been called to the colors and left for Camp Gordon, June 25.

A. H. Dailey is now harvesting some excellent potatoes and beans. He is anticipating closing his greenhouses during the extreme cold weather, and will bring on an early crop of sweet peas and bedding plants.

C. W. Crouch Co. has given up its Gay street store and moved to 317 West Clinch street, formerly occupied by Baum's "Home of Flowers." This firm is showing some choice America gladioli.

A. J. McNutt has been cutting some very fine Ophelia roses. Mrs. Rosa Hall Ryno reports very good business but shortage of help.

THE world's crop conditions indicate larger yields this year than in 1917.

S. D. WOODRUFF & SONS, of Orange, Conn., are now owners of the Aabling-Boyce Seed Co., Seattle, Wash.

NEW ZEALAND spinach is the only successful all-season variety in the south, thriving in hottest weather.

REPORTS of June 30 from Pacific coast growers, indicate some damage to onion from the hot weather of June 26-28.

RICE planting in Florida is proceeding on an increased scale. It is one of the surest and best crops for the farmer.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—James Vick's Sons have moved to more commodious quarters in the Wetmore building, 97 St. Paul street.

CHAS. D. BOYLES is now in the government service at Hoboken, N. J., having charge of important railroad and dock work.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The Hallawell Seed Co. is making extensive improvements in anticipation of heavy business next season.

FISHKILL, N. Y.—W. B. Hayt, traveler for the Jerome B. Rice Seed Company, has returned from his long season's trip and will take a rest in the Rip Van Winkle country.

A DUTCH invoice for spinach seed just arrived, amounting to $300, carries a so-called "export premium" expense of $200 imposed at The Hague, two-thirds of the first cost of the seed.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Kellogg Seed Co. is completing the finishing touches on its new elevator at 186 Florida street, the final electrical equipment having been installed during the past week.

TOLEDO, O.—October clover was five cents lower, July 1, closing at $13.55. Cash and September timothy were 10 and 15 cents higher, at the following prices: Cash, $4.00; September, $4.65; October, $4.20; December, $4.25; March, $4.60; April, $4.40.

ACCORDING to the London Gardeners' Chronicle, the seeds advisory committee of the British food production department states that England will do well to follow the example of the United States in reducing, as far as possible, the number of varieties of seeds hitherto handled by the trade.

Presentation to President Bolgiano

At the Chicago Convention of the American Seed Trade Association, June 18-20.

The regular business of the convention being concluded, Ex-President Watson S. Woodruff, accompanied by W. P. Hall, advanced to the front, and addressed President Bolgiano as follows:

"After the undertaker has taken care of the corpse, I have a word to say, Mr. Bolgiano. This association, I believe, has now celebrated its thirty-sixth birthday; and for thirty-six years I think, prior to this past year of 1917, our vice-president or second vice-president has always been Frank W. Bolgiano. He would oscillate from first to second and from second to first, and finally back to first; so that it got to be just as regular as the clock; and it became known that there was just one way to break that spell, that we never could break it unless we finally put him in the presidential chair. So last year that spell was broken, and he was inducted into the office of president of this organization. Now things have happened in the last 12 months. Frank, whether he admits it or not I do not know, has had designs for political preferment; and he has never gotten anywhere! I will tell you why. I defy contradiction; I know whereof I speak. He has never been able to gather together a corporal's guard from the democrats in the city of Washington that would vote for him; and still, he has had aspirations, and when this honor came to him a year ago we could just barely see his countenance change, and that smile has been firmly frozen on his countenance ever since; but seriously, I say to you, Mr. Bolgiano, that your administration is unique. You have been elected today to succeed yourself, something that has never happened before, in the history of this organization, not once before, for anyone to succeed himself. No man has ever before been re-elected to succeed himself following his own administration; there have been two cases where presidents have been re-elected after the lapse of some years between administrations; so that history will record in the American Seed Trade Association that its war president was Frank W. Bolgiano, and on behalf of this association we will now unveil what your friends in this association have seen fit to tender to you, this tea-set of sterling silver. One of Frank's failings is nervousness, but no more of that, for the five o'clock tea will settle that. We charge you to use this when your nerves are upset. It is appropriately inscribed as presented to you by the American Seed Trade Association at its annual convention, Chicago, 1918. Therefore, I want to thank you for an administration so unique as to earn by your merits a re-election to succeed yourself. We shall look for the same big things in the coming year that we have had from you in the past. I want to extend congratulations on behalf of the association upon your unique re-election."

In voicing his thanks, President Bolgiano said:

"I can hardly tell you how the words of my friend Woodruff have touched me today, and how the honor which you have conferred has made me feel, if possible, more humble than I have ever felt before in all my life. Last year, I said we were going to enter upon a year that would be fraught with difficulties, and that it would require patience, time and labor to properly administer the duties of the office of president; yet I did not realize at that time what it was to be. I now look forward, gentlemen, to a year when the very nerve force, the very strength of your president, is going to be called upon; and had I not the assurance of having the same committees at my back, I never would have consented to stand for re-election. Gentlemen, you will never realize the work that was done at Washington last year. I never have met with a party of men who were more unselfish, more patriotic, than the war service committee which you allowed me to have the pleasure of appointing. In again accepting the position of president, I fully realize my inability to accomplish anything by my own unaided efforts. I just regard myself in the light of a pendulum in the clock to keep things going; the wheels are there to do the work. I just oscillate backwards and forwards from one place to another. I thank you for the gift which you have seen fit to make me. It shall be placed upon my table at my home, and when I get blue, as I frequently do, being of a nervous nature, as Watson Woodruff says, I shall look upon it, and be reminded that I have some friends somewhere in the United States.

We reprint the following from The Horticultural Trade Journal of England, issue of June 12. In view of state and federal exploitation of seed corn, nitrate of soda, castor beans, etc., with the co-operation of county agents and others, entirely outside the seed trade, ignoring generally the available aid of American seedsmen, this article would seem to apply to present conditions in the United States.—ED. AMERICAN FLORIST.

Unite before Unity shall be unavailing!

MEMBERS of the Horticultural and Allied Trades and Industries of this country, as sane and patriotic men, know full well that they must make, and they are prepared willing to make, their full contribution of sacrifice to the common cause, but, also, they expect some consideration for their interests—from motives of mere common justice, if for no other reason.

But from some cause, which is most probably the lack of true and proper representation, their claims to consideration, in connection with their vitally important trade, have been completely ignored.

Trade which is their due by right of knowledge, experience, utility and long years of loyal service to the public is being officially diverted on the grounds of so-called but wrongly named "Expediency," into channels which possess no such qualifications.

Injustice made more unjust.

Is not the reply of the Horticultural and Allied Trades and Industries—

"UNITE, BEFORE UNITY SHALL BE UNAVAILING!"

WHEN Food Production in this country has reached the highest level in history it is "touch and go" with the future of the local Retail Seed Trade.

When local Retail Seed Traders should be officially recognised, important factors in the scheme of Food Production, and when their combined knowledge and experience should be intensively employed in the same vital cause, they are, as traders, absolutely ignored, their knowledge officially unutilized, and their trade threatened with whole or partial extinction by the very simple but effectual process of diverting distribution into other channels.

And, for lack of organisation, Seedsmen are watching—literally watching—the commencement of the passage of their business, under official guidance.

Some have rightly read trading tendencies during the past two seasons, but others have been blinded to significant signs by the unprecedented demand for horticultural supplies. In the circumstances, their blindness, or, perhaps, non-desire to see, is excusable. But now they can no longer refuse to see, even if they had the desire—which is far from likely.

THE CARDS ARE DOWN—EXPOSED, FACE UPWARDS.

War Agricultural Co-operative Societies are to be increased in number and strengthened in influence, the ordinary Co-operative Supply Societies are officially encouraged to enter the trade, and Municipalities are to supply Seeds, Fertilizers, etc., on advantageous terms to the buyers.

And while these bodies are actually set up at official instance, or cheered on their way into the trade by official favour—the established, legitimate, experienced medium of distribution is ignored completely.

Indeed, if it were not full-to-overflowing of danger to the Seed Trade, the situation would be humorous.

A trade, consisting of thousands of well-educated men and women, the highly technical nature of whose calling demands a high standard of intelligence, left stranded—high and dry—ignored—and at a time when their knowledge and experience was never so valuable to the country.

And why?

Gather Sweet Clover.

Sweet clover is growing in abundance along the road sides in many parts of the country. A farmer near Coloma, Mo., has secured the crop from a cemetery to haul to his farm and the dry stems with the ripe seed in them will be scattered over his fields and particularly along gullies. Most of the seed is now mature and should be cut at once. The high price of the seed makes it profitable to save the seed from the roadside plants. Sweet clover is one of the best crops to plant upon fields intended for permanent pasture. The bluegrass is always more green and of heavier growth in alfalfa or sweet clover than where growing alone.

Seed Stocks Must Be Reported.

All dealers in seed whose stock at any time during the past year amounted to 500 pounds of vegetable seed or 5,000 pounds of field seed are required to report in the seed stocks survey to be made by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, under date of July 1, 1918. In addition to the survey covering stocks held by dealers, the department announces a vegetable seed-production survey, in which everyone who grows vegetable seed for sale or purchases vegetable seed from local growers or seed farmers is expected to report on the forms sent out from Washington.

Onion Sets At Chicago.

The present indications through the principal set growing districts is not to exceed a four to one yield, which will mean a three to one delivery. Maggots are bad all over. Some fields appearing to have a fair stand, are 40 to 50 per cent smut affected. New ground or land not in sets last year has 10 to 20 per cent smut. The ground is getting very dry, and unless rain falls soon, the yield will be small.

Frost Loss in Indiana.

J. D. Harper, government inspector, reports severe losses in crops as the result of the recent frost in the eastern central and northeastern sections of the state, June 22, as previously announced in these columns, thousands of acres of corn in the northern counties having been ruined, the frost extending to the roots of the stalks.

New Early-Flowering or Winter-Blooming GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye. 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.

15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye. 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.

18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President;

SOUTH BEND, IND.—There was a severe frost through this section June 22 and it is thought the corn and potato crops will be a total loss, especially in the low lying sections.

"POTATO Culture Under Irrigation" is the title of Farmers' Bulletin 953, recently issued by the United States department of agriculture, regarding the growing of this crop in the west.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, July 2.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1.25; celery, crate, $1.50 to $1.75; leaf lettuce, per box, 8 to 10 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $2.25 to $3.50.

New York, July 1.—Celery (state), per bunch, 50 cents to $1.00; cucumbers, 30 to 75 cents per dozen; mushrooms, 40 cents to $1.60 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 10 to 20 cents; lettuce, per package, 35 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Mushroom Food Value.

During the past season many inquiries have been received concerning the food value of mushrooms, according to the annual report of the Ontario Agricultural College, Toronto. This has no doubt been due to a greater or less abundance of the plants in certain portions of the province and also to the campaign for the conservation of food products. In the past, mushrooms have been considered as very nutritious. Sometimes they have been called "vegetable beefsteak" and have been said to have a food value of twice that of fresh vegetables. This high opinion of their food value may be due partly to their delicious flavor, making one eat large quantities. A chemical analysis shows that mushrooms are comparatively rich in nitrogen, and this was taken to indicate that they were rich in proteids. However, more careful analysis shows that much of the nitrogen is in such combination as to make it unavailable for human nutrition.

Careful analysis of the available food material in mushrooms shows that the cultivated mushroom has about the same food value as cabbage, but, as bought on the market, costs at least 25 times as much, and is only about one-tenth as nutritious as lean beef. Some of our wild mushrooms are still lower in food value. The ink caps are less than a fourth as nutritious as the cultivated mushroom and about a fortieth as nutritious as beef. The Morel is about half as valuable as cabbage and one-twentieth as valuable as lean beef.

From the standpoint of foods, the mushrooms, as a class, may be classified as very low in actual food value, but they are excellent as a relish, and their utilization from this standpoint should not be ignored, and is worthy of much consideration.

Vegetable Markets.

Vegetable market conditions as reported by the United States department of agriculture for the period June 25-July 1, showed lighter movement in most leading lines of vegetables and fruits. The peak of the carlot movement of new potatoes seems to have been reached two weeks ago and shipments from Virginia were comparatively light and prices advanced sharply in that section and in North Carolina. Virginia Cobblers reached $6.50 per barrel f. o. b. Norfolk. Bliss Triumph at Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma shipping points ranged steady at $1.40-1.60 per 100 pounds. Prices of white stock in northern markets advanced rapidly, ranging $5.50-$7 per barrel. The Texas onion movement has been growing lighter with prices strong, advancing to $1.75-2.25 for No. 1 Texas Yellow and $1.50-2.10 for No. 2. The carlot movement of cabbage continues on the decrease. Prices in consuming markets tended from $3.50-$4 for Wakefield. Tennessee tomatoes moved more freely and prices were lower in shipping sections. In consuming markets, Mississippi fours ranged $1-$1.40 and Texas stock, $1-$1.25.

Vegetable Breeding in Ontario.

The Ontario Agricultural College reports that it began the breeding of celery in a small way in 1913, and the systematic breeding of cabbage, carrots, beets and onions in the spring of 1914. When the war started, late in 1914, it was realized that the European supply of garden seeds would probably be seriously curtailed. Having already made a beginning in seed growing, it was decided at that time, in view of the war situation, to continue the work. It has, therefore, prosecuted this line of work continuously and with the greatest possible care since that date, guided largely in this matter by the advice of the dominion seed commissioner, who foresaw that the vegetable seed growing industry would require to be actively taken up in Canada. Since that time the seed situation has steadily become worse, until now the European supplies have almost ceased. It is felt that this work of vegetable breeding and seed production is of great importance, and it is hoped to be able to take it up on a larger scale next year. The seed being produced is "stock seed," to be used not for commercial crop production but for future seed growing. In accordance with a plan outlined, it is intended to send the bulk of the celery and cabbage seed to be increased under the more favorable climatic conditions of British Columbia. Last year the college produced four pounds of celery seed of the Paris Golden Self-Blanching variety, which, for market purposes, would be worth not less than $25 per pound.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

THE Georgia peach crop this year is probably the largest on record.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—L. H. Smith, nurseryman of this city, died June 19, aged 58 years.

THE death of John Van Lindley, prominent nurseryman of Pomona, N. C., is recorded in our obituary column this week.

ELGIN, ILL.—It is stated E. W. Carbery will endeavor to dispose of his large supply of high grade nursery stock and retire from business the coming fall.

THE peach crop is generally better in the southern than in the northern states; on the other hand, apple prospects are, on the whole, better in the north than in the south.

THE California orange crop prospects for this year are very favorable. Unless the orange-growing districts are visited by high temperature, indications point to the largest crop of oranges ever produced in the state. Some go so far as to say that with only a normal June drop, the state will produce 25,000,000 boxes of oranges.

Conifers of Northern Rockies.

The Department of Interior, bureau of education, Washington, D. C., has issued Bulletin, 1917, No. 53, entitled "The Conifers of the Northern Rockies," by J. E. Kirkwood, professor of botany in the University of Montana, and which may be obtained from the Government Printing Office, Washington, at 15 cents per copy. The bulletin contains 62 pages with 37 illustrations, devoted to the forests, the species, including pines, larches, spruces, hemlocks, firs, arbor vitae, junipers and yews, with directions for the study of the trees. The Bulletin is intended as a guide for teachers and students and has the recommendation of the secretary of the interior.

Bamboo Quarantine Proposed.

Following the information that dangerous plant diseases, including bamboo smut, not heretofore widely prevalent in the United States, exists in China, Japan, Philippine Islands, South America and a number of other countries, the secretary of agriculture is considering the advisability of prohibiting the further importation of bamboo plants or cuttings thereof from all foreign countries and localities, and a public hearing has been called to be held at 10 o'clock a. m., July 2, in Room 11, federal horticultural board, Washington, D. C., in order that any person interested in the subject of the proposed quarantine may be heard either in person or by attorney.

American Association of Nurserymen.

The forty-third annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 26-28, a brief report of the first day's sessions being given in last week's issue, pages 1188-1189, proved to be one of the best attended and most interesting gatherings ever held by the organization. In his report, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass., secretary-counsel of the association, presented a comprehensive review of all state and federal legislation enacted within the year, affecting nursery stock. The work of the credit and collection bureau, carried on in connection with the secretary's office which had doubled within the year showed collections for the past 11 months amounted to $20,400. The paper by L. D. H. Weld, manager of the commercial research department of Swift & Co., Chicago, on "Marketing Methods," was ably handled and listened to with interest. It was brought out that the conditions affecting marketing costs are influenced by perishability of products, rapidity with which stocks are turned, standardization or uniform grading, seasonal nature of the business and regular trade channels through which goods can be handled.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

An amendment to Article 7 of the constitution was adopted as follows:

The annual membership fees shall be $10 and additional dues for active members based upon annual volume of business, viz.:

$100,000.00 or more.....	$100.00
75,000.00 to $100,000.00.....	75.00
50,000.00 to 75,000.00.....	50.00
25,000.00 to 50,000.00.....	25.00
15,000.00 to 25,000.00.....	15.00
5,000.00 to 15,000.00.....	5.00

The payment of annual membership fees and dues based upon the above schedule shall be made prior to date of annual meeting, and any member making a false report of amount due the association as above provided shall forfeit his membership.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

In connection with the report of the statistical committee, copies of blank forms were presented which had been sent out to nurserymen with a view to obtaining information regarding plantings, young stock coming on, matured stock for market, losses by hail, fire and adverse growing conditions, etc. As returns were as yet very incomplete the committee was continued. The committee on nomenclature reported progress in the work of codifying common names for plants in commerce throughout the world.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., president; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., vice-president; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia., treasurer. Executive committee: C. C. Mayhew, Sherman, Tex., and C. R. Burr, Manchester, Conn. Chicago was again selected as the next place of meeting.

Following a brief address by Osborn Monnet, of the United States fuel administration, in which he urged all members to order coal early, the topic, "War Times and the Nursery Business," brought out several interesting talks, E. C. Hillborn urging the nurserymen to use their organizations in furthering Liberty Loan and Red Cross work, while W. H. Wyman and J. R. Mayhew emphasized the necessity of still greater effort and cooperation.

bringing out strongly the point that the paramount business of the country at the present time is to "whip the Kaiser."

The vigilance committee in its report, presented by Paul C. Stark, chairman, submitted letters written to several nurserymen who had been guilty of violating trade ethics, and the replies received indicated that such practices would be discontinued.

The committee on hail insurance, through its chairman, Frank Weber, reported that it could not as yet make any recommendations, and was continued.

"The Retail Salesman" was the subject of an interesting paper read by E. H. Smith, York, Neb., who designated the 10 most important qualifications of a successful nursery salesman as being sobriety, health, honesty, confidence, management, neatness, system, optimism, industry and perseverance.

The report of the legislative committee embraced an account of the hearings at Washington, D. C., May 28, 1918, regarding the exclusion of nursery stock from foreign countries, and particularly such items as are imported with balls of earth on the roots, at which hearings there were present not only representatives of the American Association of Nurserymen but a committee of the Society of American Florists. It was announced that the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States department of agriculture, was now conducting experiments looking toward a solution of the nursery stock importation problem. Following the report, Alvin E. Nelson, Chicago, spoke on "Costs, Profits and Income Tax." Arthur H. Hill also spoke briefly on the same subject.

The committee on resolutions in calling attention to the loyalty of the members of the association to our country and bending every energy and devoting their substance to winning the war, referred to the members or their sons now in service in the trenches and passed a resolution that one or more pages of the annual report be set aside as a Roll of Honor, upon which are to be inscribed the names, home addresses, business connections and army commands of all members of the association, or the sons or employees of members, who are serving their country at the front. All members are requested to report such names and information to the secretary promptly. The committee pointed with pride to the name of Lloyd C. Stark, past president of the association, now leading American forces in France to victory for the Allies, and a copy of a letter in acknowledgment of one received by the association at its opening session from Major Stark, and sent to him on the firing line in France, was read.

SERVICE TREES.

Chairman Robert Pyle, in presenting the report of the press committee urged the planting of local service trees, as a publicity measure which would benefit the trade, naming the trees after the local men serving with the colors, and the suggestion was accorded generous approval. One Chicago newspaper in commenting on this movement during the convention exploited a Liberty avenue of suitable trees in every community, large and small, commemorative of the people's great sacrifices during the war.

ADDITIONAL EXHIBITS.

In addition to those listed in last week's issue, exhibits were staged as follows during the closing days:

I. Hicks & Sons, Westbury, L. I., advertising literature and copies of nursery advertisements used the past season. This firm is a strong believer in publicity and made its exhibit for the express purpose of encouraging the grower to better the nursery business by the liberal use of printer's ink, which it has found to be very profitable.

Winterson's Seed Store, Chicago, vase of phlox grown at E. F. Winterson's home in Highland Park, Ill.

J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., peach pits.

Savo Manufacturing Co., self-watering flower and plant boxes.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., vase of new rose, Columbia.

CONVENTION NOTES.

Robert Pyle, of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., visited Lake Geneva, Wis., after the convention and addressed the local horticulturists on timely topics.

Curtis Nye Smith closed his election bets Friday night and left on a fast train for Boston.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Begonias of Lorraine Type.

The early rooted plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and its many fine varieties will now need shifting into 3½-inch pots, and should be given a little stronger soil than the young stock was potted in, but the manure used should be well rotted, and, where obtainable, a generous addition of leaf-mold. As the plants grow, space them out so that they will not become drawn and so that there is a good circulation of air around each plant. They will need a little shade on the glass for a few weeks yet, but it should not be too heavy. As the nights become cool it is well to close the frames down if they are outside, or if in the greenhouse close the ventilators, leaving a small crack of air on, or the house will sweat, which is not at all beneficial to begonias, as it is very apt to cause spot on the leaf. If this occurs remove the leaf at once. Care should be taken in the watering not to wet the foliage any more than possible.
The later rooted stock will not need potting up until later, but all the growth possible should be obtained by giving them the best of attention. If the grower has not stock enough on hand, now is the time to purchase before the plants are shifted into large pots, when the price will be higher and the transportation charges increased.

Pyrethrums.

An early summer flower that is very showy and beautiful, ranging in color from white to the deepest scarlet, with all the intermediate shades, is the Pyrethrum roseum, and it is being much more grown every year for cut-flower purposes. The best flowers are to be obtained by buying named varieties, but good selected seed will give fair satisfaction and many handsome flowers. The greatest trouble in growing these plants in the north is the danger of winter killing and crown rot during extremely wet spells in hot weather. Seed sown during July and August and wintered in houses or cold frames will produce plants that will flower next summer. Obtain the best seed possible and sow in flats and as soon as large enough pot in 2½-inch pots. These can be grown on in a frame until cold weather comes on, when they can be securely covered or carried into a cool house and wintered under a bench, started in March and planted out as soon as secure from frost, and will flower in June and July.

Asparagus Baskets.

There is always a good call for hanging baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri and there is nothing more decorative in a store or greenhouse than these beautiful baskets when well put up and when they are growing nicely. The young 3-inch stock will make nice basket work. The wire basket frame should be of good size, eight inches in diameter at least. Line the outside with green sheet moss, which makes a much better appearance than sphagnum, and then fill with good rich soil and plant the young plants in this.
The basket, after planting, should be placed in a warm, moist house to encourage rapid growth; a house with a temperature such as palms are grown in is about right. They should be frequently syringed, and as soon as the long fronds have made a good growth they can be removed to lighter and cooler quarters.

Hydrangeas.

The young stock that was propagated this spring can be grown either for Easter blooming with a single stem or for summer blooming with three or four heads. The plants should be now potted in 4-inch pots and plunged in a frame, where they will receive attention. They should have a good rich soil and a strong, sturdy growth encouraged. For those that are to be bloomed early, as soon as the pot becomes full of roots a little liquid manure will help the formation of a good strong bud. Those that are wanted for summer blooming, the tip can be rubbed out and branches will form. Leave the plants outside until the first light frost, which will harden off the wood, and they can then be stored in a cool house or pit, where they will not freeze. Those wanted for Easter will have to be placed in heat by the first of the year.

Sweet Scented Geraniums.

The grower who has a stock of rose or other sweet-scented geraniums can turn them to good account by planting them in a bench in the greenhouse and can obtain some fine sprays for winter cutting. The green is very much appreciated by the best trade and there is always a demand in the stores catering to that class for more of this than can be obtained. The sprays are cut 12 to 14 inches long and are used in the boxes of cut flowers. There is also a demand for the leaves, to be placed in the finger-bowls at luncheons. It is easily grown in a cool house and very rapidly makes long sprays fit to cut. The plants can be set about eight inches apart, which will give them plenty of room, provided the sprays are cut as soon as they are long enough for use.

Black Ants on Lawns.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What can you recommend to kill black ants around trees, on stone walls and house porches. We are troubled with millions of them and have tried gasoline, pepper, soap and kerosene but without result.

New York.

A. E.

In Farmers' Bulletin 740, recently issued by the United States department of agriculture, attention is called to the fact that although the common garden or lawn ants which build their little crater nests around houses are distinct species from the true house ants, they may find their way into the house. Their colonies may be destroyed by drenching the nests with boiling water or injecting a small quantity of kerosene or coal oil into them. Where larger areas are affected it is sometimes advisable to spray the lawns with kerosene emulsion or with a very strong soap wash prepared by dissolving any common laundry soap in water at the rate of one-half pound to one pound of soap to a gallon of water. Another method is to inject bisulphide of carbon into the nests, the quantity of the chemical depending upon the size of the nest. After the bisulphide of carbon has been injected, the entrance to the nest should be closed by the foot in order to retain the chemical, which will then penetrate slowly through the underground channel and kill the ants. Although its fumes are disagreeable, they are not poisonous to man and the higher animals.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

This is the windup of the season, the time to take an inventory, so as to properly balance the books. To many, this going over, and taking account of stock is a very tiresome job that is put off from time to time, and often not started at all. Finally, the conclusion is, "What's the use? we have just about the same as last year, let it go at that." This is a great mistake, for in addition to obtaining the money value of the stock on hand, a careful inventory will nearly always show up some indiscreet buying, and reveal a lot of unsold stock, that for some reason, such as lack of proper display or featuring, has not sold and must be carried over.

All shop-worn baskets, and other goods a trifle damaged, should be set aside, and at the first opportunity, given a coat of paint or gilt. Many baskets lacking a foot or having a loose handle, can be easily repaired, and in their new dress are almost as good as new. Fancy goods of all kinds, for which there is little or no demand at this time, should be protected in cases or wrapped up and put away to be brought out in the fall.

An early start is important these summer days, as the great majority of the work is for funerals, all to be made up and delivered early. To see that the stock required is ordered or arranged for the day before, is a great help, as good flowers of all kinds are always scarce at this season, and "Johnny on the spot," when the boxes are opened, gets supplied if there are no orders ahead.

Give the delinquents another call before all the money goes for the summer vacation trips. Well written appeals, diplomatic but firm, will often bring a favorable response. Always use a plain envelope, as a business heading will nearly, if not quite, defeat your purpose and find its way to the waste basket unopened. We know of one storeman who had very good results from a form letter, which placed him in a position of needing money badly to meet a coming obligation just a day or two ahead. This was always sent special delivery and brought a quick reply with all or something on account when there was any chance of its coming at all. A last resort is where the customer has sent something to a friend—a gift or funeral flowers. A threat to collect from them, will in most cases at once, bring the settlement.

The show window should be made as near fly-tight as possible with netting. A few minutes with the swatter every morning will clean out those that straggled in the day before.

A few palm leaf fans are good stock to carry, being received very gratefully for use while in the store by customers these hot days.

Gladioli will be found good stock at this time. They are seasonable and showy and sure to give satisfaction. A spray of well opened gladioli, with a background of cypress leaves makes a very showy funeral spray, while for a table decoration, shortened well flowered stalks, arranged in an English flower block in a shallow bowl are sure to make a hit.

Competition.

In every large community there is to be found a number of flower shops. These vary in size and amount of business done. In some cities one name will be found to have won undisputed leadership, in others two or three firms will lay claim to the title, and if the race is fair and above board these are all benefited in the struggle for supremacy.

There is a rule in business that one must not stand still; no matter how fast the pace last year, the records of the succeeding period must show an increase. How to keep one's business going forward all the time, each year showing a gain over that of the previous season, requires constant supervision and vigilance, keeping each department up to its highest efficiency.

Gaining business in competition with one's neighbor is thought by many to be entirely a matter of difference in price, and working on this principle they keep their figures on a lower level, hoping to make up the necessary profit in larger sales. Suppose that the trade in any large city or community agreed to a range of prices and that these were actually lived up to by every one, nothing being sold below the schedule. What would the low-price man then do to hold or increase his trade? He would say to his men: "Well, boys, we cannot sell less than Brown, so we will have to present our stock in the best possible manner and make it look worth more than we ask for it. We will have to keep our windows right up to the mark all the time. We must make the interior of the store more inviting and arrange our stock so that everything is well presented. We will be the first to carry all seasonable stock, looking ahead to get the earliest good roses, chrysanthemums, violets, sweet peas, gardenias, etc., as they come into the market. We will paint the front of the store and have the sign relettered and get uniforms for the chauffeur and the boys. We need to be more prompt in our deliveries; there was too much complaint about this last year. We must also be quick to attend to any complaints from customers; always ask if that last box of flowers was not beautiful and how their plants are doing, etc. We cannot afford to lose any customers from real or fancied omissions of the service on our part."

This is the kind of competition that counts. Beat your neighbor out with better service, attention to every detail, in quality and freshness of flowers, in artistic arrangement and originality of design. When the confidence of your trade has been secured by such good service you will not have to worry about prices nor the increase in business. The satisfied customer is the greatest possible asset to a business. When flowers are mentioned their florist's name is at once put forward as the best place to procure just what is needed. It is personal promotion and advertising that is invaluable, yet does not cost a penny.

To be first in the race is not as easy as it looks. Every ounce of exertion must be used to attain the goal, and even when it is the name that attracts, instead of the flowers, there must be no let-up. The oil of close attention must lubricate the machinery at all times to avoid troublesome knocks and to keep things running smoothly.

Shipping and Delivery Labels.

The florist with a shipping and delivery trade is very liable to run out of address labels when business becomes brisk at any special season, and it is well to look into the stock now and order a new supply to cover the busy season close at hand. When there is occasion to use shipping labels they are needed in a hurry, and there is no time to print them. For the purpose of florists, wholesale and retail, there is no more serviceable article than the Red Rose Leaf label adopted by the S. A. F., with the legend "Fresh Flowers" in large white lettering. This is a very attractive label, and the size commonly used is $6\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ inches. All special sizes can be made according to order. The American Florist Co., 440 South Dearborn street, Chicago, supplies the above size, printed in two colors, red and black, on good gummed paper, your business card and the leaf, at \$5.00 per thousand, 500 for \$3.35. This label is known to express and railroad men all over the country, and they fully understand the perishable nature of packages bearing this label and deliver them quickly to avoid the costly risk of losses caused by delay.

This window exhibit has attracted much attention from the public, and has been highly commended by Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and other prominent workers in the sale of Liberty bonds, War Saving Stamps and all activities for the winning of the war. Both C. A. Dards and his son-in-law and manager, H. G. CHRYSANTHEMUMS Summer Care.

All of the planting should be finished up by this time. The first week of July should find all plants being grown for cut blooms in their permanent quarters in the benches, and those being grown in pots should by now have received their final potting. Very late propagated plants for short stem stock can be planted as late as August 1, but generally speaking, for the best results, every plant should be in place by July 1.

After planting, the general routine summer work commences in earnest. As soon as the roots get a firm hold of the fresh soil, the plants grow rapidly and in a very short while need to be supported, either by tying to stakes, wire or string, which ever is the method followed. On benches that stand out and can be worked from both sides, the plan of running wires at the base of the plants and overhead, and attaching the plants to upright strings, is the best to follow, but for side benches that can only be worked from one side, it is preferable to use thin stakes attached to overhead wires; also, plants being grown in pots that will have to be moved at all during the growing season, are best supported individually by strong stakes. The supporting should be done just as quickly as the plants are in need of it before they have a chance to become crooked.

Another important part of the work that needs attention very quickly and continually from now on is that of pinching out the side shoots so as to throw all the strength into the main stem. This work needs to be carefully done, especially on varieties like Early Frost, which have a tendency to form more buds than growth shoots just at the present time. When working on varieties that have this habit, it is best to let two or three growths remain for a longer period, so as to be able to select the strongest growth shoot.

Watering is another very important part of the plant's care. After they have become established, especially during very hot, dry weather, chrysanthemums need an abundance of water and liberal syringings to keep them in the best of health. Allowing the plants to wilt for the want of water is a severe check to their growth. On the other hand, extremely wet conditions of the soil at the roots through poor drainage or any other reason, is equally disastrous. Still another important part of the work in caring for the bench plants, is to keep the surface soil open and free from weeds. This can be done by frequent scratchings with the hand scratcher, removing the weeds at the same time in connection with the operation.

MULCHING.

The very early planted stock which have well filled the beds with roots, will now be benefited by having a mulch put on the soil, more as a protection of the roots from the hot sun than as any nourishment to be derived from the mulch, for if the soil was properly prepared, it is yet too early for the plants to be in need of any stimulation. The best material for this mulch is equal parts of well-rotted manure and fine fresh soil. Before putting on the mulch, go over the bed and loosen up the surface with the scratcher, then spread the mulch on evenly about three-fourths of an inch thick and water to settle it in its place.

POT PLANTS.

These being grown for fancy specimen blooms, will be also greatly benefited by mulching, but a richer material can be used; a fresher cow manure with about one-third fine soil makes a good material, but as with the bench plants, proceed with caution, because any condition that will work to the detriment of the roots will spoil a whole season's effort in a very short time. The work of supporting and pinching out the side-shoots of these plants, when needed, is also extremely important, they having been started with the intention of pushing them to the limit, and unless this work is kept up close, there will be a lot of strength drawn from the main stem.

Attend closely to the needs of the plants being grown in bush form; they being now in their final pots, will need close attention as regards pinching back the shoots so as to insure finely formed specimens. The time left for doing this work is only about three weeks, after which it will be too late to do any pinching back. Another attention these plants must receive as they need it is to properly support the branches, so that they will not become broken by syringing and handling.

The pompon and single varieties being grown for cut sprays are about due for their final topping, then when growth commences again, allow the number of shoots the plants are intended to carry to come, removing the balance.

The young succulent growth of the plant will quickly become infested with insects unless the spraying with insecticide is kept up continuously. Attend to this work regularly.

Shea Boston Park Head.

James B. Shea, for a number of years connected with the parks and playgrounds at Boston, Mass., and who has been acting as chairman of the park commission, has been named for the position by Mayor Peters, and the appointment has been sent to the civil service commission for confirmation. The position pays a salary of $5,000 per annum. Mr. Shea has a host of friends who will be glad to hear of his well-deserved promotion.

Freesia Culture.

Richard Bogg, Hartford, N. J., has for many years made a study of freesias. He began hybridizing in 1887, crossing F. refracta alba and F. Leichlinii major both ways. He then worked on the best of the seedlings, aiming to get strength of plant, with size and purity of color in the flowers. He has continued this work intermittently, until he now has bulbs which produce flowers three inches in diameter and of the purest white. The colored varieties have interested him; pretty little flowers he calls them, but too small and the colors rather dull. He thinks some one with a good big bump of patience could bring them up to something worth having. The following account of his cultural methods and experiences will be found very interesting:

"It has been my luck, or rather ill-luck, to grow freesias in three different localities, each having a different soil. In the sandy soil of Bridgeton, N. J., they made rather short flower stems; in the clay soil of Philadelphia, they did the same thing. While in Philadelphia, I heard of Wm. Lukens, in Burlington, N. J., who grew freesias with long stems and got an extra price for them. I went to Burlington on purpose to find out how he did it, but discovered nothing. The only difference I could see was he used a deeper flat and they were further from the glass. We mixed soil, trying to get it like the Burlington kind, but did not succeed in getting long stems. Now I am not very far from that place, and have the same kind of soil, a somewhat sandy loam, and the freesias make nice, long stems under just the same treatment they had in the other soils. Some of the new ones are making strong stems over 18 inches long. Can there be anything in this soil that others do not contain, that the freesia needs for its full development? I am sure I do not know, but give it as a hint to put some one on the track of finding out. Freesias like considerable depth to the soil and rotted vegetable matter mixed in it; also, plenty of water when they begin to make a lot of foliage. If planted too thick, the flower stems are apt to be weak.

"Steen Edwards, Bridgeton, N. J., who introduced the freesia as a cut flower about 1878, importing the bulbs from Europe, grew them on the regular wooden benches, and also on those made of solid earth. As far as I can remember, the freesias did as well on one as the other. The main objection to this plan was that they occupied the benches the best part of the year, for, by the time the bulbs were ripened, it was getting well on toward planting time again. In fact, it is all right to plant again as soon as they are ripe. In that day, all the bulbs to be had were either imported or grown in greenhouses, as none were raised in California.

"Now, by using flats, say four or five inches deep, you have a movable bench, and when they have finished blooming, they can be set on the ground under the edge of a bench, where they will get as much light as possible and perhaps a little sunshine part of the day. Properly attended to, they make just as good bulbs in that position as they would on the benches, or even in California. Of course, there is the danger of their getting too much water, when watering plants on the bench, but even if that does happen occasionally, by accident or carelessness, it will not do as much harm as drying them too fast.

"When a well-grown and ripened bulb is taken up, there will be clustered on it quite a number of smaller bulbs of different sizes. Every one of these will bloom next winter, but of course the small bulbs will not make as strong a plant, nor have as many flowers on a stem as a large one, but at the same time, the bulb will increase in size enough to be rated first class; besides that, it will have its quota of small ones adhering to it.

"The longer the plants are kept in a green, growing condition, the more, or anyhow the larger, the bulbs will be. If fine, large, strong bulbs are wanted, it is best never to let them get dry until they have so far advanced toward the end of their growth for the season, that the foliage can not help beginning to turn yellow.

"Instead of flats the florists of Moorestown, N. J., and vicinity, use six-inch pots. This is a good way, for it gives sufficient depth of soil to make the freesia happy, and it does not take so much work to put a few sticks around the edge of the pots and tie a piece of string round like a hoop, as it does to put sticks and strings in flats or benches to hold up the flowers, and really does the work better.

"Freesias will grow, do well and make plenty of flowers in any kind of soil, but, like many other plants, when they get what exactly suits them, they will show how much they can do, in the way of making a show of bloom. A rather light soil, not too sandy, with plenty of rotted manure mixed with it, seems to suit them. Plant as soon after ripe as possible; it injures a freesia bulb to be exposed to the air for any length of time. If not ready to plant, pack them in perfectly dry sand or soil that has been run through a fine sieve till planting time. Their habit of growth suggests the idea, that in their native wilds, they push their way through a natural covering of leaves. Acting on this notion, for an experiment, I have (when they began to run up slim, like they do at first) packed an inch or two of short weather-beaten, but not rotten, horse manure round their stems, filling the flats above their level with it, to help hold them up. They seemed to like this treatment, doing first class all through the season, and making extra large bulbs.

"The best time to plant freesias is as soon as you can after they are ripe. To have in flower by Christmas they must be kept rather warm, beside being planted early. Use the largest bulbs and never let them slow up for anything. A carnation temperature suits them; the flowers have more substance in that than they do when given more heat and will bloom the last of January or early in February."

Rest Periods Win.

Recently in a trench digging competition, most of the officers worked their men continuously in the regular way. One efficient officer divided his men into three sections. Each section worked five minutes and rested 10 in its turn, and he won easily.

NEW MAMMOTH FREESIA.

Flowers Three Inches in Diameter Grown By Richard Bogg, Hartford, N. J.

THE ROSE.

Starting the Young Stock.

Not later than July 1 all of the young stock should be planted and getting off to a good start, and if the suggestions have been followed in these articles the planting has all been finished by this date. One hardly knows just what to do this season with the coal situation as it now stands with a 50 per cent cut in the amount usually consumed. The grower who can purchase cordwood without transportation (by rail) may be able to pull through better with his 50 per cent allowance, as in all probability the wood can be used during the daytime until the approach of the Christmas holidays (at least in many localities), using his coal supply as sparingly as possible for the night firing. We happen to be one of the small growers, and yet not small enough to get the usual supply, and just about enough glass so that the 50 per cent cut will make us hustle and scheme to keep our heads above water, but I trust patriotic enough to be willing to go up against it for the sake of downing the Huns and doing out "mite" to hasten the termination of the war. So cheer up, fellow growers, and hold tight. We had far better make a temporary sacrifice than to be hurled into almost any situation through slackness. One hardly knows what course to pursue in regard to what to shut down and what to keep going at this time, and we are pruning early on the carried-over stock and trying even harder than ever to have it as good as we can grow it. Perhaps it would be a good plan to prune the houses at once and run some of them until January 1 "full tilt," then cut them out and start them again in the early spring. I repeat, it is hard to advise, and each grower will have to figure out the situation as it looks to him. However, as far as the work is concerned, that should, of course, be handled along the same old lines, and if better stock can be produced than formerly by all means produce it. Do not let the war scare go too deep. Good stock will be in demand this year, I am sure, and the grade and quality have always maintained the price.

Two weeks' drying off, with daily spraying, will condition the wood for pruning, and 10 days or less will do where the stock is to be carried over on the raised benches. If young stock is to be planted, use five inches of soil (fresh soil) under them, whether in the solid borders or raised benches. Clean the benches thoroughly and whitewash them, and we always suggest using plenty of sulphur mixed with the lime when slaking it. It is not necessary to have the lime wash thick, as a thin wash is more penetrating. We go over the dry boards first with a hose and follow along with the whitewash brush, which makes the work far easier and more can be accomplished in a short time. Of course, the repairing should be attended to first, and especially the replacing of the broken lights in the roof. The leaks from the roof will ruin one or more plants wherever they occur. Have the soil packed firmly before attempting to plant. First place a layer of straw over the bench bottom to keep the soil from sifting through the cracks. Use a trowel when planting, and tamp the soil around each plant firmly and leave a dish-shaped depression around each plant for watering. Then they can be watered as one may wish, individually, for some time, and the soil in between the plants will be kept in a fresh condition until several weeks have elapsed, or until the roots begin to work out nicely into the beds. At the same time keep the surface of the soil moist over all the beds, and tie the plants as soon as convenient, and make it convenient to do it soon. These planting suggestions cover the planting of the solid borders also. By the way, be careful in handling the young stock of Sunburst, as the slightest bruise along the main stem is fatal to this variety and will eventually mean a dead plant, though it may be several weeks before they show the effects of the injury; so look each plant over carefully and handle them the same way.

Pruning should be done with an eye to what the wood left will actually produce. And there are pruners and pruners, and then some. Leave several eyes on the current year's growth, and if the plants are "away up yonder," as the saying goes, having been run several years without pruning, they should be cut back quite hard, say about 14 to 18 inches from the ground. We have heard of pruning rose plants with hedge shears, all a foot from the ground. One of the largest growers of roses in this country once told me that he was trying it and had put his laborers at the work. I asked him how the results would be (as it was then late in the fall). He replied that his stock at that time was not nearly so good as formerly, but that he did not lay the fault to the pruning. I did not start "an argument," but was satisfied in my own mind that the hedge pruning tactics would not be repeated on my friend's range the next year. And they were not. Once was enough for him. So, to come back to the pruning for this season, I will say that a properly pruned lot of plants will vary in height as one follows out the different growths according to the prominence of the eyes and the appearance of the canes. All twiggy growths should be removed, and a well pruned plant will have a cleaned up appearance, an open look between the growths, that is hard to describe, but easily noted when once seen. If the beginner is in doubt about how to go about the pruning, he should visit some up-to-date range during the pruning season and look things over carefully. This is the best advice I can offer, and the work should not be guesswork afterwards.

After pruning, the beds should be cleaned off, removing all the old mulch, weeds and trash of any kind; also repair the sides of beds. Then the soil should be gone over and broken up with a hoe. We use the potato hoe for this work (which has tines similar to the spading fork), which leaves the soil somewhat rough. Do not go deeper than two inches, and be sure to keep the surface perfectly level. The plants should be tied first. After hoeing the surface, apply about half a peck of a good grade of ground bone to every 100 square feet of bench surface, give the beds a good soaking, and never at any time after allow the beds to become extremely dry. After the first soaking, the soil should be kept in a medium wet condition until they have made a growth, and this growth pinched. Then, as the growth starts again, they will require a mulch, followed by plenty of water if the plants have made the proper growth.

When carrying over plants on the raised benches, the pruning should be the same as prescribed above, but at least half of the old soil should be removed, disturbing the roots as little as possible, and this soil replaced with a good rich compost, two parts soil to one of manure, with bone added. Just before bringing it in, water also as stated above. E.

Roses and Fuel Conservation.

Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, a suburb of Philadelphia, Pa., has been the scene of many successes in rose growing. Probably more American Beauty roses are grown here than in any other section of the United States. John Burton, Edwin Lonsdale and Myers & Samtman, specialized in this rose from the very first, and were very successful. It is still largely grown by Myers & Samtman, and George and Arthur Burton. George Burton has had wonderful success with his 50,000 plants, until he appeared "letter perfect," but last winter there was a screw loose somewhere, and his Christmas crop went wrong, which just goes to show that you cannot always tell. One year, he used chicken manure with wonderful results; the next season it failed to work. In common with many growers, he reduced temperatures last winter about 10°, and thinks this may have had something to do with it, but is not at all positive. Other roses, particularly Hadley, and Thora, a light sport of Maryland, did particularly well under reduced temperature.

American Beauties require a lot of looking after—tying, disbudding, keeping down spider and black spot, picking off bad leaves, etc., while with tea roses, it seems the less we look after them, the better they do. "You may think this a joke," said Mr. Burton, "but I am planting 5,000 My Maryland to take the place of that many American Beauties. If they pay me as well as Thora, I shall be delighted, as this turns in the best card of any rose I have, and is the least trouble of the lot. My crop of American Beauties for next season will be about 45,000 plants. As the old American Beauty plants are moved to make way for the young stock, they are all taken by hucksters who gladly pay $10 per hundred."

Arthur Burton is having good success with both American Beauties and Mrs. Russell, increasing the latter at the expense of the former. He finds the Russell very difficult to root, and it is hard to get more than 50 per cent of the rooted cuttings to survive or mature after being potted. All the Russell are given a rest a portion of the year. Those brought in for the holidays are then dried off and later cut back, which pruning is carefully done, being to within a few inches of the growth of the previous year. These are brought on much the same as Kaiserin and furnish a splendid spring and summer crop of flowers. All the Russells here are in ground beds. American Beauties are grown on raised shallow benches about 24 inches from the ground. The young stock on the benches for the coming season is from 12 to 24 inches in height and getting away nicely.

Arthur Burton is much interested in heat conservation and believes in substantial covering of all feed pipes. So little heat escaped into his boiler house the past winter that icicles formed on pipes or valves, from which water dripped during the severe weather. In order to get complete combustion of the hot gases in the furnace, he experimented with two-inch pipes, one either side of the furnace about six inches above the fire bed. These came in from the combustion chamber in the rear where they were connected with a cross pipe, which projected to the outside of the brick work. The inside pipes were the length of the fire box, and on the side towards the fire, had a row of drilled holes six inches apart, whose diameters equaled that of the supply pipe. When the fire was under good headway, tongues of flame shot out from each of these holes at least a foot in length, proving that the hot air, becoming mixed with the free gas from the coal, became inflammable and added that much free fuel to the fire. Unfortunately, the pipes being of galvanized iron, soon burnt out in the extreme heat. Such an arrangement made of fire brick, through which superheated air would be drawn by the chimney draft, would no doubt help to consume much of the free gas which goes unconsumed out of the chimney. By lowering temperatures about 10 degrees, which limited production to a certain extent, he was able to save about 30 per cent of the coal.

Carnations and Sweet Peas.

E. C. Marshall, Kennett Square, Pa., has a modern, well arranged place and specializes in carnations and sweet peas. The variety, Mrs. Louise Gude, a new one tried for the first season, is a stronger grower than Yarrowa, producing an abundance of choice flowers of a beautiful bright shade of pink, by far the best variety he has ever grown. Selected Christmas Pink was better than the old variety. Mr. Marshall has found it economical to always plant selected or highest grade seed, as the few extra dollars, first cost, was returned many times in the increased quality and production. Too much water in cloudy weather, too rich soil and too high temperature cause the first buds to drop in early winter. There must be strength and fibre in the stems. When the first buds appear, the temperature is 38°-40° and later raised to 48°-50°. The enormous crops of the spring months were the result of continuous sunshine.

Mignonette was planted in the center between each row of sweet peas as soon as sown, about the first of August. This came along well and was pretty well cut out by Christmas, when the sweet peas became high enough to shade it. In this house, 42x200 feet, tomatoes followed the sweet peas, being planted after Easter. They were at their best in June and early July, in good demand after the southern tomato crops were about done. Seven and a half tons were the crop last summer from this house. The tomato grown is Roney's Selected Comet. A selection of Allen's Defiance was the mignonette. Lettuce had been tried as a catch crop, also radishes along with the sweet peas, but neither, although well grown, had been found salable.

Carnations are certainly at home here. Nothing could be more vigorous or prolific. Ward, Matchless, Enchantress Supreme and Belle Washburn were the varieties, all growing on raised benches.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The partnership in the firm of Marratt & Miller has been dissolved and the business will be continued by J. S. Miller.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The secretary last week visited Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and nearby points, where he found the florists greatly interested in the publicity campaign. He feels deeply obligated to the many members of the trade who in various ways helped to make his work effective. The publicity fund is growing, but, sad to say, slowly. There is a considerable number of florists who have not yet given the publicity movement their thought and aid. All doubt as to the great value of the campaign to the entire trade is removed. The movement is an admitted success, but what has been attained can only be made of a permanent character by the continuation of the good work.

At the start the committees did not think it would be difficult to raise the required $50,000 for a year's work. We are still, while halfway through the year, far short of the goal—and this with, approximately 20,000 or more florists, who are getting the benefit of the work accomplished. Just think of it. Do not get the idea into your head, Mr. Nonsubscriber, that there are plenty of well-disposed florists to complete this fund without your assistance. Did everyone look at the movement this way there would be no fund, no publicity, and ultimately, perhaps no business. And do not think for one moment that our publicity begins and ends with the advertisements in the magazines. Were we required to pay cash for all the publicity we are getting, at its worth, a million dollar fund would not be too large. So why hold back that contribution? The work done is for your benefit, in your interest, and to your advantage, no matter where you are located, whether you are in a large or small way of business, a grower or a retailer. Help the fund, and charge the contribution to your overhead expense, where it belongs on your books—but in reality, it is an investment, and one that pays handsomely. Reach for your check book now, this minute, get the matter off your mind, and become conscious of the fact that you have done your duty, both to yourself and the trade.

There is still on hand a good supply of stickers for use on envelopes, boxes, packages and the like, miniature reproductions of our slogan sign, "Say it with Flowers." There are three sizes, 2 inch, 4 inch and 6 inch long, all in the original colors. There are also a number of sets of lantern slides for use in moving picture houses. There are four slides to the set, each handsomely colored, designed to cover completely any screen on which they are projected. These slides are supplied at $2 per set, and make cheap, but very effective advertising.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Value of Accumulation.

Advertising is only profitable when we once start and then continue, thereby reaching an accumulation both in effect and its importance in our minds, so that when each advertisement appears, one after another, there is something about it that gives prestige and power to the house that advertises. When you once start, keep at it until you feel its effect, then do more as your business and volume will permit. You will create a spirit of good-will that will be worth many times the cost of your advertising by the standing it will make for you in your community.

This good-will spirit in a business, when once built up, is the best asset one can strive for, and it is the same to business as character is to the man. By continual advertising, you are accumulating the effect of your advertising of the past with advertising of the present, building the good-will spirit in one strong chain.

Can you imagine the effect our publicity campaign will have, if we continue? I am reminded of an example of accumulation of Benjamin Franklin, who when he left in his will a fund of $5,000 in 1790 to be invested and reinvested for a century so that in 1907 it had reached $408,000; talk about accumulative value. Keep up the publicity campaign and watch its effect.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman, National Pub. Campaign.

Dr. Whitten Resigns.

Dr. J. C. Whitten, who for 22 years has been head of the department of horticulture at the University of Missouri, has recently resigned to go to the University of California. In noting this, the Joplin, Mo., News-Herald says: "His services to Missouri have been of untold and incalculable value. Doctor Whitten is one of the most able horticulturists in America. Hundreds and thousands of young men of Missouri have availed themselves of the opportunity and received training under Whitten. These men and women have gone to all sections of the state and have led the people of their communities in the production of better fruits. This has proved to be one of the great assets of this state."

The paper criticizes the school system of Missouri, and asks: "Why should the school system of old Missouri rank thirty-second in the school systems of the United States and adds: 'Are we to drag along day by day and year by year and appropriate barely enough money to keep our great university alive?'"

Rob't. C. Kerr Co., Inc., Houston, Texas

The above company, which was organized in March last, held a meeting July 1, at which the following officers were elected: Rob't. C. Kerr, president; A. F. Koehle, vice-president; E. W. Eichling, secretary-treasurer; C. L. Brock, G. W. Hurley, M. C. Walker and Chas E. Hogan, directors. The plans of the company are for growing flowers and plants for the wholesale trade on a conservative basis, selling exclusively to florists. There are being erected on the Kerr property on Westheimer road, 14 houses of Foley construction.

A. F. Koehle, manager, is a man of wide experience, having spent 15 years in growing in the north and central west and 10 years in Texas.

NEGAUNEE, MICH.—There were light frosts here nearly every morning the second week of July.

LANCASTER, PA.—H. A. Shroyer, who had been suffering with eye trouble, is improving, and is now able to be at business.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—A new flower shop at the corner of Main and Bank streets will be occupied about September 1 by James Horan.

LIMA, O.—The Fenegar Flower Shop, 136 North Main street, has been purchased by Fred Calvert, Ernest Fenegar having joined the colors.

OBITUARY.

Rear Admiral Aaron Ward.

Rear Admiral Aaron Ward, U. S. N., retired, died, July 5, at Willowmere, his Roslyn, N. Y., home, after an illness of several months of heart disease. Throughout New York and other eastern states, among commercial and private rose growers and fanciers, the names of Aaron Ward and Mrs. Aaron Ward have for years been household words. The rose, Mrs. Aaron Ward, named for this lady, is well known. At Willowmere, they had established and cultivated one of the finest rose gardens in the country. After his retirement in 1912, Admiral Ward made his rose garden his principal life work, and leading rosarians of this country and Europe have made it the object of pilgrimages. A typical sailor by training and long experience, he followed the sailor habit of keeping a log book in which he recorded the date of planting of each rose bush and its progress. The garden contained thousands of varieties of roses and since 1915 its opening to the public for several days each June has been an annual event. A nominal admission fee was charged which went to war charities.

Admiral Ward was born in Philadelphia, October 10, 1851, the son of Gen. Ward B. Burnett and the grandson of Major-General Aaron Ward of the New York militia, whose name he adopted. He had attended European schools previous to entering the United States naval academy in 1867. He was graduated in 1871. He did brilliant service in the Spanish-American war as commander of the converted yacht Wasp. He was made a rear admiral in 1910. In his earlier career, he had served as naval attaché to the United States legations at Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg, now Petrograd. In 1914, he commanded the relief ship Red Cross, sent to Europe by the American Red Cross with physicians and nurses to aid the sick and wounded. The then Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, awarded him the medal of merit for the aid, as the representative of the Red Cross, which he had brought to Austria-Hungary.

He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Miss Hilda Ward, an artist, and Mrs. Edna Capps, wife of Admiral Capps of the United States navy. Admiral Ward was one of the most democratic, genial and companionable of men and had a host of friends in horticultural circles as well as in other walks of life. Simple funeral services were held at Willowmere on the afternoon of July 7, interment being in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Jan Wildschut.

Jan Wildschut, a native of Holland and representing C. J. Speelman & Sons in this country, who was shot in an apartment house in New York on the morning of July 3, died in the hospital July 5. Though conscious for some time previous to his death, he made no statement. He was 25 years old, and his relatives reside in Holland. His funeral was held, July 8, interment being in Woodlawn cemetery, New York.

A. F. F.

Robert Hooper Pearson.

Robert Hooper Pearson, managing editor of the Gardeners' Chronicle, of London, Eng., died June 11, age 52 years. Mr. Pearson was always a plain, practical gardener by profession, as well as by training, something quite refreshing in this day of garden artists, landscape superintendents and floral engineers.

LISTS thus far available of the luxuries on which it is proposed to levy taxes do not include seeds, bulbs, plants or flowers.

FLORISTS in northern Wisconsin are planning to burn wood up to January and save their 50 per cent coal supply for the finish.

THE June issue of the quarterly Journal of the International Garden Club presents many fine illustrations and much timely reading matter. This publication is free to members of the club and contains a large amount of information valuable to all lovers of flowers and good gardening. Inquiries as to club membership should be addressed to Miss Harriet Johnson, 109 West 82nd street, New York.

The Business Outlook.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s summary of business for the half year ending June 30 contains the following:

"The suggestion lately made in certain quarters that the country's commercial mortality had fallen to such a low point that the pendulum was likely to soon swing upward has been closely followed by the most favorable monthly failure statement, in point of number, that has come out in fully a decade. Even if the 804 business reverses of June should stand as this year's minimum, the showing would be sufficiently remarkable, for so few defaults have not been reported in any previous month back to July, 1907, when the number was 777, and the June liabilities of about $10,600,000 are less than in all months since May, 1910, when $9,600,000 was the showing. Comparisons such as these seem all the more unworthy when the many wartime readjustments are considered, and the 5,889 insolvencies, involving $87,800,000, of the first half of 1918 make the best exhibit for the period in over 10 years. That only 14 of the 48 states of the Union report more failures than last year, when the commercial death rate was relatively moderate, demonstrates clearly that business rests on a solid foundation."

Society of American Florists.

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION, AUGUST 20-22.

The prospects for a successful convention are cheering indeed. In these days of concentrated energy along lines pertaining to the despatch of armies and their provisioning and equipment, we are apt to overlook or belittle the importance of matters concerning civil industries. It is pleasing to note that many of those connected directly or indirectly with the florist trade have no misgivings regarding the stability of business in their respective lines, and are prepared to take advantage of the trade exhibition in St. Louis to increase or renew their relations with the trade visitors at the convention.

Among the earliest to seek reservations at our annual exhibition were the following: Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.; Chicago Carton Co., Chicago; S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

As far as the trade exhibition is concerned, the plan prepared for the postponed National Flower Show in St. Louis last spring, which provided for trade exhibits on customary lines, is still in force; that is, the lower floor of Moolah Temple, where the convention is to be held, will house the trade exhibition, and the layout is unchanged. Copies of this plan were widely circulated, and any who contemplate making exhibits may consider these plans as being in full force. In cases where the plans have been mislaid, prompt application to the secretary for duplicates should be made. The rate for space is 40 cents per square foot, and the locations available are all good. Applications for space should be sent to the secretary's office, as early as possible, for the convention is little more than five weeks distant, and arrangements for it are becoming very active.

A record attendance is expected at the convention, due to the fact that the proceedings will be of more than ordinary interest to florists. A feature of the programme will be an address by a representative of the United States Fuel Administration, who will speak with authority and, undoubtedly, settle many questions which are at present rather disturbing in the minds of many florists.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

John Young in the Twin Cities.

John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, who is touring the country in behalf of the $50,000 publicity fund, which amount the society has set as its goal to collect among the florists of the country, reached the Twin Cities, July 4. Theodore Wirth made a tour of the parks with Mr. Young on the Fourth. Hugh Will and Cal Rice took him in hand Friday, and visited all the Minneapolis florists with him.

A hasty telephone call brought out 25 members of the state society from St. Paul and Minneapolis for a luncheon and reception in his honor at the Elks' club July 5, which took on the aspect of a reunion of old friends, harking back to the time of the convention held here five years ago. In an eloquent manner, Mr. Young explained the advantages of publicity and the successful efforts of the society in behalf of the florists of the country, especially during the critical period of last winter. Nobody could resist his powerful arguments, and the results were a very satisfactory contribution to the fund and many new memberships. Mr. Young's stories brought forth many hearty laughs; stories so well and realistically told that one wonders if they are not personal experiences.

Saturday was St. Paul day. Mr. Young was accompanied by Hans Rosacker, Max Kaiser, Olaf J. Olson and Theodore Wirth, and his visit there was very successful. Mr. Young left Saturday night for Fargo, Butte and the Pacific coast.

MINNESOTA STATE FLORISTS ASSO.,
E. Meyer, Secretary.

Capital Requirements of Corporations.

In its July circular the National City Bank of New York, discussing the War Finance Corporation, says, among other things: "A serious difficulty has been encountered in dealing with the class of cases for which the corporation seems to have been chiefly designed; that is, corporations in need of capital for either refunding or expansion purposes. It has been assumed that bankers would provide the capital wanted in such instances and then recoup themselves by borrowing upon their own notes through the War Finance Corporation, which above its own capital of $500,000,000 would obtain credit at the Federal Reserve Bank. But it develops, as might have been foreseen, that bankers are unwilling to expand their liabilities in this manner. Commercial bankers would be outside their proper field of operation in lending credit for the purpose of providing fixed capital, and investment bankers would find the policy equally impracticable. Their business is not to carry investments, but to distribute them, and they need to have their capital in hand."

Snow at Boulder.

Denver, Colo., July 10.—Snow fell for a quarter of an hour this morning at Boulder, near here, following a cold rain last night. This is the latest that a snowfall has ever been recorded in that town.

Cleveland.SUPPLY IS LIMITED.

A pronounced scarcity of stock is the feature of the market, the supply of roses being limited and mostly of the shorter grades, while carnations are small, of poor quality generally, and but few are received. The first of the local asters made their appearance, July 6. Outdoor stock of all kinds meets with good sale, included in the offerings being gladioli and Easter lilies. Water lilies clean up well daily. Sweet peas are plentiful and meet with fair demand. Greens of all kinds are in ample supply.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Business is good for July is the general report in the wholesale market and much better than anyone expected it would be. Roses are in fairly good supply but clean up nicely right along at high summer prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are in brisk demand and there is a good call for Ophelia, Milady, My Maryland, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst Richmond, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Mrs. George Shawyer, Champ Weiland, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Montrose and all the other varieties grown for this market. American Beauty roses are in fair supply especially in the shorter stemmed grades and are moving nicely. Carnations are none too plentiful. Asters and gladioli are included in the daily shipments and both are in brisk demand at high prices. Lilies are seen at a few of the stores in quantity but there is never any surplus in this line. Sweet peas, calendulas, feverfew, snapdragons, daisies, phlox, gypsophila, water lilies, cornflowers, stocks, cosmos, larkspur, coreopsis, orchids, gardenias, and other miscellaneous indoor and outdoor stock offer a large variety to select from. The wholesale stores closed all day Sunday, July 7, and will continue to do so until further notice. They were kept open until 9 p. m. Saturday for the benefit of the trade which plan will be followed until it is found to be unnecessary owing to the fact that very little business was done after the regular closing hour. Many complaints are being received from out-of-town points in regard to delayed express shipments which it is expected will improve very shortly as conditions are rapidly being readjusted to conform with the new rulings. Many of the employees are enjoying vacations but so far no one in the wholesale market has been affected by the work or fight order notwithstanding rumors to the contrary. Some of the employees expect to be notified to seek other employment and are waiting orders from their draft boards to do so while others seem to think it will not affect them.

NOTES.

Local war gardens will produce a $3,529,380 crop, in the view of a resume issued by J. H. Prost of the war garden committee of the State Council of Defense July 8. There are approximately 4,830 acres under cultivation in care of 238,422 gardeners, it is announced. The organization distributed more than 214,800 pieces of printed matter, gave 682 lectures to 366,635 persons, donated 2,200 acres of space, and 1,500,000 seedling plants. More than 90,000 children were engaged in gardening and 40,000 prizes were distributed as an incentive to effort.

The next Florists' Club meeting will be held at Nic Karthausers' grove, 6656 Ridge avenue, Thursday evening, July 18, at 8 o'clock. Every one in the trade is cordially invited to attend, particularly the retail florists who are hereby given a special invitation. One of the prominent business men in the trade says that he cannot understand why the retail florists do not attend the club meetings, especially when the topics discussed generally concern them most. How many will be at the next meeting?

The genial Tom Wolfe, of Waco, Tex., stopped off here a few hours this week enroute to the Elks' convention at Atlantic City. His many friends will be pleased to learn his health has greatly improved. Tom is justly proud of a splendid gold watch, chain and charm presented to him when stepping aboard the train for this trip by the Elks of his home city. We were about to write native city for home city when we recalled that Tom is a real Indian, born in Hindostan.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association will be held at the wholesale establishment, 182 North Wabash avenue, Monday, July 15, at 3 p. m., when the election of officers, including four directors, will be held. Paul Klingsporn, manager of this concern, is well pleased with the business enjoyed the past year ending June 30, when the total sales were the greatest in the history of the firm.

George Wienhoeber is the proud possessor of a new home at 5963 Winthrop avenue which he bought a few days ago. Mr. Wienhoeber has been unusually happy all this week over the arrival of a baby girl at his home which is number three in his family. A new Ford delivery truck decorated a beautiful golden brown was just added to his delivery service.

Zech & Mann are handling a good supply of fancy asters the first of which arrived early last week. They are in good demand and clean up quickly each day.

Peter Dahm, who is with the National army at Rockford visited his folks at Morton Grove, July 6. Philip Dahm is with the American troops in France.

C. O. Wilcox, of the W. W. Barnard Co., returned from a business trip through Michigan in time to spend the Fourth with his family.

Miss Nettie Parker, secretary of A. T. Pyfer & Co., is back from a few days' visit with Miss Frieda Gebhardt at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Fritz Barr and family, of Highland Park, have rented a cottage at Lake Zurich, where they will spend the summer.

Otto W. Frese received so many complaints from Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s out-of-town customers in regard to delayed shipments due to the poor express service that he called personally on Mr. Gurley, general manager of the American Railway Express, on June 9, who gave him an immediate hearing and went into the situation fully. After hearing Mr. Frese's complaint Mr. Gurley decided that the situation was serious to the florists and immediately told his men to disregard the routing book and advise the wholesalers to adopt the old system, which every one will agree is by far the best. Mr. Frese is more than pleased with the result of his visit, which was the most welcome news the wholesalers heard for some time. C. L. Washburn says that the delay in Bassett & Washburn's shipments amounted to a loss of several hundred dollars last week, which seems to hold good for the market in general, especially where the shipping trade is a factor in the business.

The civil service board of the West Park commissioners will hold an examination for gardener, Class C, Rank 2, Division Z, July 22, at 9 a. m., at Garfield park pavilion. The original entrance pay is 37½ to 50 cents per hour, open to men between the ages of 21 and 55 years, regardless of residence. Applications which must be filed in the office of the board before 12 o'clock noon July 20, in the office of the board in Union park, may be obtained at the office of the board, or at the West park playgrounds. The duties of gardener include the planting, pruning and general care of trees, shrubs, perennials, lawns and outside gardens, and occasional supervision of laborers in related work.

Harry Gardiner, formerly with A. T. Pyfer & Co., who is with the colors at Camp Gordon, Ga., writes that he has passed the physical examination and is now a full fledged soldier. He adds that the "eats" are fine and that he has had peaches and cream for breakfast on several occasions. Chas. Evert, also of A. T. Pyfer & Co., is with another section of the army at Camp Logan, Texas.

Mike Poletsos is now sole proprietor of the store doing business under the name of the Chicago Florist at 35 East Adams street, having bought out George Rozakles' one-half interest July 1. Mr. Poletsos is planning on opening a new store in the Chamales building, across the street from the Levenson Brothers had an order for a large harp from the employees at Riverview Park, which was sent to the funeral of J. P. Warren, president of the Showman's Outdoor Exposition, held July 3. The harp was six feet five inches high and the emblem colors were gold, blue and white. The centre was made of marigolds and the background of blue bachelor buttons and white sweet peas. The base consisted of cut sprays of white baby rambler roses and Harrisii lilies, artistically finished off with leucothoe, sprengeri and plumosus. The handle of the harp, which was four yards long, carried the wording of silver pearl letters "Comrade of All Riverview Boys." The harp was one of the most beautiful pieces seen at the funeral, and was a credit to the designer.

J. A. Budlong has had such heavy cuts of roses the past week that the greater part of the grading was left to the boys at the store. Manager Schupp is an expert at this job and set the pace for the rest of the force.

Miss O'Neill, who is keeping books for a teaming company, visits her friends in the wholesale market occasionally, especially the force at George Reinberg's, where she used to have charge of the office.

Wietor Bros. are cutting quite heavily in roses, particularly Killarney, which are of fine quality for this season of the year. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Sunburst are in brisk demand here.

SALES AND SUPPLY ABOUT BALANCE.

Supply and demand for the past week were about equal. Roses are scarce and the quality poor. The supply of carnations is decreasing as quite a few growers have begun to throw out, and the few good ones that arrive, are moved at good prices. Lily of the valley and orchids were short. Good outdoor stock of hardy delphiniums, centaureas, gaillardias, Shasta daisies, etc., are now being displayed in the show windows to good advantage.

CLUB MEETING.

As the first Thursday of this month, regular club night, fell on the Fourth, and having been informed that John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, and Geo. Asmus, of Chicago, would be in town on Tuesday, July 2, President Kennedy of the local florists' club issued a call to hold the regular meeting on that night. A good number responded, including several out-of-town, as well as local non-members. The few minor matters were soon dispensed with, thus devoting the greater part of the session to S. A. F. and national publicity campaign work. Mr. Asmus, in behalf of the publicity campaign, cited in detail what the object of this great work meant to everyone connected with the florist business, and it was everybody's duty to give this matter his whole hearted moral and financial support. A person could read a good sized book on this subject, but it would be a poor substitute for the eloquent and forceful manner in which Mr. Asmus appealed to those present. Mr. Young talked on the topics, concerning fuel, work of the National League for Woman's Service, membership in the S. A. F. and co-operation as experienced on his present mission throughout the country. Space does not permit going into details, but suffice to state that during a short recess held, nearly every one present who was not a member of the mother society, signed an application blank, thus proving first that Mr. Young's remarks struck home, and secondly it is all in the way you put it. Among the visitors present were Fred Bliese, proprietor of the Waukesha Floral Co.; Otto Sylvester, of Oconomowoc; Fred and George Reutchler, of Madison, Wis.; Geo. Mohn, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and Mr. Scott, superintendent of the Cudahy Floral Co. It is to be regretted that all the members of our club were not present, for it was so instructive that no person should have missed it.

NOTES.

Otto Sylvester, Sr., who came in for the club meeting, July 2, says that he never experienced such a busy season in funeral work as the past one. At times he uses all he grows, plus what he derives from this market.

A visit to the Waukesha Floral Co.'s place found them cleaned out completely in the line of bedding stock of which they had a large supply. Two long frames of cyclamens in 2½-inch pots look very fine.

A. Leidiger, of the Edlefsen-Liediger Co., returned July 6 from a two weeks' vacation spent with his family at Cedar Lake.

Adolph Rice, with Holton & Hunkel Co., is enjoying a week off.

LIMITED SUPPLY SELLS READILY.

The market is extremely short of stock and what little arrives is taken up very quickly, practically before it is unpacked. Ophelia and Russell roses form the bulk, but a few carnations, daisies and gladioli are to be seen. Lilies are quite plentiful; in fact, they are about all that the wholesalers are getting in, while the gardeners are still cutting some delphiniums, larkspurs, hardy phlox, cornflowers and snapdragons which help to carry on the general run of work. A good week for funeral orders has been reported and many artificial wreaths with a few natural flowers are seen. Growers are busy cleaning out their houses, and in most cases the chrysanthemums are planted and doing nicely. Others, however, who are planning for carnations are not nearly ready for them. One good report is that most of the ranges are well supplied with winter requirements of coal.

NOTE.

A fire on the night of July 7 in the Altman building caused a loss estimated at $6,000 in the store of the Alpha Floral Co., located on the first floor of the building. While the damage was principally by smoke and water, ribbons, chiffons and flower boxes as well as much madeup material for future use was destroyed.

BUSINESS SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

Business was quiet the first part of last week, but the latter days witnessed the demand living up to a very appreciable extent, with funeral work making the heaviest inroads into the florists' stock, and counter trade was never better at this season of the year. However, there is a noticeable absence of weddings and decorations which were so welcome during the month of June, and also orders for commencement flowers are greatly missed. Although there are plenty of flowers with which to meet the demand, yet there is no surplus going to waste.

NOTES.

Anthony Wayne ferns, the seedling of A. J. Lanternier, has been meeting with a fine sale, both locally and out-of-town. Long-stemmed Shasta daisies and auratum lilies were featured at their store. This firm donated flowers for the benefit of the Red Cross at the Country club last week.

Miss Bonnie Doswell has returned to her duties at the store of the Doswell Floral Co., after a week's vacation. This firm is making a fine display of summer flowers, and donated a large number of flowers to the Country club for the benefit of the Red Cross, July 4.

Clem Lanternier and wife have gone to Chicago on a motor trip of a week's duration. Roy Brown and wife are very happy with their new baby girl. Mrs. Brown was Miss Ruth Lanternier before her marriage, and was well versed in both greenhouse and store work.

The Freese Floral Co. had a patriotic window decoration, with the American flag done in red, white and blue flowers occupying the center. Henry Freese, manager and owner of this store, has closed his residence at

New Haven, Ind., and moved to this city.

Mrs. Mary Patten and her grandson, Master Joseph Flick, have gone to Toledo, O., to visit Mrs. Patten's daughter, Miss Helen Patten of The Flower Shop, at her summer home on Lake Erie.

The Flick Floral Co. is realizing good returns from their planting of several houses of early tomatoes, as the crop is yielding heavily, and these are wholesaling at from 18 to 24 cents per pound.

The force at the Vesey greenhouses has finished planting the chrysanthemum plants, and is cutting a fine crop of summer roses and lilies. A big run on funeral work is reported here.

Edgar Wenninghoff is showing some fine specimens of the Peace gladioli. Yellow calla lily plants have attracted considerable attention in his window during the week.

CALL LARGELY FOR FUNERAL WORK.

The summer dullness is making itself felt and it is only an increased activity in funeral work that is keeping the trade alive at present. Flowers of all kinds are very scarce. Roses have practically stopped blooming and carnations are limited in number and poor in quality. Some Bermuda lilies may still be seen. Gladioli alone of all the blooming flowers, seem to be plentiful. The plant trade is about over. The planting season is over and the only call is for an occasional plant for table decoration. All of the prominent wagon venders have ceased operations for the season. Growers are now putting in the time clearing and replanting the benches for next season and making such repairs as are necessary for a curtailed capacity in most cases.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co. is finding the employment of colored labor for general utility work in the greenhouses satisfactory. This firm reports a scarcity of carnations and is compelled to rely on out-of-town shipments to help meet requirements. The firm is now enjoying a fine shipping trade in gladioli, much stock going to Cincinnati. Business at the local store has held up well and equally good reports are received from the Chattanooga branch.

Geny Bros. are experiencing a shortage of supply and are compelled to resort to shipments from the outside to fill orders. Funeral work here has been unusually heavy and added to this during the past week were a number of wedding orders. They are doing away with their North Nashville range as a conservation measure. Both Oscar and Leon Geny, with their families have gone to their summer homes at Old Jefferson Springs.

SUPPLY INCREASES IN ALL LINES.

Cut flowers of all kinds are much more plentiful with the arrival of warmer weather, especially roses, carnations and sweet peas. Harrisii lilies are a scarce item, being off crop, but there are numerous offerings of candidum. Carnations are becoming smaller and poorer in quality each day. Due to the exodus of many from the city for Fourth of July celebrations, flower buyers were not numerous and business during the latter part of the week was not brisk. Sweet peas are showing considerable improvement and the same is true of practically all outdoor flowers.

NOTES.

Geo. T. Boucher was one of the most active workers in the war savings stamp campaign. Two new delivery cars have been added to this store's service department.

The women canteen workers are doing good work in distributing flowers to the soldiers on the trains passing through this city on the way to France.

Horace J. Head has returned from a trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

UNUSUALLY GOOD BUSINESS.

It is remarkable the way trade is holding up, and the usual July slump is not yet in evidence. There is a good demand, especially for flowers of the best grade. Roses are still coming and the quality is very good, particularly Ophelia, which seems to be the best summer rose, holding its color and stem equal to any grown last winter. Killarney also continues in good form as do Russell and Shawyer. Some very good asters are now on the market and sell well as most of the indoor stock of the season is over. Gladioli are being received in larger numbers and are welcome at this time and larger shipments are expected from now on. Outdoor stock sells well as it makes a good show and the keeping qualities are excellent. The retailers have some beautiful window displays. Some carnations are still offered but they are small and prices range from $2 to $3 which is high for this time of the year.

NOTES.

Miss Carrie Jordan has purchased a new car and will spend several weeks in a tour of eastern cities.

Joe Seaman is now with Randolph & McClement's East End establishment.

E. C. Ludwig is cutting some fine gladioli at his farm at Mars, Pa.

Vacations are now the order of the day.

EXTRA SUPPLY FOLLOWS HOLIDAY.

There has been an easier tone to the market the past week. The weather has been warmer, which has increased the out-put, then the holiday cut out one day's business which brought in extra stocks for Friday and Saturday. Flowers prominent in the market now are roses—Russell, Francis Scott Key, Mrs. Shawyer, Maryland, Prima Donna, White Killarney, single and double Hadley, and Ward. Qualities are better than ever before seen in this market for the season. Carnations are going off in size and color, but the best bring $3 and even $4 which for the quantity sold, is almost a record for the season. Last year at this time, the market was so full that street men were getting all they could handle for 5 and 10 cents per bunch. Hydrangea arborescens is selling well at three cents per head, while last season it could scarcely be moved at any price. Easter lilies are a leading stock; $12 per hundred, and the tendency upward, should make them a good crop. Sweet peas are in fair supply, but getting short in the stems and going off crop. A burst of hot weather would settle them. There was a good outside crop this season. Candytufts, feverfew, gaillardias, and Shasta daisies are in good supply and all selling. The larkspur from young plants is now coming in, and is quickly grabbed up. Cattleya Mossiae and gigas at 75 cents to $1.00 each and Harrisoni at 50 cents find such ready buyers that there is hope that in the main the business will pull through.

A LITTLE OPTIMISM.

At this season of the year, when business is at its lowest ebb, men who wait for things to turn up, complain of the hard times and how business is not like it used to be. Perhaps later that day or the next they are to be seen in the wholesale district, hustling about getting stock together for funeral orders and having all they can do to get through in time. Keep out of the shadows and in the sunshine of business by being on the job all the time, with a tidy shop ready for everything that comes along. The despondent, what's the use? attitude kills ambition, without which life is a mere existence. The troubles of the men who are constantly complaining lies within themselves, the war has nothing to do with it. Funeral work, which is the mainstay of the cut flower business, is just as good now, and some dealers declare better than ever before. So brace up and keep the store attractive. There are many patriotic demands which call for a lot of money, but most of it will soon come back loaded with interest. People must not be allowed to get out of the habit of buying and using flowers. There are a great many other lines who will try to supplant the florist, if we give them half a chance. So cheer up everybody and keep a hammering.

WITH THE WHOLESALE.

Service and quality are the watchwords of Edward Reid's Ranstead street establishment. His Victoria, Prima Donna and Russell roses certainly have the quality, while the sage

Two car loads of corrugated boxes were added to Leo Niessen Co.'s stock last week. This in addition to that on hand, gives them a good supply for the coming season. Snapdragons, gladioli, Easter lilies and a good line of roses were the features of the cut flower stock.

Carl Corts is much pleased with the new quarters of the Jos Heacock Co. at No. 9 Mole street, which was occupied on July 1. The quality of the roses from the Roelfs nurseries is excellent for the season.

Eugene Bernheimer spent Saturday and Sunday on a fishing trip to Beach Haven. He returned with a good string. Benny Gibbs reports a good summer business.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange reports business keeping up very well. Shawyer, Sunburst and Hadley are leaders in the rose stock.

DEMAND CONTINUES LIGHT.

Though the past week opened with a gloomy outlook, there were some things to be thankful for as the days wore on. The storm of July 1 cleared the air and beautiful weather followed and continued for the remainder of the week. There was not much business, but we had a really and truly glorious Fourth; not a Fourth of the old style when toy pistols and fire crackers of the "Chinee," pin-wheel and giant varieties made the city a bedlam, brought on lockjaw and other ills, and overworked the physicians and surgeons. The increased railroad fare did not prevent great crowds from leaving the city, July 3 and 4, but many were left. We may be excused for passing lightly over the business of the week. It usually takes a great city a day or two to get ready for the Fourth and another day or two to rest and recuperate, but we must affirm and reaffirm that it was a safe, sane and sober Fourth. The supply of stock has increased and prices are necessarily lower. Quantities of carnations continue to arrive, but most of them are small and poor, which is not surprising, but it is worthy of note that they are here at all. In both American Beauty and tea roses, there has been an ample supply to cover the light demand. Orchids are not plentiful and there is little change in prices. An excellent quality of lilies is on the market, but prices are weaker. Sweet peas are plentiful and many are good. Zinnias, larkspurs, a few asters and various other stocks are features.

July 8.—A good supply of stock is on the market this morning, but buying is light. The greatest increase is in gladioli which are now plentiful and much cheaper. The city is planning a great public funeral for Major John Purroy Mitchell, ex-mayor, who was killed at the aviation field near Lake Charles, La., July 6. The date for the funeral has been fixed for Thursday, July 11, at 10 a. m. Doubtless many fine designs will be seen.

NOTES.

As the shortage of labor affects the florist as well as other trades, a few remarks on that subject may be in order. It is quite possible for a man or a body of men to be conscientious and yet be wrong. In fact, some of the gravest mistakes recorded in history have been made by such men. It is said that there is a shortage of labor, but the wheels of industry continue to go around; ships are being launched, the crops, where ripe, are being harvested. Even in the florists' comparatively small world, there are many busy hands. If ever there was a time for straight thinking and doing, it is now. We are in the greatest war that ever ravaged the earth, and we are going to win it—that must be the leading idea. In the meantime, the people who have on hand a stock of fads, fancies or "isms", should put them in cold storage, or moth balls, till a more convenient season.

Joseph A. Manda and wife, who are well known in horticultural circles, have recently heard from their son, William J. Manda, who enlisted in the Marine Corps two years ago. He has been wounded, and is now in a hospital in France. He has been in France eight months. Both their sons went into the service by enlistment. Edward A. Manda, who we understand is also in France, was trained at Camp McClellan, Ala., in the motorcycle squad.

It has been so cool that we had hoped there would be no "silly season" this summer, but it was bound to come. So many people are writing to the newspapers—and some to trade papers—"viewing with alarm" this or that condition, or worrying over things that have never happened and are unlikely to happen, that it would appear that the "season" has set in early.

The Subway Florist, 283 Lenox avenue, has recently been busy with wedding and funeral work. This store has a staff of clever designers and decorators; also another fine store in Newark, N. J.

John S. Nicholas has sold the fixtures of his retail store at 37 East 42d street, and consolidated his business in his other store, which is in the Grand Central Terminal.

Joseph J. Bechamps, of Flushing, has a fine crop of asters, which he is shipping to Paul Meconi, 55 West 26th street.

Bruno Pladek, of Elmhurst, is bringing to the Cut Flower Exchange a good quality of the white bouvardia.

The best lily of the valley on the market is at George C. Siebrecht's, 109 West 28th street.

JULY BUSINESS OPENS STRONG.

The usual midsummer dullness is not manifested in the way July business has opened up. Instead of stock being overabundant, there are orders that go unfilled, and at the same time retailers are doing a greater business than ever for the season. With the short market now prevailing the retailers can no longer be choosers and with the amalgamation of the express companies, out-of-town stock can no longer be depended upon, due to delays. Easter lilies counted upon to fill orders have been known to reach this city four days late, the stock naturally showing the effects of being held up 72 hours somewhere.

CLUB MEETING.

At the July meeting of the florists' club J. A. Cohn, of the Climax Box Co., in discussing business conditions in cities he had recently visited, said that while in the middle west florists are inclined to believe that flowers will advance in price, they have felt no loss in business, but are curtailing expenses as much as possible, as business in general was undergoing a change and that the trade was quite optimistic. In speaking of trade conditions in Detroit, Mich., he said that people are buying flowers who never bought them before. Many of these are employed in mills and factories, and now have money to spend and are purchasing the things they formerly craved but were unable to buy on account of lack of money. He also told a number of interesting incidents showing how Canadian florists are successfully weathering the storm.

E. P. Rodman, George C. Shaffer and George E. Anderson were named as a committee to visit Camp Meigs, in view of the landscape work done there. The grounds are attracting much attention and the arrangement is very meritorious. Otto Bauer has been made chairman of the club's membership committee. Associated with him are George E. Anderson and R. L. Jenkins. The committee to assist the Red Cross to secure flowers for hospitals in this city and vicinity consists of Messrs. Linz, Bauer, Rodman, Anderson and McCabe.

NOTE.

Quite a number of men connected with the florist trade in this city have, during the past few weeks, enrolled in one or the other branches of the armed service of the United States. Louis Palmer, who was with Gude Bros. Co., is taking the electrical course at Camp Bliss, and Francis J.

Canadian Horticultural Society

The twenty-first annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association will be held at the Normal school, Ottawa, Ont., August 13-16, and the programme now practically complete as to both business and social features augurs well for a most interesting and enjoyable meeting.

The first session of the convention will be called to order at 2 p. m. on the opening day by E. J. Mepstead, followed by an address of welcome by the mayor of the city and in turn by the address of E. J. Hayward, president of the association. H. J. Eddy, secretary-treasurer, will present his report and appointments will be made of judges for the trade exhibits and the committee on president's address. A notice of a proposed amendment to the constitution will be presented by C. A. Smith and the session will close with a paper on "Easter Lilies" by Wm C. Hall of Montreal. The evening session will be featured by two important papers by James McKenna, of Montreal, the subjects being "The Extension of Credit," and "Plants for Christmas to Replace Imported Stock."

The second day's proceedings will include papers by Geo. M. Geraghty, Toronto, Joseph Bennett, Lachine, Chas. Craig, Ottawa, and Robt. Burrows, St. Anne de Bellevue. The principal business of the day will be election of officers and selection of the 1919 meeting place. Thursday and Friday will be devoted entirely to social features, the annual banquet being scheduled for Thursday evening at Chateau Laurier.

The question box will be an important feature of the convention and those having questions for discussion should send them as early as possible in order that it may be arranged to have them answered by competent authorities. Further information regarding the convention may be had by addressing the secretary, H. J. Eddy, 4435 Westmount street, Quebec.

LIBERAL SUPPLY BUT DEMAND IS WEAK.

Trade during the past week has been quiet. While floral work has kept up fairly well, cut flowers had a slow sale. The supply continues plentiful and prices are holding up well. Easter lilies are coming into this market and the quality is fine. Carnations are doing fairly well, and the same is true of roses. Several growers are making unusually heavy cuts daily and the demand for the latter is good. Outdoor sweet peas are arriving and meet with a good demand. Some of the finest seen in years have made their appearance. While the aster season will soon be here, the crops at present seem to be standing still. Gladioli are very good but this market boasts of very few of them. Large shipments of roses are now being received from Boston—more than can be disposed of.

NOTES.

J Baraducci, the Italian florist on Atwells avenue, received a very threatening letter this week, as the result of having originated a float for the Fourth of July parade, depicting the Kaiser's funeral. The matter is in the hands of the federal authorities who are making a thorough investigation.

J. G. Jensen, of the Park Greenhouses, has devoted most of his establishment to vegetable plants and outdoor flowers.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, in addition to cutting excellent lilies is supplying the trade with coal.

Massachusetts Agricultural College

Of course every business is hard hit by the war, but the inroads in the colleges are probably worse than anywhere else because in these institutions are so many young men suitable for various kinds of military service and other government work. Even the members of the teaching and experimental staff are made up largely of young men, a large number of whom have had military training. These facts are illustrated by the changes made during the year in the horticultural staff at Massachusetts Agricultural College. There are now eight members enlisted and under orders. Professor F. A. Waugh, head of the division, is a captain in the sanitary corps, division of physical reconstruction; Professor F. A. C. Smith, of the department of landscape gardening, is a lieutenant in the division of personnel stationed in Florida; Professor A. G. Hecht, head of the department of floriculture, is in an officers' training camp at Camp Sherman, Ohio; C. E. Wildon, assistant in floriculture, is in a training camp in Virginia; R. A. Van Meter, of the pomology department, is at Camp Devens, Mass.; E. G. Wood, of the pomology department, enlisted early, and is in France; W. C. Pauley, of the landscape gardening department, is in an officers' training camp in Ohio; Gilbert Watts, foreman in market gardening, has enlisted in the navy and expects to be called to the colors this month. Besides these, Professor W. D. Clark, head of the department of forestry, has been for several months in Boston, employed with the state fuel administration, and Professor A. D. Kilham has also been in Boston with the food administration. Other members of the staff, though not detached, are occupied constantly in war service, especially in food production and conservation. Professor W. W. Chenoweth, of the department of horticultural manufactures, in particular, is carrying on an important work throughout the state in the canning and drying of fruits and vegetables.

Concrete Drain Tile Durability

The Michigan Agricultural College experiment station, East Lansing, has issued Special Bulletin No. 82, giving the results of experiments conducted on concrete drain tile, showing that the problem of preparing a practically impervious tile resolves itself into the preparation of a practically impervious tile wall, to do which, beside good material and workmanship, it is important to have proper grading of the aggregate and the reduction of the surface tension of the hydrating water. An investigation of the disintegrated parts of concrete drain tile showed that nearly all of the calcium hydrate, together with a large part of the fine material, had been removed and that every solution passing through the tile had a solvent action on some of the essential constituents. When tile are exposed to the elements in such a way that no solution is forced through their walls, there is probably little or no disintegration.

His Mite.

"It is my belief, and I venture to assert it," declared the lecturer, raising his voice, "there isn't a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our vast forests."

A rather timid-looking man quietly arose in the rear of the hall and said: "I've shot woodpeckers."—Life.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

THE S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam sailed from an eastern port for Holland about July 1.

COUNTER trade with seedsmen is reported holding as well as usual during this period.

THE pure seed law of Idaho has been issued in pamphlet form, and is obtainable of J. S. Jones, Moscow, Idaho.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade July 10 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.50 per 100 pounds.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—At a convention of feedmen in this city, H. A. Abbott, of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, was elected president of the association.

DALLAS, TEX.—Robt. Nicholson is planning to open a retail store shortly, catering to the city trade. Mr. Nicholson is now looking up prices in the retail lines.

J. S. HYDE, of Pattonsburg, Mo., according to report, was arrested by the police at La Crosse, Wis., July 3, for passing a check for $50 on the Stoddard hotel of the latter place.

CANADA has 16,000,000 acres planted to wheat. On the basis of a five year average yield of 22.1 bushels an acre this year, would give a crop of 345,000,000 bushels against 251,000,000 last year.

CAMBRIDGE, N. Y.—J. L. Hunt, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., who had a sudden attack of illness at Chicago during the seed trade convention, reached home safely, June 24, and is recovering slowly.

ONION SETS.—Harvesting of Bermudas is progressing in the Chicago district July 10 and others will be ready in about two weeks. Dry weather continues to the detriment of the crop and smut damage increases daily.

TOLEDO, O.—December clover gained five cents July 8, closing at $12.85. Cash timothy was five cents higher, at the following prices: Cash, $4.00; September, $4.65; October, $4.30; December, $4.20; March, $4.55; April, $4.40.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—The recent weather has been ideal for sugar beet crops. The first contingent of 1,200 boys have enlisted and have left to work in the beet fields in the northern part of the state during the summer months.

SOME jokesmith, the trade reporter who sells enormous lots of Dutch bulbs in Scandinavia, a vain attempt to camouflage the Dutch bulb trust in an unjustifiable 50 per cent advance over last year's prices to their only customer, America.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—C. C. Morse & Co. say that 1918 spring business shows an increase, both as to volume and number of orders, compared with last year. Owing to greatly increased expenses, the actual profits, however, will figure less than a year ago.

American Seed Trade Association.

POSTAL LAWS COMMITTEE REPORT.

During this fiscal year, there have occurred several pieces of legislation that in a way affect the postal facilities of all seedsmen. Within less than a month after the convention held in Detroit, last year, I discovered a clause on page 70 of the war revenue bill, then known as House Resolution 4280. The clause read as follows:

Parcel Post Packages

Upon every parcel or package transported from one point in the United States to another by parcel post, a tax of one cent for each 25 cents or fractional part thereof charged for such transportation shall be paid by the consignor. No such parcel or package shall be transported until a stamp representing this tax shall have been affixed.

This clause was construed or ruled upon by the post office as applicable to catalogues. We immediately got in touch with Mr. Rosenbaum of the National Cloak & Suit Company, of New York, and as he was going to Washington on other legislation, he investigated this and found that the post office department really considered this tax applicable to catalogues.

We immediately took this up with the other members of the committee, and wrote to every individual and to every business that was in any way affected by this ruling. This resulted in a great deal of work being done by these various organizations, and I am happy to say that we had the most efficient cooperation from the paper manufacturers and the International Association of Manufacturing Photo-Engravers. They were very industrious upon the work, President E. C. Miller taking a great personal interest in the fight. This resulted finally in a ruling making this tax applicable to parcel post packages and exempting catalogues.

Through correspondence with Hon. Boies Penrose and others of our representatives in Congress and in the Senate, we were advised under date of August 6, that the finance committee of the Senate had amended the proposed tax to exempt all catalogues. The trade papers were advised and all of them published this information.

In the course of the next day I had word from Mr. Rosenbaum, who was then in Washington, that this was not the case. Catalogues up to four ounces only were exempt. We immediately got on the job again, with the result that finally the ruling was made to apply to all catalogues. With all the legislation that was made for other businesses your committee considers that we have been particularly fortunate in most every respect and the committee wishes to take this opportunity in expressing their thanks to the trade papers for their splendid cooperation.

The adjustment of weights, and their application to the various zones is familiar to all of you, and it is only necessary to mention this as one of the rulings by the post office department that was of considerable interest this year. Touching on that point, I am going to read a letter from Hon. J. C. Koons, First Assistant Postmaster General, who, by the way, is very friendly to us, and in whom we have found the greatest cooperation and the greatest appreciation of the needs of the seedsmen. Mr. Koons has been of very considerable assistance to us on numerous occasions, and we are considerably indebted to him for his appreciation of our requirements.

At this time there is no legislation in sight that has any bearing upon the postal facilities of the association.

Washington Rulings and Legislation.

Attention of importers of merchandise from Canada and Newfoundland is invited to the change in practice announced by the War Trade Board, which states that the general import license covering the importation of commodities from those countries has been revoked as to the shipment of articles on the list of restricted imports on and after July 20, when shipments of articles, the importation of which from other countries has been restricted, will require individual import licenses when brought into the United States from Canada or Newfoundland. The reason given is that the old policy opened the door to possible evasions of the General Restricted Import Regulations through shipments by sea to Canada, whence restricted commodities could be sent by rail into the United States.

The seed stocks committee of the United States department of agriculture has taken up with the War Trade Board and the United States Shipping Board the steps necessary to obtain government assistance promptly to enable it to inform seedsmen of the best methods to pursue in importing seeds. The committee is to advise the War Trade Board as to the importance of seeds proposed to be brought into the United States in cases of embargoes by foreign countries. An import license is now required for the importation of seeds. Appropriate blanks for this purpose are obtainable from the Bureau of Imports, War Trade Board, Washington, or at the branch offices of the War Trade Board located in various cities.

There seems to be considerable misunderstanding among dealers as to the effect of the president's recent proclamation establishing a licensing system for the farm equipment trade. The department of agriculture announces that if the business is retail exclusively, and the gross annual sales (including all lines of merchandise as well as farm equipment) does not exceed $100,000, a federal license is not required. Where the sales of a retailer exceed $100,000, he should make application for a license to the department of agriculture or the license division of the United States food administration, in Washington, if he desires to continue the sale of farm implements.

Congressman Parker, of New Jersey, has introduced a bill into the House of Representatives under which the trade in all its branches would be subjected to a new tax of three per cent of the amount spent by each member for advertising or advertising space. This same bill proposes a 10 per cent increase in the rates of duty now provided by law and a 10 per cent levy on all articles now on the free list, covering all articles imported into the United States. A three per cent tax is recommended for assessment upon all manufacturers and producers based on the amount for which they may sell their products. Under this section of the bill, manufacturers and producers would be compelled to make monthly returns under oath, in duplicate, and pay the taxes imposed on their merchandise to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which is located the principal place of business. California Seed Crops.

According to advices from prominent growers, dated June 29, all crops received a setback during the two weeks previous, lettuce showing very poor condition, while prospects for radishes point to but 25 per cent of a crop. The hot wave which swept the Sacramento valley, June 25-29, caused at least 25 per cent damage to onion, possibly more. Beet and carrot still look fair, and while the average yield will be large, neither will produce anything near a full crop. Spinach is estimated at about 60 per cent.

Sweet peas are suffering severely from aphids, some crops being all cut Onion Set Conditions.

The condition of onion sets in the Chicago district has not improved in the last month according to reports received. No extended survey of the condition of the crop at this time has been undertaken, however. Smut and maggot have developed to quite an extent and many complaints have been received, especially from the "south side." Many growers think that these conditions have materially reduced the outlook for a good crop of sets. Generally favorable weather conditions have prevailed and there are few reports of abandoned acreages. If favorable weather conditions prevail until the crop is harvested, the yield may yet turn out satisfactorily, though growers at present do not view the situation very hopefully. Prices at present are in a very unsettled condition and there is a considerable variation in selling prices among important growers.

At Louisville, Ky., it was thought from previous reports that the hot weather prevailing during the week, June 9-15, had injured the onion sets to a considerable extent. However, the crop has been benefited greatly by recent rains and an average crop of good quality small sets may be produced.—Government Seed Reporter, July 6, 1918.

Vick's Sons in New Quarters.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., have moved to new and commodious quarters at 91-97 St. Paul street, that city, the building formerly occupied by them having been commandeered by the navy department for the manufacture of binoculars. The firm's general business is being transacted as smoothly as can be expected, with the exception of the clerical department, whose work has been interrupted by the removal and rearrangement of the offices, and delays in getting out statements, etc., they advise, have been due to this reason.

The business of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., for the year, shows a total of 218,063 sales, amounting to $1,115,962, as compared with 204,773 orders and a total of $631,206 in 1917. The nursery department is credited with sales amounting to more than $70,000. Other interesting features of the report are that during the busy season 418 persons were employed, the payroll often going over $6,000 in a single week, and the amount paid for postage during the year, which amounted to $78,827.

New Early-Flowering or Winter-Blooming GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye. 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.

15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye. 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.

Drying Fruits and Vegetables.

Under the title, "Farm and Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables," the United States department of agriculture has issued Farmers' Bulletin 984, by Joseph S. Caldwell, plant physiologist, office of horticultural and pomological investigations. The bulletin, which contains 62 pages with numerous illustrations, calls attention to the imperative necessity of nationwide conservation of those portions of food crops which have heretofore been permitted to go to waste, a considerable portion of which is made up of perishable vegetables and fruits produced in home gardens.

Drying offers a simple, convenient and economical method of preserving food materials, and permits the carrying over of the surplus into periods in which the fresh product is expensive or unobtainable, the success in drying depending on the observance of a few fundamental principles and the quality of the product, upon the care employed in the selection of the raw materials, upon proper preparation for drying, and the careful control of temperatures employed, rather than upon the type of evaporating apparatus used.

For preserving perishable foodstuffs, drying has a very great advantage over preserving, due to the fact that the product has a weight of only one-fourth to one-ninth of the fresh material, that there is a very considerable reduction in bulk, due to both actual shrinkage, and to the fact that all portions not actually food are removed, and in as much as dry material may be stored almost indefinitely without danger of deterioration and without the use of expensive containers. It must be understood, however, that evaporation is not applicable to all fruits and vegetables.

Most failures in drying are due not so much to imperfections in the equipment used as to failure of the operator to understand a few principles that must be kept in mind if the work is to be successful. Where climatic conditions make it possible, sun drying is the least expensive method of preserving foodstuffs, but success in this demands that a rainless season of bright sunshine and high temperature coincide with the period at which the crops to be dried are maturing. Ideal conditions for sun drying all fruits, both early and late, are found in the interior districts of California, where the industry has assumed large proportions; also throughout the southwest. As ordinarily conducted, sun drying in the open has the disadvantage that the drying material is exposed for a considerable length of time to visits of insects and dust borne by air currents, although the former may be excluded by providing trays with covers of mosquito netting, tacked tightly over the top.

The use of artificial heat has the advantage that the work is made independent of weather conditions, and that it is possible to dry a considerable number of foodstuffs that cannot be dried in the sun; for example, winter varieties of apples, prunes and such vegetables as potatoes and carrots. It has the disadvantage that it requires close supervision in order that overheating and subsequent injury to the materials be avoided, but if the work is properly done the products will retain their natural appearance and flavor better than is possible to secure in sun drying.

For the individual family, the investment represented by the evaporator need not be a burden; anyone who can use ordinary tools can construct in spare time, and with a trifling outlay for material, any one of the cookstove dryers described in the bulletin, while the heat of the stove or range employed for cooking can be utilized for operating the drier. If properly constructed, this homemade equipment is quite as efficient as the similar small driers sold on the market at several times the cost.

The equipment needed for the preparation of the material for drying depends primarily upon the quantity and character of the various products and the conditions under which the work is done. Where this is limited to caring for the surplus from a small home garden or a few fruit trees, and the quantity of one product is only a few bushels, the purchase of special machines is neither necessary nor advisable, as the kitchen equipment will contain everything necessary.

The bulletin, which may be obtained free from the Division of Publications, United States department of agriculture, covers in detail the necessary equipment for handling foodstuffs in both small and large quantities, with chapters devoted to drying in the open air without artificial heat, including the use of solar dryers with an inclined glass top, drying with an electric fan, drying with artificial heat by means of cookstove driers, community drying plants, and the preparation and drying of fruit products, including apples, pears, peaches, apricots, cherries, prunes, figs, berries, etc.; also like information as regards the handling of vegetables.

Vegetable and Fruit Markets.

According to reports of the United States bureau of markets, the movement of carlots in general was about equal to the volume of previous weeks. Decreases in cabbage, onions and in various less important lines were offset by heavy shipments of apples, peaches and watermelons. The volume of early potatoes continued moderate, Virginia and North Carolina continuing as the leading shipping sections. Following the rise of the preceding week prices weakened during the period July 2-8, and continued to decline. North Carolina Cobblers lost 25 cents, ranging $4.25-$4.75 per barrel, f. o. b. shipping points. Virginia Cobblers declined to $3.75, but recovered to $4.25-$4.50, f. o. b. Norfolk. Bliss Triumphs advanced moderately in Oklahoma and declined 25 cents in Arkansas. The movement of onions was rather light. California yellow stock is prominent in the distributing markets, selling at $2.50-$3.50 per 100 pounds. Texas yellows are in light supply and of variable quality, prices ranging generally from $1.75-$2.25 per crate for No. 1. New Jersey stock is appearing more freely, ranging from $1.75-$2.25 per hamper. Virginia stock sold at $1.50-$1.85 and Kentucky onions ruled $2.80 per 100 pounds at Louisville and $2.50-$3.50 in consuming markets. Tomatoes continued rather weak. In consuming markets, Texas and Tennessee 4's followed a narrow range at $1.25, with a generally good demand. Cucumbers continue to move in heavy volume.

The Georgia watermelon movement increased sharply. Larger sizes at shipping points ranged fairly steady at $1.75-$2.50 per car. Prices at Philadelphia and Cincinnati ranged $300-$350, while at New York the best cars reached $550. At Hempstead, Tex., the range was $200-$260 per car. Cantaloupe prices declined 25 cents in consuming markets, with a general range of $3.00-$3.75 for California Green Meat 45's, with shipping movements declining sharply. Shipments of Georgia peaches continue to increase. In northern consuming markets choice stock of the leading varieties was fairly steady at $2.00-$2.50.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

It is understood the Department of Agriculture is giving the nursery stock embargo serious consideration.

BULLETIN No. 212, entitled "Plums and Cherries," has been issued by Purdue University agricultural experiment station, Lafayette, Ind., treating of these two fruits in that state.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The common council has passed an ordinance prescribing a penalty of $10 to $25 for injuring shrubbery along city streets. It is also ordered that all barberry shall be eradicated within one month.

Lilac Novelties.

Three new lilacs in Highland Park, Rochester, N. Y., have been named as follows: General Pershing, semi-double, large clusters, porcelain lavender in color; General Sheridan, semi-double, white, erect clusters; General Haig, large clusters, single, pearly mauve.

Apple Crop Conditions.

The commercial apple crop normally going on the market from New York state is about three times that of Virginia, six times that of Pennsylvania and Ohio, four times that of Michigan and Missouri, five times that of New England, from three to four times that of Illinois, and approximately equal to the combined production of all the western box-producing states. The condition for the United States on June 1 is indicated as about average. A large boxed apple crop is shown by conditions prevailing in the west on that date.

Plant Importation Restriction.

The New York Sun, in a recent issue, calling attention to the fact that if the importation of plants is permanently prohibited by law, it will greatly retard the development of horticulture in America, says in part:

"The bill which is now being considered is generally credited by nurserymen and florists to a group of entomologists who have for years endeavored to have all foreign bulbs and plants excluded from this country. Naturally the federal and state agricultural departments 'pull together' and thus form a large and influential organization that may be expected to 'steer' bills favorable to their ideas, regardless of the effect on the business of florists, seedsmen and nurserymen. Those in the trade must form an equally strong organization or calmly take what is coming to them.

"Of course, if the United States prohibits the importation of seeds and plants, other countries will prohibit the importation of seeds and plants from the United States. Large quantities of American seeds are now exported annually, not the least of which is sweet peas, and this trade has been growing constantly for years. Home consumption will not make up for the loss of foreign trade."

American Association of Nurserymen.

PUBLICITY AND MARKET DEVELOPMENT.

The committee on publicity made a brief report of the excellent work accomplished during the year, following its organization in New York, December 5, 1917, and another meeting in the same city, December 20, it being the unanimous opinion of the committee consisting of E. G. Greening, F. L. Atkins, Robert Pyle, H. Hicks and J. Horace McFarland, and E. St. Elmo Lewis and O. P. Beckley, invited guests, that a national publicity campaign, if properly conducted, would be of immeasurable value in placing nursery products before the buying public, and it was agreed to ask members of the American Association of Nurserymen to contribute the sum of $50,000 per annum for five years and a definite plan of procedure was outlined which would include propaganda booklets to be distributed through nurserymen, chambers of commerce, high schools, community meetings, etc., illustrated lectures, well directed newspaper and magazine articles, and finally leading up to paid magazine and newspaper space. At the meeting December 20, every form and variety of publicity was discussed and enthusiasm grew to the point where definite subscriptions began, the outcome being the appointment of the market development committee consisting of F. L. Atkins, John Watson, Thomas Welsh, Robert Pyle and J. Edward Moon, who presented the recommendations of the publicity committee to the Ornamental Growers' Association at a meeting of that organization in January. The booklet, "Home Grounds," authorized by the 1917 convention, was unanimously endorsed by the committee and a large number are now in circulation and cooperation in giving the booklet the widest circulation as the entering wedge in bringing the association, as a co-operative body, before the public was urged. A second propaganda book, "Fruits for the Home Grounds," has been requested by the committee, and this publication is now in process of development.

In the discussion which followed, the report of the publicity committee, J. Edward Moon called attention to the great possibilities for benefit in the way of lectures, illustrated or not, establishing a circuit and reaching every grange, farmers' club, garden society and every agricultural and horticultural organization of any kind possible, also the advantage of getting news articles telling about fruit trees and how to grow them, into the press. J. R. Mayhew said he believed it was the duty of the committee to not lose sight of the necessity of keeping the home fires burning, to create better markets, bigger markets and more markets, and that the time was ripe to go ahead with the work. O. Joe Howard told of the results that had been accomplished by publicity in the Southern Nurserymen's Association, excellent returns to the trade in general coming from illustrated lectures sent out by the landscape department of his firm. W. H. Wyman said that all other businesses were creating a demand for their wares and it was possible for the nurserymen to do the same thing, it only being a question of whether the arrangement is entered into co-operatively in a large way commensurate with ability, and added he was willing to increase his subscription to $1,000 if the fund could be made $100,000 for the first year. In a standing vote as to how many present were in sympathy with the movement, the result was unanimously in its favor. Orlando Harrison urged immediate action, saying postponements had driven the nurserymen to a point where it was necessary to do something. John Watson said he believed the plan was the finest thing the nurserymen of America had yet attempted and expressed himself as being in favor of an assessment falling equally upon all, and while it might be two, three, four or five years before returns were apparent, there was not another way in which $50,000 or $100,000 could be spent that would bring better results. He added that now was the accepted time and he wanted to see $50,000 raised in the meeting. M. R. Cashman called attention to the fact that there was no business on the face of the earth so essential as the nursery business and that the time was approaching when the government must pay more attention to fruit growing, as population was increasing, and fruit crops have been diminishing, and with increased prices of meats and cereals a fruit famine will face the country.

ARBORETUM COMMITTEE REPORT.

Following is the report rendered by the above committee at the Chicago convention, June 26-28, 1918:

J. H. McFarland, Henry Hicks and J. Edward Moon, of this committee, held a meeting in New York in December, 1917. Mr. Sherman had previously resigned from the committee, and J. B. Pilkington, of Portland, Ore., was not in attendance. The committee discussed the subject of its appointment at length. It was apprised of the fact that our federal government, through the comprehensive plans commission for Washington, D. C., had already in view the location of an arboretum in the District of Columbia. It is the intention that this arboretum shall be much more comprehensive and extensive than is the present botanical garden located adjacent to the capitol building. The advantages of a well managed and ample arboretum at Washington, to which the nursery interests of America might look for tests of plants, scions, or seeds, for propagation, and other help is, of course, apparent to all of us. The inspiration to purchase trees and shrubs, which such an arboretum would give, would also be felt by nurserymen. The chairman of the committee has, since the meeting in New York, corresponded with officials in Washington especially interested in this movement, and has learned that it is felt by them to be an inopportune time to urge the furtherance of these arboretum plans. Owing to the war, improvements like these have been held in abeyance.

Your committee, therefore, recommends that it probably would be well for this association to keep a committee on arboreta under appointment, and when the war is over there undoubtedly will be great good that such a committee can do by co-operating with federal officials in the furtherance of the plans thus far advanced.

J. EDWARD MOON, Chairman.

NECROLOGY.

Profound sorrow was expressed at the report of the death of Frank N. Meyer, explorer of the United States department of agriculture, whose body was found in the Yangtse Kiang river in China in June. He was in that country exploring and collecting new horticultural material to add to the already rich tree, shrub and seed collections he had made in the last 10 years in China, Turkestan, Siberia, Korea and Japan. Memorial services were also held in honor of J. Van Lindley, Pomona, N. C., one of the oldest and best known members of the association; Wick Hathaway, Madison, Wis., and Robert J. Pyle, West Grove, Pa.

Syringa Yunnanensis.

This lilac from southwestern China is now in flower. It has long-pointed, glabrous leaves, dull green above and pale below, and large, rather open clusters of small creamy white flowers faintly tinged with rose color, with an unusual and delicate perfume which greatly adds to the attraction of the plant. S. yunnanensis is one of the plants introduced by George Forrest through Bee's, Ltd., of Liverpool, Eng., and has now been growing in the arboretum for several years. Although it first flowered here in 1913, it has not shown its real character as a flowering plant until this season. S. yunnanensis can be seen on the lower side of the path which follows the top of the bank occupied by the lilac collection.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, June 15, 1916.

McHutchison & Co., New York.

Finding their foreign importations practically cut off by war conditions, the enterprising firm of McHutchison & Co., has planned to hereafter deal extensively in home products. Mention has perviously been made in these columns of their agency for the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, of California. Recently they received from other sources in Southern California, a car load of fine palms of the variety Phoenix canariensis, and they are also receiving kentias and other varieties. From Louisiana, they are receiving fine stock of Ficus elastica and aspidistras. C. B. Knickman, of this firm, is now making a western trip.

National Forest Purchase.

The national forest reservation commission has approved the purchase of 54,672 acres of land for national forests in the White Mountains, Southern Appalachians and Arkansas. The largest tract is 31,667 acres in Polk county, Tenn. The price approved was $6 per acre.

European Horticulture.

New Helianthus, cucumerifolius hybr., Excelsior—Plants flowering with wonderful abundance; flowers varied in color, gaillardia-like, more or less broadly marked in the center with rich reds and garnets and circled with yellow, from sulphur to old-gold or bronzy shades. The plants vary greatly, some giving flowers with very broad crowns of red and a narrow band of yellow, some having the yellow circle predominant, and a few plants give unicolored flowers of most unexpected shades—purplish rose, Bordeaux red, crushed strawberry, copper, pale or golden yellow. The form of the flowers also varies, the ligules being sometimes broad and flat, sometimes narrow and sometimes incurved. The plants grow from four to five feet high, and are as easy of culture as H. cucumerifolius.—Le Jardin.

TECOMA BRYCEI.—This is a superb bignonia, discovered in Mashonaland, and already well distributed in the Canary Islands and the Mediterranean shore. It thrives in California, growing rapidly, covering walls and bushes with thick masses of brilliant green foliage. The leaves are four to five inches long, pinnate, with nine folioles, toothed and pointed, and glabrous. A plant will bear a succession through the winter of as many as a hundred panicles of three carmine pink, delicately fragrant, bell-shaped flowers. The plant grows without particular care and adapts itself to greenhouse culture.—Revue Horticole.

Waterproof Corn.

Prof. Hiram Floole, who is conducting valuable experiments along the line of producing a waterproof corn operating upon the theory of grafting Ohio field corn upon rubber plants.

Gardening Fad.

Miss Fad: Have you decided to do your bit?

Miss Fit: I'm going in for farming. I think it will be perfectly grand just to vegetate.—The Lamb.

Wild Food.

What Shall the Harvest Be?
News item: England is agitating the use of the empire's wild food.
We suggest: Tiger lilies, wild horse radish, dandelions, wild oats.

Bailey's

New Standard

Cyclopedia

Of Horticulture

Six Splendid Volumes

This work is Prof. L. H. Bailey's latest and greatest achievement and will undoubtedly stand as a monument to him. This is not a revision of the old Cyclopedia but a brand new work containing features not dreamed of at the time of publication of the original cyclopedia which was a pioneer work. The old cyclopedia of Horticulture, it will be remembered, was a cyclopedia in fact as well as in name, whereas the new Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture is a gardener's manual as well as a cyclopedia and contains features that make it equally adapted to the amateur and to the professional, to the man without education or the man with high literary tastes.
